CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Clanton, Ala., Dec. 28, 1903

Editor Banner—Such expressions as "I am sorry that Judge Adams has declined to run again," "Judge Adams has made us a good judge" and "I am fearful that we can't find a man to equal Judge Adams to succeed him" are to be heard from every quarter, and when we come to think of it, it does not seem strange that such expressions should be current, because Judge Adams has made an ideal officer. He is a man of conviction, earnest, just and upright. No one questions his integrity, but all join in saying that he is a man of most wonderful executive ability. That he has filled the office with credit and saved the county hundreds of dollars by his forethought and acute judgment is beyond question.

He has been in politics for a long time, yet no one can dispute the fact that he has made a success of it. No doubt he is, as he has said in his letter, tired of the battle and the strife that is always brought about by an active political campaign. No doubt he feels that he needs rest, but can we do without him is a question. I do not wish to see him enter into an aggressive political campaign, such as I have seen him go through, yet I believe that we need him in the place he now fills and that he ought to be elected to succeed himself as Judge of Probate.

I do not see the common sense in turning him loose when we, considering everything, cannot find a man better fitted to fill the office than he. There may be better men for the place than Judge Adams, but I believe we could look over the field ever so closely and then fail to find them. Men of strong character, strong conviction, great executive ability and great experience are not to be found everywhere. It is quite true that we have a number of good men that would make good judges but they are not available, and if they were they are not as experienced in the work as Judge Adams is and it would take some time for them to acquire the experience that he now possesses. Such things should be considered in selecting our officers and especially so in the case of Probate Judge.

The Judge's office should not be a partisan one because the Probate Judge gets very close to the people in the work pertaining to his office, and he should not be forced into political strife with any of the people whom he is to serve. There is no political issue in Chilton county. No question to divide the people, as they have been divided in the past. We ought to be united and work together for the good of our county. The only question that should confront us in filling any of the offices of the county should be that of fitness and not of party. I have never had anything to do with politics and never expect to take a very active part, but I do want to see our people lay down their prejudice and come together and vote together for the best interests of our county. Let us forgive the injuries we have sustained at the hands of some of our fellowmen for we need forgiveness for things we have said and injuries we have inflicted on others. Let fitness be the paramount question in selecting our next county officers. Let us be actuated by nothing but the desire to subserve the best interests of our county. I hope and believe that in so doing both Democrats and Populites will unite and select Judge Adams as our next Probate Judge and elect him without forcing him into another political struggle.

Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by Clanton Drug co., Hopkins Drug co. Price 50 cents.

CLANTON, ALA.

German trade statistics already show the serious damage done to trade with Latin American countries by the action of the kaiser against Venezuela.

The high-speed tests that have been going on so long upon the electric line at Zossen, in Germany, must soon produce an effect upon general practice. When an ordinary car is driven at 130 miles an hour and a standard sleeping car at ninety-nine and one-half miles without damage to motors, rolling stock or tracks, people will begin to ask railroad companies everywhere why fifty miles an hour should l considered almost the limit for fast trains.

It would seem that all the gold that comes out of Northern Alaska is costing more than it is worth. All the gold brought from the Nome region to the States during 1902 is figured at $6,700,000, while $11,000,000 worth of goods went there for consumption and the 5,550 passengers on the steamers paid $2,000,000 more for themselves and freight. In other words, for the present at least Northern Alaska is consuming more than it produces.

From a rustic village—not yet deserted—comes a quaint tale of an eccentric hermit who shut himself up for twenty-five years in an upper room of his house, having cunningly circulated reports in the first place that he had gone far away, and late rumors that he had drawn his last breath in a distant region. Thereafter he stealthily avoided the gaze of his fellow men. Evidently he was as averse to mingling freely with the classes or the masses as was St. Simeon Stylites himself. It may be said, however, in extenuation of the isolation of the solitary St. Simeon on his column, that he did not avoid the gaze of humanity. Any one who cared to look at him perched on the top of his pillar could do so at any moment.

Professor Sanford Bell, a fellow in Clark University, declared recently, after a scientific investigation of the love question covering a period of fifteen years and embracing 1700 cases, that the love period extends from three years to old age, and that no one is safe from the fever during that time. Men reach their maturity in affairs of the heart at twenty-four, and women at twenty-two, he says, and adds that the masculine stages of love are from three to eight years, eight to fourteen, fourteen to twenty-six (maturity), twenty-six to old age, and extending through old age. For women in love he fixes the stages at three to eight, eight to twelve, twelve to twenty-two (maturity), twenty-three to old age and through old age.

The United States Government has adopted the policy of never placing the portrait of a man on a postage stamp or any of its paper currency unless the man is dead, comments the Los Angeles Times. It is a wise rule, based on the acknowled frailty of human nature. It seems we can never be sure of people until they are dead. After that they can commit no wrong, nor can they ever err again or besmirch a once fair reputation with disgrace. However unwillingly we may recognize it, the truth of the maxim is forced upon us that reputation is a bubble liable to burst at any moment.

An apparently well-informed correspondent of Harper's Weekly, in an attempt to explain the disquieting number of desertions from the navy that have marked the last few years, puts first among his reasons the recent resort to inland towns for recruits. The men secured by this experiment have been of many occupations, and, after a short stay on a receiving ship and a few weeks on a training ship, they are drafted to a regular man-of-war and enter upon the routine of a service utterly different from anything to which they have been accustomed. The sudden change produces a dissatisfaction that would not be felt by men who had previously possessed some knowledge of life afloat. The second source of discontent suggested is the frequency with which sailors of foreign birth in the navy, usually Norwegians and Swedes, are, because of their greater knowledge of seamanship, raised to positions of petty authority over the native born. They are able mariners, but they lack the knack of enforcing obedience without giving offense, and sometimes make themselves intolerable to subordinates with American ideas.

THE SYSTEM PAYS

State Leasing of Covicts a Source of Revenue.

The profits of the Alabama convict department broke all records during the past year, the profits paid into the state treasury reaching more than $200,000. This is in excess of last year by about $40,000 and more than double any previous year.

This increase is due to working the state convicts under the direct supervision of the department rather than the old lease system.

A comparison of the returns for eight years shows as follows.

1903	160,418.35

The new mining contract under which the state is now getting a largely increased revenue went into effect January 1, 1903. So that on September 30 last it had been in effect only nine months, and while the fiscal year shows a net earning of only $160,418.35, the earnings for the calendar year of twelve months will be as much as $200,000.

At Practice.

The Atlantic training squadron, under command of Rear-Admiral Wise, have reached Pensacola from New Orleans. All the vessels dropped anchor off the navy yard after an exchange of salutes, and immediately began coaling. The squadron will remain several weeks, during which time the apprentices will be trained in land drills. When the Hartford arrived she was short forty of her apprentices, who had left the ship at New Orleans. The other ships also lost some of their apprentices, but not such large numbers.

No Jurisdiction.

Two allegations recently made by the Alabama Car Service association were the subject of consideration by the state railroad commission, which has decided that it has no jurisdiction in the cases named. The contentions were:

1. This commission has no jurisdiction over the operation of the Alabama Car Service association.

2. That the statute creating this commission does not confer upon it any jurisdiction over matters and things arising under the rules of the Alabama Car Service association.

Meridian, Miss., has filed a suit for $500,000 against the Meridian Water company, alleging breach of contract and damage accruing during the past 13 years. The suit is filed following the victory of the city in another suit against the Water Works company, in which the existing contract was declared null and void.

The book of Gen. Weyler, the Spanish governor general of Cuba, in which he tells his experience at that time is looked for soon. He is reserved about his book, but it is known the most interesting parts are entitled "My Project of Disembarking in United States Territory and the Reasons Why I was Obliged to Renounce that Project."

The Columbus, Ind., Central Christian church, the only one in the west which has a roof garden, has formed a shower and plunge bath and bowling alleys in the basement. When completed there will probably be no other church in America similarly equipped. The purpose is to furnish amusement to keep men from saloons.

Seven employes of the ill-fated Chicago Iroquois theater were arrested on orders issued by the chief of police. The charge against them is at present that of being accessory to manslaughter. They will be held pending the verdict of the coroner's jury.

Jim Beach, a conductor of Scottsboro, Ala., was fatally wounded by a negro tramp. Mr. Beech found the negro on his train, and endeavored to put him off, when the tramp shot him. The shooting occurred on the Louisville and Nashville railroad near Greenville, Ala.

Texas is almost a prohibition state; 200 counties voted dry.

Mobile, Ala., is assured the Italian colony proposed some weeks ago, and the preliminaries have been closed looking to its establishment. The proposition consists of the sale of 12,000 acres of valuable farming lands 30 miles north of Mobile lying between the Southern and the Mobile and Ohio railroads. A new settlement will be immediately built up there.

The dock yards at Pourtsmouth have been ordered to send six war ships to Malta, to replace those ordered to China.

The Schuler furnace at Gadsden, Ala., will be lighted next week.

Back Tax Assessments.

Back tax assessments on packing houses, oil companies and refrigerator lines operating private rolling stock in Mississippi were filed in eight counties by the state revenue agent, the assessments amounting to $1,216,000. This is additional to the big batch of similar claims filed about ten days ago, and will make the total amount of taxes demanded about $2,500,000.

BOWIE PROTESTS

Against Discrimination in Rural Routes.

Representative Bowie, of Alabama, has found time during the holidays, by careful analysis of the report of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow and by other personal investigation, to perform a task which renders a signal benefit to the promotion of the rural postal service throughout the south.

As a result of his investigations Mr. Bowie has sent to Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow a letter, which contains the following:

"I find that up to June 30, 1903, the southern states had filed 8,850 petitions, the northern states 20,934 petitions. You will see, if population is considered, that the number of petitions filed in the southern states is relatively about the same as in the north. But when we come to the routes established there are only 3,354 in the south, as against 11,737 in the north. In other words, only 37 per cent of the petitions filed for the south were established, while in the north there were 56 per cent. I find that in the south only 53 per cent of the petitions filed were investigated, and in the north 65 per cent. I notice another striking condition. In the south 29 per cent of the routes examined were rejected, and in the north only 14 per cent were rejected.

"In the northern states there were fifty-four counties given the complete service, the routes there numbering 2,276. These, added to the 240 routes in two Tennessee and Kentucky, republican districts, make a total of 2,486, as against 212 for southern democratic districts."

$360,000 TIMBER LAND DEAL

For 30,000 Acres in Walker and Winston Counties.

Neil Brown, Charles Gilbert and J. H. Koehler, representing the Winton Lumber company of Wausau, Wis., are in Jasper, Ala., closing a deal with the Jasper Land company for thirty thousand acres of valuable yellow pine timber lands situated in Walker and Winston counties.

Several years ago the Jasper Land company was organized, and among other valuable lands bought was a tract of 30,000 acres of long leaf yellow pine land in Walker and Winston counties, north of Jasper. This land has been held ever since and no timber has yet been cut from it. The deal with the Winton Lumber company gives them the controlling interest in the tract, the Jasper Land company retaining about 45 per cent of it. The consideration is said to be $360,000, or about $12.50 per acre.

The Winton Lumber company will develop this property at an early date by the establishment of large lumber mills and manufacturing plants. The timber is almost inexhaustable, and the development of this vast tract will mean thousands of dollars for business interests, and it is one of the most important deals that has ever been made in Walker county property.

He is Coming.

A dispatch from Adis Abeba states that the American expedition under Consul-General Skinner, which has been visiting King Menelik of Abyssinia, has been most successful. Consul General Skinner has arranged a treaty for both the United States and Ethiopia, assuring friendly commercial relations. King Menelik has also informed the party that he will accept the invitation to take part in the St. Louis exposition. Menelik further stated that he was going to present two lions and a pair of elephant tusks to President Roosevelt.

Colony in North Alabama.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy and wife, of New York, have sold to the Thompson Land company the Clemens and Clay farms of 1,840 acres near Madison, Ala. This is one of the largest sales of land recorded here this year. The purchasers will cut the land into small farms and colonize northern and western farmers.

Minister's Son Killed.

Fargo Squires, the eldest son of United States Minister to Cuba Squires, was accidentally shot and mortally wounded by Gaston Michaud, a chaffeur employed by his father. Young Squires and several servants were shooting at a target in the coach house of the minister's residence. They used 22-caliber rifles, and one of them apparently got out of order. Michaud, after examining the weapon, relocked it, when suddenly the piece was discharged, the ball penetrating the young man's left lung. A hemorrhage ensued and within half an hour Squires died.

The weather conditions during the past week have been favorable for plowing and planting on the sugar plantations and this work is being actively pushed everywhere. The estimated tonnage for 1902-3 is 225,000.

The Keystone Lime Company is preparing to erect five new kilns at their plant at Hardyville. This is one of the largest plants of the kind and employs a large number of men.

Lieut. Gen. James Longstreet Died Last Saturday.

General James Longstreet, soldier, statesman and diplomat and the last lieutenant general of the confederate army, with the exception of General Gordon, died in Gainesville, Ga., Saturday from an attack of acute pneumonia. He had been ill two days. He was nearly 83 years of age. He is survived by his wife, two sons and a daughter.

General Longstreet was born in Edgefield district, S. C., January 8, 1821. His family removed to Alabama in 1831, and from that state he was appointed to the military academy at West Point, where he graduated in 1842.

He served in the Mexican war and for gallant conduct in that service he was brevetted captain and major successively. He joined the confederate army in 1861 and was immediately made brigadier general and was considered the hardest fighter in the confederate service.

General Longstreet took up his residence in New Orleans after the war and established a commercial house of which he was the head. He was appointed surveyor of the port of New Orleans by President Grant, and was afterwards supervisor of internal revenue in New Orleans and postmaster of that city. He was sent as United States minister to Turkey by President Hayes, and under President Garfield was United States marshal for the district of Georgia. A few years ago he was appointed United States commissioner of railroads with headquarters at Washington, which position he held at the time of his death.

NO MORE SMALL BOARDS.

Civil Service Examinations Will Be Under Direct Charge of the Commission.

The civil service commission has decided on a change in the matter of holding examinations in various parts of the country, which is intended to simplify the work and avoid cause of complaint as to the character of the examinations. It is proposed to centralize the small examination boards in the large cities and have every examination superintended by an officer from the office of the commission.

The small boards will be abolished and a representative of the main office of the commission will have a place on every board. The new arrangement is expected to introduce into every examination much of the authority and regularity which mark the larger central examinations held under the auspices of the civil service commission.

A RETIRED OFFICER

Will Be Placed in Charge of the Alabama State Guard.

The war department has written Governor Jelks of Alabama, asking if the governor has any personal preference in the selection of a retired army officer to be detailed in charge of the Alabama state guard under the provision of the Delk militia bill.

The governor has not yet responded to the secretary's letter. In case he has no one whom he personally prefers for the place the department will select an officer. Only retired officers will be detailed, as the department can not spare the services of those on the active list.

The new dispensary law of Walker county, Alabama, is to be tested, a suit having been filed Saturday. It is said that the regularity of the journals of the legislature will be attacked, it being alleged that the bill was not enacted as required by the state constitution.

John Leroy Robinson and John Vinson, two well known young men of East Gadsden, Ala., experimented during Christmas with a balloon of their own manufacture. The crowd was badly frightened when Mr. Robinson, the balloonist, came near breaking his neck in an attempt to ascend with the balloon and descend with an umbrella for a parachute.

Planters Prosperous.

The new year, as far as the treasury department figures may indicate, has opened auspiciously for the southern states. One of the most interesting features of the operations of the treasurer's office during the old year has been the enormous shipments of currency particularly to the south. Up to date these shipments amount for the twelve months to something over $35,000,000, while for same period preceding the shipments were but $21,700,000. This is taken to mean that the cotton planters have been making a lot of money the past few months, for the greater part of the money went to pay for the cotton crop.

The Nestor of the Navy.

Rear Admiral George B. Balch, United States navy, retired, who enjoys the distinction of being the oldest living flag officer of Uncle Sam's navy, is 82 years old. Admiral Balch saw nearly a half century of active service. He is a southerner, having been born in Tennessee in 1821. He spent hise boyhood in Alabama until his sixteenth year, when he was appointed a midshipman.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY.

A BEAUTIFUL DISCOURSE BY THE REV. DR. C. L. GOODELL.

Subject: A Sure Method With Doubt—Do Not Be Impatient With It. Only Continue to Move Toward the Light You Do See—Truth Will Free You.

If Daniel were [illegible] abilities [illegible] unimpeached [illegible] man of his [illegible] more an age [illegible] which preceded [illegible] a hundred years [illegible] and a dozen [illegible] ed people [illegible] but it will always remain [illegible] generation must settle its own [illegible] The [illegible] a mole [illegible] valuable [illegible] ers personal [illegible] ones. They must [illegible] wrought out for the most part [illegible] radical stress and struggle. There are [illegible] phases of doubt that seem to [illegible] than others, a great [illegible] operation in the [illegible] triumph in the [illegible] agnostic [illegible] at the time. The [illegible] and we may [illegible] the [illegible] There have been [illegible] the [illegible] which [illegible] made its [illegible] suggestion ever be [illegible]

The doubts [illegible] I am [illegible] and which I would be glad to [illegible] ters of time [illegible] theoretical [illegible] are the kind which make [illegible] which paralyze [illegible] and [illegible] ers city and [illegible] the issue of personal [illegible] on.

It is not strange or unreasonable that we should [illegible] ists. We begin life knowing [illegible] We journey in the land of the unknown at every step. We investigate and experiment and question. A little bit of knowledge we ought from the unknown we build the structure of [illegible] we call knowledge, and in doing this we form a habit which masters us. It will not let us rest. Life has become a great interrogation point, and our journey a voyage of discovery. We sail into every [illegible] bay. One is a fair harbor and looks so [illegible] another a stretch of sandbar and shoal, and we are fortunate if we are able to put again to sea; while another proves to be the mouth of a great river on whose tide we go to glorious discoveries in a delectable country. The man who thinks cannot stop his thinking. Often he is mocked by it and ruthlessly punished. Like some adventurous mountain climber, but climb he must though he fail in his quest.

"That low man seeks a little thing to do,
See it and does it:
This high man with a great thing to pursue
Dies ere he knows it."

It is no wonder, then, that we are driven to doubt, for life is too short to know all.

It is not to be wondered at that our doubts concern themselves chiefly with religious truth. In the very nature of things religious truth is supernatural. It is not so much contrary to, as beyond, our senses. Its principles are not like the axioms of mathematics. The whole field of religion is beyond the realm of the senses and of scientific rules; therefore it is to be wondered at least of all when we find that in this field speculation and doubt run riot.

There is another fact to be considered which Horace Bushnell states admirably: "Our faculty is itself in disorder. A broken or bent telescope will not see anything rightly. So a mind wrenched from its true lines of action, discolored and smirched by evil, will not see truly, but will put a blurred, misshapen look on everything. Truths will only be as good as errors and doubts as natural as they."

In view of all this, let us have done with abusing those who doubt. Doubt properly pursued is only knowledge in the raw, and Dr. Parks was right when he said: "Infidelity is the ultimate result of checking the desire for expanded knowledge." Let us frankly tell our young people that doubt is not a final condition save to a dishonest mind. Through the doubt of to-day they will come to the knowledge of to-morrow, and let us also remind them that what they hold as the truth to-morrow should have great expansive power, so that coming days will give more light and add to the proportions of the truth.

"I have heard of thee that thou canst make interpretations and dissolve doubts," was the King's greeting to the Hebrew. This same Daniel had stood before the King's father when he, too, was sore burdened with mystery. He did not claim for his own unaided wisdom the power to settle doubts, but stoutly and honestly owned the source of his power, saying: "There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets." It may be said truthfully that the only sure method for the solution of life's problems and the dissolving of its doubts is by entering into right relations with Him. If it is objected that one of the great doubts of life relates to His very existence the answer is, Every man is conscious of the great ethical imperative, I ought. This relates him to some great law, and hence to some great law giver. It would not seem to be a very exalted prayer, "Oh God, if there be a God, enlighten my soul, if I have a soul," and yet even a prayer like that, with an honest purpose to follow each faintest ray of light, would not be unavailing.

In the matter of dissolving religious doubts, the ultimate purpose is everything. No man ever comes to the truth by being simply curious. Speculation for speculation's sake leads nowhere. The mind is filled with conflicting arguments. It is a poor cause which has not something plausible about it, and so the mind chases itself from sophistry to sophistry, from controversy to controversy, darkening counsel and coming out nowhere.

The first thing for an honest seeker after truth to do is to pledge himself to abide by the truth as he finds it. To play fast and loose with one's convictions is the first and second death. To fail to use the light we have to refuse to live up to that we know is right, is to put one's self into the darkness of eternal doubt. Plato was right when he said: "Atheism is a disease of the soul before it becomes an error of the understanding." French atheism was a foregone conclusion when one considers the condition of French morals. Why should a man believe in God when his life was one long rebelling against Him? Why should he not cry "after us the deluge" when conscious that nothing but an unfathomable sea could cover the putrefaction of his life? When a man has made up his mind to give himself to the sensual and the material, it is hollow mockery for him to profess a desire to know the truth. The truth abides with no man who will not use it, and, on the other hand, if he be, like Roosevelt, pure of heart and purpose, he will think his way out of the darkness into the full light of revealed religion and pillow his dying head upon a certain faith. Knowing the life of Shelly we would expect him to be proud to write himself down "an atheist," knowing the life of Wordsworth, we would expect the epitaph in Grasmere Church to read as it does, "To the [illegible] of my questions with me into that life toward which all men move. [illegible] fact does not trouble me. Some [illegible] have settled and others can wait [illegible] day when all mystery shall be made [illegible]

One of my parishioners some [illegible] taught me a great lesson. She was a woman of culture and refinement. She had been at the head of a great school for many years. Her eyesight at last failed her and she became totally blind. I saw her at the close of a service feeling her way up the aisle from pew to pew, that she might shake hands with me. The thought of her great suffering and loss finally overwhelmed me and I said with deep emotion as I clasped her hand: "It will be right yonder, and you will know why God has permitted this great affliction to enter your life." She lifted a face transfigured by ineffable peace and said: "If I am as happy as to get to heaven, I shall let bygones be bygones and shall not trouble the Lord for any explanations." If one has a spirit like that, whatever doubts he has can wait.

Remember finally that there are but a few things that are absolutely necessary to Christian faith. Be sure [illegible] you have them, whatever the price [illegible] be. Do not try to make [illegible] safe and pleasant course. [illegible] ful mocking of the truth. [illegible] tled the great problems [illegible] you need not be greatly tr[illegible] lesser ones. Men have s[illegible] which God never ordained.

We have multiplied do[illegible] trines to the confusion of t[illegible] fear to the loss of the soul. [illegible] all men have forgotten that ri[illegible] more important than right view[illegible] have burned heretics to get rid of their heresy, and have banished good men because they disagreed with them. Have patience with other men that they may have patience with you. Let your life recommend your creed. Right opinions will avail us no more than they avail the devil and his angels unless we hold them in the golden chalice of a pure and honest life. The great truths of life are not simply intellectual truths and the method by which they are revealed are not chiefly intellectual. With the heart man believeth unto righteousness.

Doubt which is in moral earnest is a servant of God to bring the truth. It has preceded all great reforms in the individual and in the community. A faith which has been forged out through the awful heat of doubt is the only kind that becomes an anchor to the soul. It is worth going through the fiery furnace to find "the form of the Fourth."

The conviction which honest doubt leads to is the conviction which has shaken the world. Do not scorn any man, and least of all the truth he holds. Keep the integrity of your mind. Think honestly, think seriously, for life's questions are solemn questions.

Do not be obstinate and refuse to own a new truth which contradicts some position you once held. Above all things realize that the truth is the only thing that will free you from an evil life. The verdict of the ages and the verdict of the facts is that the truth is to be sought in a personality and not in a theory, and no one has arisen to dispute His words who said, "I am the truth." It is to Him that we go to you to come. Well may you say to Him: "I have heard of Thee that Thou canst make interpretations and dissolve doubts."

What Better?

It is not, of course, the highest argument for Christianity, but it is always well to ask one who is refusing Christ what substitute he has for Him. Upon what is he relying to escape from his sins? What sure comfort has he for his sorrows? What evidence has he of immortality? Whoever has he named certainty as to the character of God? What upholds him in his work in the world? Where does he find power to conquer temptation? Often, if a man can be made to see his poverty, he will seek the true riches.

The Builder of the Day.

The first hour of the morning is the builder of the day. It is a blessed [illegible] which gives the first waking [illegible] the house of [illegible]—Henry Ward Beecher.

...A TREATY

...fore Congress, ...President.

...message to congress ...recognition and in... ...arrangements made with ...Panama by which this ...has secured the necessary ...ht of land and all other privileges ...quired for the construction of an ...thmian canal to be policed and guar... ...ed by the United States.

The United States has taken the ...sition that no other government is ...build the canal. In 1869, when ...ance proposed to come to the aid ...the French Panama company by ...aranteeing their bonds, the senate ...the United States, with only some ...ree votes dissenting, resolved:

"That the government of the United ...tates will look with serious concern ...d disapproval upon any connection ...f any European government with the ...onstruction or control of any ship ...anal across the isthmus of Darien ...across Central America."

When this government submitted to ...olombia the Hay-Herran treaty three ...ings were already settled.

One was that the canal should be ...uilt.

Second. While it was settled that ...e canal should be built without un...ecessary or improper delay, it was ...so clearly shown to be our pur... ...to deal not merely in a spirit of ...ustice, but in a spirit of generosity ...with the people through whose land ...we might build it.

During all the years of negotiation ...and discussion that preceded the con...clusion of the Hay-Herran treaty, Co...lombia never intimated that the re...quirement by the United States of ...control over the canal strip would ...render unattainable the construction ...of a canal by way of the isthmus of ...Panama; nor were we advised, dur...ing the months when legislation of ...1902 was pending before the congress, ...that the terms which it embodies ...would render negotiations with Co...lombia impracticable.

The president says Colombia is in...consistent in rejecting the treaty at ...one time and now trying to restore ...conditions as they were and adopt the ...same treaty.

Third. Finally the congress definite...ly settled where the canal was to be ...built. It was provided that a treaty ...should be made for building the canal ...across the isthmus of Panama; and ...2, after reasonable time, it proved ...impossible to secure such treaty, that ...then we should go to Nicaragua.

He says the Nicaragua route is no ...longer to be considered, that route ...being only an alternate proposition ...in case of failure to secure one by ...Panama. The latter having been ob...tained, the Nicaraguan route is out ...of the question.

He denies the right of any petty ...government to assume such sovereign...ty over possible canal routes as to ...[pre]...cting of a canal.

...numerous extracts from ...ival officers, and other ...go to show that revolu... ...anama was progressing for ...efore Colombia failed to ac... ...roposal of this country and ... canal treaty with it, the ...of the canal strip being ...for the canal as this coun...try and ...impatient of the dilatory ...tactics of Colombia.

He would not deny insinuations ...that this government was privy to ...the revolution in Panama were it not ...for the fact that silence might be ...construed as admission of the charge. ...He then gives the revolution in de...tail and particularly points out the ...neutral position maintained by this ...government except in the protection of ...American citizens.

Next he says the revolution has ...been accomplished and that the new ...repuonc is recognized by many of ...the leading nations of the ...be as an ...independent people, capable of mak...ing treaties and entering into con...tracts.

American vessels of war were dis...posed within easy reach of Panama ...and these orders issued to command...ers on the spot:

"Maintain free and uninterrupted ...transit. If interruption is threatened ...by armed force, occupy the line of ...railroad. Prevent landing of any armed ...force with hostile intent, either ...government or insurgent, at any point ...within fifty miles of Panama. Govern...ment force reported approaching the ...isthmus in vessels. Prevent their ...landing if, in your judgment, the land...ing would precipitate a conflict."

A mass of department and official ...correspondence and messages is quot...ed.

In defending the administration he ...speaks of the fear that was expressed ...as to the possible intentions of the ...United States about Cuba and main...tains that Cuba is free and independ...ent today. Then he adds:

"Instead of using our forces, as we ...were invited by Colombia to do, for ...the twofold purpose of defeating our ...own rights and interests and the in...terests of the civilized world, and of ...compelling the submission of the peo...ple of the isthmus to those whom ...they regarded as oppressors, we shall, ...as in duty bound, keep the transit ...open and prevent its invasion. Mean...while, the only question now before us ...is that of the ratification of the ...treaty. For it is to be remembered ...that a failure to ratify will not undo ...what has been done, will not restore ...Panama to Colombia, and will not al...ter our obligation to keep the transit ...open across the isthmus, and to pre...vent any outside power from menacing ...this transit."

A special argument is interjected to ...show that the Panama case is unique ...and must be considered from the high ...standpoint of the demands of civiliza...tion for the canal as well as from ...the usual international standpoint.

In conclusion he says: "Let me ...repeat that the one question actually ...before the government is not that of ...the recognition of Panama as an inde...pendent republic. That is already an ...accomplished fact. The question, and ...the only question, is whether or not ...we shall build an isthmian canal.

APPEAL TO CARNEGIE.

To Establish Rural Libraries All Over the Country.

A movement is on foot to ask An...drew Carnegie to donate a sum of ...money for the establishment of libra...ries in the rural districts of the Unit...ed States. It is thought several thou...sand signatures will be secured to the ...petition in Alabama, when the list will ...be sent to Washington, where, with ...the petitions from other states, it will ...be prepared for presentation to Mr. ...Carnegie. The petition reads:

"Appreciating the great work that ...you have done and are doing for the ...cities of the United States, we most ...earnestly ask that you take steps at ...your earliest convenience, to investi...gate the crying need of more than ...sixty million people who are in rural ...districts and small towns, beyond the ...reach of city libraries.

"From these country communities ...have come most of the great men of ...our nation; the young people who live ...in such communities appreciate fully ...what is being done for them. They ...have time to read and build into their ...minds the contents of good books that ...are placed in their hands.

"We, the undersigned, believe that ...the result of an investigation along ...this line by you will demonstrate that ...in this field, the maximum return may ...be expected from the minimum invest...ment."

Iowa Capitol Burned.

Fire cleaned out the northwest wing ...of the Iowa capitol, causing a loss of ...$500,000. The chamber of the house ...of representatives is a charred mass of ...debris and can not be repaired in time ...for the approaching session of the leg...islature. It originated presumably ...from an electric light wire.

The fire department was hindered ...in fighting the flames by the height ...of the building and the elevation of ...the capitol. A gallery of the house ...chamber fell, the deoris injuring two ...firemen.

Governor Cummins, clad in rubber ...boots and rough coat, fought the fire, ...which nnally burned itself out. The ...Iowa capitol cost $3,000,000 twenty ...years ago.

A Peculiar Catch.

In the Tennessee river near Shef...field, Ala., an old man in an elegant ...naphtha launch was captured by offi...cers, charged with small thievery. On his boat, ...which was beautifuny fitted up, a ...small table and packs of cards were ...found, and it is surmised that he gam...bles as well as steals along the river ...banks.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

JANUARY 4TH.

The senate's first session following the holiday recess was devoted entirely to Panama. President Roosevelt sent a message on the subject. Discussion continued throughout the day, speeches being made both in defense of and against the policy which has been pursued. Mr. McComas defended the president and asserted that his action would stand if tried in court. He maintained that even without recognition the new republic of Panama would have been established and maintained indefinitely.

Mr. Morgan stated his preference for the Nicaragua route, and maintained that the present course of the administration was breaking down the established policy of the United States regarding neutrality. He said the president now desired the assistance of three democratic senators to maintain his policy. He predicted that even though the government of the United States should undertake the construction of the canal, a canal would be built over the Nicaragua route because of its superior feasibility.

He referred to President McKinley's attitude toward the canal routes, and declared that "Nicaragua has a better friend in the grave of William McKinley than Panama has in the present head of the American army and navy."

In the house a privileged resolution offered by Mr. Hay, democrat, reciting that certain statements contained in the Bristow postoffice report reflected on the membership of the house, provided for an investigation by a committee to be appointed by the speaker. The vote developed no quorum and the house adjourned.

The Sisters Have Met.

Mrs. C. W. Taylor, residing at Bluff Springs, Fla., was so badly burned Thursday night that death resulted.

The accident is a particularly sad one. Mrs. Taylor was in the room where lay the corpse of her sister, who had expired that day. During the night Mrs. Taylor, who was much affected by the death of her sister, went into the room where lay the corpse. She was standing near the fire, when her dress caught in some manner. She was not aware of this until she was nearly enveloped in flames. Before assistance arrived Mrs. Taylor was severely burned. The remains of the two sisters were placed side by side in the room where the day previous, there had been but one to mourn.

John Alexander Dowie started on his trip around the world Saturday. Dowie will first go to New Orleans, where he will remain for a week. Then he will proceed to San Francisco. He will embark for Australia January 21, going by way of Honolulu.

The Sixteenth regiment, stationed at Fort McPherson, near Atlanta, has received orders to hold itself in readiness to go to Panama, and preparations to this end are in progress.

Florida has had established since October 1, 1903, sixteen woodworking plants, four ice and cold storage plants, two mines and two phosphate companies.

Fire at Moulton, Ala., Saturday night destroyed two grocery stores, postoffice and several other large frame buildings. A defective flue is thought to have been the cause.

A COMPANY WAR

Means Much for the Alabama Coal Mining Industry.

The possibilities for the immediate development of the mineral resources of Alabama, especially in coal fields, are revived by a persistent story that comes from New York city and from several different sources. These stories rest on the truth or fallacy of two announcements that have been made —that new interests are in control of the United States steel corporation, and that this trust and the Pittsburg Coal Company are at cuts.

What is claimed to be practically official information is given out to the effect that J. P. Morgan has run his limit as dictator of the steel trust, and that the control of this gigantic corporation has passed into the hands of John D. Rockefeller, Standard Oil magnate, and Henry C. Frick, the enemy of Andrew Canegie.

The other story deals with the expiration of the contract between the steel trust and the Pittsburg Coal Company for the supply of the coal used by the first named corporation. This contract expired with the old year and has not been renewed. The claim is advanced it will not be. The United States steel corporation will develop its own large holdings of coal properties, the supposition being that they are largely interested in Alabama fields.

Under active conditions the United States Steel Corporation consumes in the neighborhood of 8,500 tons of coal per day, most all of which has been furnished by the Pittsburg Coal Company. The consumption of the steel combine last year was something less than 3,000,000 tons. At the rate of $1.40 per ton, paid in 1903, the coal consumed in a single year would represent a valuation of more than $4,000,000.

Historic School Burned.

St. Catherine's academy, a Catholic school for girls, located near Springfield, Ky., burned to the ground Sunday. There was no fatalities. The loss is about $200,000. So rapid was the progress of the flames that the pupils barely escaped with their lives, and clad only in their robes de nuit made their way over the icy and snow covered fields to the academy at St. Rose, where they were sheltered. St. Catherine's was one of the historic educational institutions of Kentucky, and was founded in 1804.

The receipts for the six months of the present fiscal year amounted to $277,857,472, and the expenditures to $263,899,971, a decrease in receipts of nearly $11,000,000 from the corresponding period last year, and an increase in expenditures of slightly more than five and a half millions.

TENNESSEE RAILROAD

Loses Their Shops at East Nashville.

The Tennessee Central railroad shops in South Nashville, Tenn., burned Thursday night, entailing an estimated loss of $250,000. The boiler shops, planing mill, blacksmith shop, round house, machine shop, store room and office were almost entirely consumed and four locomotives, one combination and four box cars were destroyed. The loss in rolling stock is estimated at $70,000, fully insured. It is said that there was an insurance of but $35,000 on the plant.

Summoned.

Secretary Webb, of the Mississippi railroad commission, has cited the traffic officials of all the railroads doing business in this state to appear before the commission on Tuesday to show cause, if any they can, why there should not be a general and thorough revision and reclassificatign of tariff sheets. This matter was to have been adjusted at the last meeting of the commission, but it went over. On the 8th inst the commissioners will all go to Vicksburg in answer to a summons to appear in the injunction proceedings instituted by the Illinois Central to prevent the assessment of its capital stock for back taxes, as demanded by the state revenue agent. This suit involves more than $1,000,000.

Resisted Arrest.

William F. Lark, of Piedmont, S. C., visiting relatives, was killed at Childersburg, Ala., by city officers while resisting arrest for disorderly conduct.

Citizens of Jackson, Miss., are attaching much mystery to an advertisement published by the register of the United States land office for Mississippi offering a premium of $10 in gold to the person who will produce a $50 government note bearing the numbering S 1902 A 26437, $50. Mr. Collins states that no questions will be asked or answered concerning this bill if found, and declines to discuss the matter or to give the slightest intimation as to the purpose for which it is wanted. It is believed, however, that the government has some special object in desiring to have it returned to the treasury and is willing to pay a substantial sum in excess of its value in order to get it back.

Several signatures have been secured on a petition circulated in Florence, Ala., asking the government to select another site for the federal building. Upon the one chosen by the government inspector stands the old synodical college, built in 1848, with its broad galleries and massive columns on all four sides. It is one of the most interesting and picturesque buildings in the state and is dear to the heart of every Florentine.

It is reported that Miss Rosie Middleton, a blind girl of Phoenix City, Ala., will probably die from injuries received in a railroad accident near Newville, Pa.

Several colonels will be raised to the star grade and retired and others will be promoted on the active list.

SENATOR MORGAN

Says That He Will Continue to Fight Panama Canal.

Senator Morgan states in a letter to the public that he will not support a policy he knows to be unlawful, and declares that southern representatives will be committing such an offense if they shall cast their ballots for the Panama canal measure as it is now framed.

Speaking of the Panama route the letter says: I knew then, as I know now, that we were binding ourselves to dig a ditch that would be a receptacle for dead men and a waterway for none of the people, and that there is little chance of it ever being made a waterway for ships.

A FEW FIGURES

Concerning the Progress in Various Lines in the United States.

"The Progress of the United States in Its Material Industries" is the title of a statistical statement presented by the department of commerce and labor through the annual report of the chief of the bureau of statistics. The table pictures conditions in the great industries and material interests of the United States in 1902, where such figures are available, and compares those conditions with those of earlier years, running back, where possible, to the year 1800.

In area the total in 1903 is 3,025,600 square miles, against 2,980,969 square miles in 1890, and 827,844 square miles in 1800. These figures do not include Alaska or the islands belonging to the United States.

The population in 1903 is stated at 80,372,000 against 23,191,876 in 1850 and 5,308,483 in 1800. The wealth of the country is stated at 94 billions of dollars in 1900, and presumably 100 billions would not be an unreasonable estimate for 1903, while for 1850 the wealth of the country stood at 7 billion dollars, no estimate being given for any year earlier than 1850. The per capita wealth is set down at $1,235 in 1900 and $307 in 1850, having thus more than quadrupled meantime. The interest bearing debt in 1903 is 914 million dollars, against 1,724 millions in 1880 and 2,046 millions in 1870. The per capita indebtedness of the country in 1903 is $11.51, against $60.46 in 1870, and the interest per capita 32 cents in 1903, against $3.06 in 1870.

The per capita circulation in 1903 is $30.21. Deposits in savings banks in 1903 are 2,935 million dollars. The value of manufactures for the census year 1900 is given at 13 billions of dollars. Railways in operation in 1902 are 203,132 miles against 9,021 in 1850.

INSURANCE COMMISSIONER

Has Submitted His Annual Report for 1903—An Increase.

The report of the Alabama state insurance commissioner for the calendar year 1903 shows an increase in receipts of $7,634 over the previous year, while there was a decrease in expenses of $497. The total receipts of the department for the year were $74,466.32, with an expense including salary of $2,816.52.

During the year sixty-two fire companies, thirty life companies, twenty-two accident and casualty companies and eight mutual aid associations were licensed by the deprtment. Three new fire companies and one new casualty company were licensed. A total of 3,209 agents were licensed.

Walter Trice, Robert Bridges, Boss Stovall and Albert Thompson, all of Paint Rock, Ala., have been arrested for complicity in the shooting of Marshal Trisdale, of Gurley. All of the young men arrested belong to prominent families in the county and have made bond for their appearance at the spring term of court.

The Knoxville division of the Southern railroad has just received the first two of a large number of new one-hundred-ton engines. They were put in service on the Knoxville and Ohio branch, but can not be used on the main line to Asheville until the bridges are strengthened, about one month's time. The engines are the largest used in the south.

Money now in circulation in the United States is $2,449,163,000. There was a gain in the total during the year of something like $98,000,000. Secretary Shaw predicts that there will be a surplus of $14,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904. The surplus for the last fiscal year was $38,000,000. The cause for the shrinkage in the estimated surplus is found in the great falling off of customs receipts.

Servia's war department has asked for 10,000,000 francs and it is thought that preparations are making for war with Turkey.

It is said now that war between Russia and Japan is inevitable.

HON. Richard B. Kelly, the popular chancery judge of this district, has announced his candidacy for associate justice of the State Supreme Court.

THE Democratic State Executive Committee met at Montgomery yestesday.

CITIZENS of Clanton will elect a mayor and four councilmen next Monday. Every lawful citizen should turn out and vote.

THE census bureau report shows that up to Dec. 12, 1903, Alabama had ginned 946,656 commercial bales, against 896,994 last year.

UNCLE Sam and Colombia are looking black at each other, and Japan and Russia are almost ready to cut one another's throats. And the new year is young yet.

ONE of those awful catastrophes which startle the world occurred at a fire at the Iroquois theatre at Chicago last week, when nearly 600 persons were killed and as many more injured. 'Twas a fearful ending of the old year.

A RUMOR is afloat that the Republican county executive committee is called to meet next Monday at Clanton, and by a singular coincidence the "Populist" committee will also meet at the same time. Is it possible they will repeat the tactics of the last election, and call two conventions to be held at the same time and place, so that the "Populist" nominees can pledge themselves again to the Republicans?

GENERAL JAMES LONGSTREET.

AT his home in Gainesville, Georgia, and at the ripe old age of 84 years, General James Longstreet died on December 2. The announcement of the demise of General Longstreet will bring to the eyes of many an old soldier the unbidden tear, for among all the survivors of the lost cause, none held so firm a grip upon the affections of those who followed the banner of the Confederacy. Of late years, oftentimes misunderstood and his acts misinterpreted, some sought to detract from his military achievements and thus from his real worth and splendid record as a soldier and citizen. In the future, when history shall be truthfully written, the names of Ewell, Beauregard and Longstreet, will shine resplendent stars, beacons to illumine the pathway of those who love virtue, patriotism and truth, whenever and wherever these qualities are sought for or found.

Glorious old Longstreet! "You are but a handful of dust in the land of your choice," but your name and your fame are secure!

Advices from New York indicate that cotton will go to the 20 cent mark. If so, this will be the highest point ever reached by that staple in this country. There is a question as to whether cotton is intrinsically worth the money. However the increased quantities consumed in the United States, by reason of additional mills in the south, is an encouraging sign.—St. Louis Star.

ROADS OF THE SOUTH

HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT IN THE SOUTHERN STATES.

Can Boast of Some of the Best Roads in the World—The Employment of Convicts on the Highways of North Carolina.

Among the many interesting and valuable articles published in a recent number of Harper's Weekly was the following on highway improvement in the south:

One of the most important, but least conspicuous, movements in the new south is that being made in behalf of good country roads. About fifteen years ago there was a general revival of interest in the building of country roads, and now many communities in the south have systems of roads of which they justly feel proud. Even North Carolina, long known as the Rip Van Winkle of the southern states, has at last awakened and is giving lessons to the outside world in the construction of good roads. It is no exaggeration to say that the roads of Mecklenburg county, N. C., are the best to be found in the entire south.

The county of Mecklenburg is near the South Carolina line, and is pierced by that division of the Southern railroad which extends from Washington to Atlanta. The county seat is Charlotte, a progressive city of thirty thousand inhabitants. Within a radius of one hundred miles of this city there are three hundred cotton factories, comprising more than half of the spindles and looms operated in the south.

In 1890 the authorities of the county conceived the idea of utilizing the convicts for the improvement of the public roads. Instead of locking up offenders in the county jail or sending them to the penitentiary it was decided to employ them at home in improving the highways. A law was passed authorizing the use of convicts for this purpose. The convicts were organized into a squad or camp, placed under the control of a competent supervisor and engineer, and the work of grading, straightening and macadamizing the roads was begun. A short experience demonstrated that the convict laborers cost the county only 25 cents per day per head, including food, lodging, clothing and overseeing.

The outfit for the road work, consisting of a steam roller, crusher, bins, portable engine, road machine and a screen for assorting the rocks, cost about $5,000. At present the county has in operation two road outfits and employs about sixty convicts with each outfit. The total expenditure in constructing each mile of macadamized road is from $1,600 to $2,500, not including bridges. In summer the convicts live in tents along the road, and in winter they live in barracks. The rock used for the roads is bought from the farmers, who haul and deposit it at the convict camp.

These roads have been in process of construction for twelve years at the rate of about ten miles per year. At present there are more than 100 miles of macadamized roads in the county. The roads radiate in all directions from the center of Charlotte and extend ten or fifteen miles to the county limits. The roads of this county have become so famous that delegations from many other states have come here to inspect them.

Many good roads organizations exist in the south. Professor J. A. Holmes of the University of North Carolina has traveled in many states, giving illustrated lectures on road construction and organizing good roads clubs. His campaign has borne much fruit, and the south can now boast of some of the best and most picturesque roads in the whole world.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderstoim of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists, Clanton; A. Hore, Thorsby.

VALUE OF GOOD ROADS.

Effect of Highway Improvement in New Jersey.

The importance of good roads and their value to each district having them have long been advocated, but not until recent years has the public been awakened to their full significance. After all, it was not by argument that the public was convinced, but from necessity in the beginning and then by example. The state of New Jersey is wedged in between New York and Pennsylvania, with one of the great cities of the country on its eastern borders and the second largest city on its western borders. Its farmers are mainly engaged in raising truck for the millions of people living in those two cities. To do this thousands of them drive to each city daily with a load of truck, starting in the morning anywhere from 12 to 4 o'clock to get to the markets early enough for the hucksters.

"Jersey mud," a clay loam, is proverbial for its stickiness and disagreeable nature to travel through when wet, says the Putnam (Conn.) Patriot. The Jersey farmer knows the value of a dollar and is opposed to taxes, but he could reckon the difference between what he lost daily by reason of bad roads and the tax he would have to pay for building a smooth rock road. That having been worked out, one good road was built, and those near it got to market regularly and easily, rain or shine, saving enough each trip to pay the road tax. "Seeing is believing," and farmers in other parts became convinced of their economy, and the example was followed, slowly at first, but gradually going on more rapidly.

Last year 100 miles of new roads were built in that state at a cost of about $500,000. This year the demand for them is so great that the state will, the coming year, venture to put $1,000,000 into 200 miles of macadam. The state commissioner of public roads declares that this movement has increased the taxable property of the state by $27,000,000. Just think of that!

New Jersey's Good Roads.

During the past twelve months $450,000 was spent in macadamizing public roads in New Jersey, and for this comparatively small sum the state now has 140 miles of the finest rural thoroughfares in the country. Altogether New Jersey has 641 miles of these fine highways.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Jan. 4, 1904

The leaders of the Republican party in congress are attempting to make the people of the country believe that the Democrats are opposed to the construction of an Isthmian canal, simply because they are criticising the action of the present administration in its relation to the recent secession of Panama from the parent government of Columbia. In their opposition of President Roosevelt's course at Panama the Democrats of the Senate are not opposing or antagonizing the construction of an Isthmian canal. The most earnest advocates of the waterway, who have proved their devotion to this great enterprise by years of effort, are among those who most earnestly condemn the course of the administration. The position taken by the Democratic Senators relates more to the governmental condition of the United States than to our relations with any foreign power or our interest in the construction of the canal. If no other law be passed or no treaty with either Columbia or Panama be ratified there will still be no retardation in the construction of an Isthmian canal unless the President of the United States refuses to execute the law already on the statute books, which provided both the authority for negotiation and the money for the construction of the Nicaragua canal, the negotiations with Columbia having failed. To assume that the failure of a treaty with Panama means the failure of a canal project is to assume that the President of of the United States will refuse to to execute a law already on the statute books, which is as man story upon him as is any provision of the criminal code upon any citizen of the United States.

The position and contention of the Democrats in the Senate is simply this:

That the President of the United States has no right to make war upon a foreign power, that being solely within the province of congress; and that the President of the United States cannot refuse to execute a law duly enacted by congress and approved by the President.

This is the whole matter in a nutshell. If, after a full and impartial investigation the Democrats find that this administration did have guilty foreknowledge of the secession of Panama, and did assist her and have hindered a friendly power from compelling the recalcitrant state to come back into the Columbian union, thus performing an act of war, the Democrats may vote to reject the treaty and demand that the President execute the law now on the statutes to build the Nicaragua canal. They may also then vote to impeach the President when he refuses to execute the law. They are not against the canal per se and all the howlings of the Republican majority cannot make them occupy any such attitude.

The people of the country need not be at all surprised to hear of some rather interesting developments anent the Panama matter when the Democrats get into action after the holidays. They are going to make every honest attempt to get the administration to give them all the facts, and thus give them to the country, concerning this entire transaction from start to finish. After they have exhausted every resource to get at the facts from the Republicans, they are a going to spring a few they now have up their sleeves. The Democrats will show that that Republican administration dealt not only with Walt Street, but with the French Panama company. Wall Street was to help push the deal through for the French company and then was to give the promoters $10,000,000 out of the forty million, and then five million of this sum was to go to the Republican campaign fund in recognition of the help given them by the administration. If these things be true is it any wonder that the administration does not ask any odds of Wall Street? If they be true does any honest man desire to see the thing consumated by the ratification of such a treaty when it does not at all endanger the building of an Isthmian canal?

The Care of Earth Roads.

Earth roads should be repaired, particularly in the spring and fall of the year, but the mistake of letting them take care of themselves during the balance of the year should not be made. The greatest need of the common road in this country is daily or weekly care. A road receiving daily attention will require no extensive repairs and instead of becoming worse will gradually improve. It is minute and frequent homeopathic treatment that the earth road needs.

A PORTABLE SELF FEEDER.

Well Planned For Feeding and Easily Hauled to Any Place.

The sketch of a portable feeder used for cattle on grass was sent to the Ohio Farmer by a correspondent. The feeder is 12 feet long, 5 feet wide and 6 feet high. The bottom or floor (C) consists of two inclined planes, carrying the corn etc., down to the openings (A B) and into the troughs outside. The sides are made to slide up and down a few inches, so that the feed can be shut off if desired, or the spaces (A B) can be adjusted to deliver the grain in small or liberal quantities. A board roof keeps the grain dry. Sled runners under this feeder enable it to be hauled around to any point desired. In the illustration the end is left open to show the construction. It must be boarded up tight. A part of the roof or all of one side can be hinged so as to throw back for putting in the grain.

The Head of a Good Feeder.

The head in beef cattle shows a "good feeder." Observation and experience show a good feeding head to be broad and well filled between the eyes, with a good, roomy brain box, tapering nicely, and short from the eyes to the muzzle, which should be wide and clean cut, with large, well open nostrils. A large mouth usually is the first indication of good digestive capacity, and large, open nostrils go with good lung power and a strong constitution. The whole head is clean cut, with no superfluous flesh on the jaws. The horns, if present, are of medium size and not coarse; ears of medium size, gracefully and actively carried. The eyes are large, full, bright, clear and placid. The neck of most animals of extreme beef type is reduced to the shortest degree possible with usefulness. It is moderately full, with clean cut throat, large, well defined windpipe and little or no dewlap. The neck joins the shoulder in full, even lines, swelling into the shoulders, as it were.

One Minute Cough Cure is pleasant to take, harmless and good alike for young and old. Sold by Hopkins Drug co.

AGRICULTURAL

To Clean Harness.

It seems like quite an undertaking to clean a harness, and it cannot be done in a few minutes, but if one knows just how to go about it, it is not an unpleasant piece of work. It must first be taken to pieces, every strap unbuckled, and if an amateur is doing the work he should pay particular attention to the peculiar way in which backstrap and checkrein are buckled. If the harness is dry and stiff, give it a good soaking in warm water, using white castile soap and a brush to clean off the dirt. Hang it up to drain, and before quite dry apply neatsfoot oil with a paint brush. Let it dry till the next day. Then, if the harness still seems hard, apply another coat of oil. When the oil has soaked in, soap it all over with white castile soap, having sponge or rag moistened and very soapy. After this treatment, an occasional soaping will keep the harness in order for a long time. Before the harness is put together, any broken places should be mended. Use a needle and put shoemaker's wax on the thread. An awl is necessary in some places.—Indiana Farmer.

Profitable Poultry.

Those who raise poultry for eggs have probably selected the young stock for winter laying, and they should be located where they are getting all the green food they need, yet not running over too much area. After spending all the summer on a range of considerable size, it is a good plan to bring the pullets in nearer the house and give them a smaller range; room enough to get plenty of exercise, but not enough so that they will run off the muscle and weight gained during the summer. They must not go into winter quarters fat, but they should be plump and with enough vitality to stand the confinement. If any are ailing, separate from the rest of the flock, and if they are not readily killed by simple remedies kill them and burn the carcasses, bearing in mind that one cannot afford to take an ailing bird into winter quarters. Provide a place for the surplus cockerels, so that they will not trouble the pullets or hens, and as soon as they can be put in proper shape sell them for what they will bring. Be certain, however, the best specimens have been selected for keeping up the strain. Use these selected cockerels for mating with the older hens at breeding season, and the pullets of last spring mate to a two-year-old cock.

Beardless Wheat.

Those who have had the most experience in combatting the Hessian fly are the strongest believers in the late sowing of wheat wherever it can be done. Some varieties are better for late sowing than others, and the two shown in the illustration seem to be especially well suited for late sowing. The centre head of the illustration shows a beardless sort known as the Clawson Longberry. The variety is a strong grower and stools prolifically, the straw being strong and wiry. The heads are full and long and wide. The chaff, which is brown, is free from beards.

The grain, which is of true Long-berry type, is dark amber in color, large and long and of the finest quality. The other heads shown are of the bearded sort, Sheaf Longberry Red, and claimed to be the most perfect Longberry Red wheat grown. It is one of the hardiest varieties, a strong, healthy grower, and especially desirable for late sowing. The straw is strong, though only medium tall. The chaff is thin and of a pearly white. The grain is dark and flinty, and nearly as large as rye kernels. This variety is much prized as a fancy milling sort.

Harness For the Hen.

When a hen gets a notion into her diminutive brain that it is her mission to lead a bunch of downy-covered chicks over the garden it is a very difficult thing to convince her otherwise. There may be many excellent reasons advanced by the farmer why it is not desired that she should take upon herself this unselfish duty; but no matter how many or excellent are his reasons they carry no weight with the hen. Being chased from one spot, she will take her place on another, and in the absence of eggs she will set on anything from a load of cobblestones to a watermelon. Foiled at one effort, she will make another, and cling to the object of her ambition with a persistence worthy of a greater cause, until the aggravated farmer is almost ready to wring her neck.

The means of preventing a hen from setting seems like a very humble problem to occupy the throbbing brain of an inventor, but the matter has been recently attacked by a genius of British Honduras, who is so sure that he has found the solution of this mighty matter, that he has gone to the trouble of taking out patent papers in this and other countries. The device certainly has the recommendation of simplicity, and is built on the well-grounded assumption that a hen cannot afford to "set" while in a standing position, and, therefore, by keeping her on her feet she can be effectually frustrated in her purpose of preventing race suicide.

The apparatus consists merely of a loop of wire adapted to fasten to her leg and encircle the limb in such a manner that the fowl's freedom of foot is not interfered with in her ordinary ramble about the barnyard in search of food; but the moment she tries to locate herself on a nest she finds a yawning chasm between them. She may hover around and over the nest, but it refuses to receive her rotund form. This is because the wire loop which has been fastened to her prevents her from bending her leg, as is necessary to assume the setting posture. It is said that after repeated efforts to find a hospitable nest she gives up her task and forgets her dream of maternity.

Dairy Notes.

Ounces of feed do not bring pounds of butter. Feed well if you would get full milk pails.

Some men spend a great deal of time and strength educating their cows, when all the time it is the men themselves who need educating the worst way.

One of the surest ways in the world to make butter smooth and greasy is to overheat the cream while ripening it. And that is the kind of butter that will not keep very long.

No man ever learned how to scrimp a cow and not have the cow catch him at it. She may be a fool, but she is too smart for any man who thinks he can cheat her that way.

The man who says dirt will strain out does not know what he is talking about. The strainer that will take filth out of milk has never been invented. It can not be invented.

It is the man who understands each one of his cows that gets most out of them. That calls for patient study, not for a day, but for years. But it is studying that pays in dairying, after all.

We never had butter keep better than when we used the good, old-fashioned oak tub. Nothing better in the way of a package will ever be discovered, either, than that same old-fashioned oak tub.

The hands must come into use all the way in butter making, but they never should come in direct contact with the butter itself. Take it out with a ladle, work it with a ladle and put it into the package with a ladle.

The cow's bag is not made of India rubber. Some of us act as if we thought it was, and that the cow has no feeling in it. But she has. She is the most sensitive of creatures and no doubt suffers much at the hands of her milkers.

About the poorest way to make the butter come that I know of is to pour hot water into the cream or set the churn by the stove for an hour or two. Cream that has been properly ripened will come all right without any such doctoring, and doctored cream makes poor butter every time.

The cow which is a famous milker for one man may be nothing but an old scrub for another. It depends on the feed and treatment from start to finish. Of course, the cow that is well born will always show her bringing up; but the man has more to do with her success than most of us admit.

The cow is not like the threshing machine, which can take in bundles of grain, mixed with weeds and thistles, and turn out at the spout only the clean wheat. She must make her milk and butter from what she eats, and only clean, sweet grasses and grains will make pure butter that will "stand up" always and everywhere.

Nobody ever has exactly figured out just what is the relation between getting the cow all "roiled up" at milking time and a decided falling off in the quality of her milk, but it is a fixed fact that the man who allows his cows to be excited and wrought up at that time gets poorer butter by several points than if he treated his cows kindly.

France coins more gold than do other countries; 2500 tons of that precious metal turned into gold coin in the last forty years is her record; Great Britain has used up but 1400 tons in the same space of time for the same purpose.

THE HORSE THE MOST STUPID DUMB BRUTE.

By H. G. MURRAY.

MEN who are accustomed to dealing with animals and who have them in charge agree that the horse is one of the stupidest of all quadrupeds. The trainers in the circuses and zoological gardens make the same statement. This fact doubtless causes surprise to the average mortal, whose conception of the horse's intelligence is founded on sentiment and tales of fiction. Romance, the poet and the well-meaning but unenlightened though enthusiastic members of the S. P. C. A. have done much to strengthen this impression, but those who desire proof of this lack of intelligence may easily find it.

Take, for instance, the comparison between the horse and the elephant. The elephant possesses a sense of proportion, a thing of which the horse is absolutely devoid. It is a common sight in India to see elephants piling teakwood logs that they have brought from the river in the spring, when the logs have been floated down from the uplands. Many of the elephants so engaged, without driver or directions, will take their head and "true" the end of the timbers; that is, push them all even so that they present a uniform surface when piled up. It would be absolutely impossible to give a horse such a sense of proportion.

Again, if an elephant wishes to grapple anything with his trunk, he will not reach out for it until the object is within reaching distance. In other words, he is able to measure accurately the distance, and makes no futile attempt. The horse, on the other hand, can be seen stretching his head through a fence for food that he cannot reach, and will launch out with his hind hoofs for an object which he wishes to strike ten feet in the rear.

The elephant, before stepping on a bridge or other structure that he has cause to doubt, will first test its strength. The horse, on the other hand, will take the most rickety bridge at full gallop, trusting blindly to his master to save him from calamity.

In the matter of counting almost any animal is superior to the horse. Even the crow, as has been demonstrated, can be made to count accurately as far as five. Repeated tests with the horse in this particular have failed.

It is true that an educated horse in a circus will do a great many things that on the surface appear highly intelligent, but investigation shows that they have simply been taught one or two things which they do in rotation, and are unable to exercise any mental faculties in the rendering outside of those called for in the performance of the duty already planned and mapped out and impressed upon his mind by years, possibly, of careful training.

The horse in his native wilds possesses no more intelligence than his domesticated brother. The elephant, the rhinoceros and the hippopotamus, all of whose bulk is many times larger than that of the horse, will move noiselessly through the forest, whereas the horse, whenever in rapid motion, will crash blindly ahead, attracting the attention of every carnivorous beast within hearing. He is absolutely devoid of the instincts governing self-preservation, his only protection being to launch blindly forth with his hind legs at any danger which threatens.

Again, as an example of the horse's mental limitations, is the fact that most of those dangers are fancied. How often you see a horse shy at a piece of white paper in the road or at some large rock in the side path, which a dog would pass by without a glance.

Many stories are told of the homing instincts of the horse; how, when his rider is lost upon the plains, and drops the reins upon his horse's neck, his "gallant steed" brings him safely through the storm to warmth and shelter. Now, any old fox hunter will tell you that if a fox be run through a country strange to both horses and hounds, the hounds will find their way home, each and every one, without any direction, even if it be raining hard and the back scent be destroyed. Cast your horse loose, however, and he will be utterly unable to find his way home, and wander over the country for weeks, until somebody takes pity on him and leads him home, with drooping head.

It is true, however, that a horse, when being driven, if left to guide himself, will frequently return home, provided that he has been going in the same direction since he left the stables. It is believed, in this case, that the horse takes the sun for his guide, as do most other animals. If, when he starts his journey, he is facing the rising sun and continues all morning long to face it, he will turn his back to it to return home, but drive him through a strange country, where the sun is now in front of him, now behind him, now on one side of him and now on the other, and he becomes so confused and loses his bearings so completely that in more than one instance horses have been known to fight for their head, and, when they were given it, have started out on a hard trot in exactly the opposite direction from their homes.

The average horse, also, is devoid of affection. He will run to the bars when called, because he expects food or shelter, and when led to the door will muzzle your hand, if he has been fed sugar, but how little true affection really exists is shown by the fact that a horse will seldom recognize a previous owner, even if the horse has been out of the owner's possession but a short time. A dog, on the contrary, will recognize his master's voice after years of absence.

If taken early in hand, the horse can be taught to do a few things, but his mind will be incapable of retaining more than one idea at a time. Give him two tasks to perform at once and he will prove unequal to the occasion. An apt illustration of this may be cited in the turning of a street corner by a horse in harness. You can take a young horse and go to the depot day after day, and he will keep this up for twenty years, going straight to the depot, under the guidance of the reins, and turn in where he has been accustomed to turning in; but drop the reins on his back, and if he is going to turn a familiar corner, guiding himself, the chances will be ten to one that he will turn short and wreck the carriage against the curb. In other words, in all his years of experience, he has not learned how much space to allow for the turning of a wagon, because he has never been taught that, and is incapable of exercising his own brain on the matter. There is probably no other animal, even the chicken, the most stupid of all barnyard fowls, that would not have more sense.

Most of the domesticated animals, if not all, with the exception of the horse, retain instincts which show their savage ancestry. A good example of this is that of the house dog, who, before lying down, will turn around in a circle several times. His ancestor, the wolf, or wild dog, always does this, to trample down the grass to make a bed for himself, and the trait has passed down from generation to generation. The strong sense of smell also has been retained, as well as the care of the body; as in not drinking too deeply when hot, or, when lying down in a field, to face his tracks so that he may be prepared for any enemy which is following his trail. The horse will evince none of these traits, but nearly always will overeat and overdrink whenever given a chance, and if picketed at night in a country in the vicinity of wolves, will stand shaking, miserable coward that he is, instead of making any preparation for his preservation. If loosened he will run away—the coward's course.

It is true that his beauty and willingness to serve his master make him the most valuable of all animals; but his value, however, comes not from his intelligence, but, rather, from his stupidity; for were he intelligent enough to know his own strength he would never submit so tamely to being ridden and driven.

The intelligence of the herbivorous animals is naturally not as fully developed as that of the carnivorous animals, since they do not have to hunt for their food, as do the latter, and to a certain extent that may excuse the horse for his stupidity.—New York Press.

How He Got His Title.

In the Senate cloakroom some one began chaffing Senator Blackburn on the great number of "generals," "majors" and "colonels" in Kentucky. Mr. Blackburn took the chaff in good part; indeed he even added to the merriment.

"A gentleman from Georgia who was visiting Lexington," he attests, "was presented to a Major Titherington, of that place. The Georgian, whose family has always been more or less inclined to the military, was charmed by the geniality of his new acquaintance, and, as Southerners are accustomed to do under such circumstances, began to question him as to his antecedents. Eventually they discovered that they were 'kin' in greater or less degree.

"Now, tell me," said the Georgian, "how you gained the rank of major—in the Civil War, I presume?"

"No, sir," replied the major.

"Oh, I see," responded the other, "then you were perhaps in the volunteer service during the recent little affair with 'pain?'"

"No, sir," said the major imperturbably; "to tell you the truth, sir, I am called 'major' because I married the widow of the late Major Sparks!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Tying Horses to Holes.

If you were traveling in the desert—just an ordinary California, New Mexico or Arizona desert—how would you tether your horse at night, there being not a bit of wood within 100 miles, and the Fitzhugh Lee patent tether having been left behind? Tie the lariat to your left leg, or to your wrist, eh? That has been done many a time by travelers completely exhausted by the heat, and in the midst of a deep sleep the animals, crazed for water, have galloped madly away, dragging their human anchors to destruction and death. The desert Indians, half-witted mortals, tie their steeds to holes in the ground. First, they dig the holes with their hands, which are like dog's paws, making the bottom larger than the top. Then they tie an immense knot on the end of the halter-rope, lower it into the hole and pack sand around it with their feet until it is about as hard as sandstone. How does that appeal to the inventive Yankee genius?

How to Do Without Servants.

It behooves all house mothers to meet the question of how to do without servants. And in order to keep up the standard of mental, spiritual and physical excellence in women, they must be willing to consider that it would be better to live on plainer food, to have fewer ornaments to dust in their homes, to wear less elaborate gowns, and to have more time to read with their children, to walk out under the beneficent skies of this fair land and to reflect on those things that are so abundantly set before the citizens of the twentieth century; that will make for an elevation of class, an entire leveling of conditions that depend on the grade of mind that meets them.—Florence Jackson Stoddard, in Sunset Magazine.

LITTLE THINGS Worth Knowing

A German innkeeper on the Swiss border has undertaken as a result of a wager to roll a barrel full of wine across Switzerland and Italy to Rome.

A "dying ground" of elephants, a resort where these animals go to die, was an interesting discovery by Major Powell-Cotton in Eastern Equatorial Africa.

Toronto, Canada's city of churches, possesses one church which is probably unique throughout all the realms of the King. The Jarvis Street Baptist Church although legally exempt from civic taxation, insists upon paying its taxes.

It is not generally known that in many parts of the world clay is eaten on bread as a substitute for butter. This is termed "stone butter," and is used in many parts of Germany. In northern parts of Sweden earth is often baked in bread.

The crookedest railway in the world is one from Boswell to Friedens, Pa., the airline distance being five miles. The road doubles itself four times, and at one point, after making a loop of about five miles, the road comes back to within 300 feet of itself on a grade fifty feet lower.

A sand worm of the northern and western coasts of France seems to have a sense of time. It is known as "convoluta," and M. Beha states that it makes green spots on the sand at low tide and disappears as the tide rises, and continued this course fourteen days in an aquarium.

A remarkably fine diamond has been found in a meteorite which recently fell in Diablo Canon, near Crater Mountain, Arizona. The meteor itself was much broken by contact with the rocky ground upon which it fell, and the diamond was found firmly embedded in one of the fragments.

SOME UNIQUE INVENTIONS.

A Queer Contrivance For Destroying Objectionable Moths and Insects.

"A new invention for doing away with moths and insects attracted at night by lights has been patented by a Virginian," said an official of the Patent Office. "His invention embodies a suitable source of illumination for attracting the insects at night, and a pan or receptacle containing a fluid in which the insects are entrapped. It is customary to erect insects destroyers of this type in an orchard or other location where the moth flies and deposits its eggs during the night time, and to burn the illuminant during a portion of the night, and then to extinguish it, but so long as the illuminant is burning brightly it attracts the insects from distant points, which would not otherwise be present in the place which it is desired to protect. Then, when the light is suddenly extinguished, the effect is worse than if the exterminator had not been in operation, owing to the large number of insects that have been attracted to the locality without being caught. It is also desirable to avoid requiring the experimentor, to extinguish it at certain hours of the night, as, for instance, at moonrise, after which time the device is useless. The object of this invention is to provide means whereby the area of the attractive influence of the insect destroyer may be gradually diminished so that the device will discontinue to draw from distant points, but will continue its attractive influence in its immediate vicinity a sufficient time to gather in and destroy all of the insects that have been attracted to it. A further object is to accomplish final extinguishment of the illuminant at a predetermined time, and thus save the waste without the necessity of attending the device after it is once set."

Another unique invention is that to control scratching chickens. It consists of a small band or collar to go around his roostership's leg. From this a small stick is run back in such a way as to rest on the ground at the opposite end from the chicken's leg. One of these go on each leg. When Sir Rooster goes to scratch in any lady's garden he raises his foot, but cannot put it down without taking a step forward. If he persists in his effort to scratch he will soon discover that the anti-scratcher has walked him step by step out of the garden.—Washington Star.

The Madstone Worked.

The Bundy madstone has just completed its longest record in clinging to a wound caused by a dog bite. The patient was Miss Stella Huffman, of Tiffin, O., and the stone clung to her for seven hundred and fifty-five hours. Miss Huffman was bitten by a dog two years ago, and the poison had so affected her system that when she went to Newcastle, Ind., she had lost the use of one eye. However the stone drew the poison out to such an extent that she regained her sight, and, although weak from the night and day treatment, will return home in a few days in better health than she has enjoyed for years. The stone worked wonders in this case, and physicians are puzzled.—Indianapolis News.

Ripans Tabules are the best dyspepsia medicine ever made. A hundred millions of them have been sold in the United States in a single year. Every illness resulting from a disordered stomach is relieved or cured by their use. So common is it that diseases originate in the stomach it may be safely asserted there is no condition of ill health that will not be benefited or cured by the occasional use of Ripans Tabules. Physicians know them and recommend them. All druggists sell them. The five-cent package is enough for an ordinary occasion, and the family bottle, sixty cents, contains a household supply for a year. One Tabule generally gives relief within twenty minutes.

DEADENING THE NOISE OF MACHINERY.

Suspended Foundations Said to Prove Satisfactory.

Hair felt has repeatedly received mention as a means of deadening vibrations and noise from machinery, placed, for this purpose, between engine bedplates and foundation capstones, and underneath rails subject to heavy train traffic. Now, however, cork is said to have been used in Germany with the same end in view, the available particulars being to the effect that a sheet, made up of flat pieces of the cork, in mosaic fashion, corresponding in size to the bedplate of the noisy machine, and held together by an iron frame, is laid under the machine. What measure of success has been obtained with this new expedient is not told, though, as a means of temporary relief, it probably answered the intended purpose. The true solution of most, if not all, machinery vibration problems is, however, to be found in proper foundations, ample in area and weight, and it generally pays to provide these if at all practicable. To what exercise of ingenuity the engineer is sometimes put in accomplishing this was illustrated a dozen or more years ago in one large factory where, on an upper floor, a row of small engines had to be installed for the independent driving of a corresponding number of different machines. Though the building was of substantial construction, with steel floor beams, it was a foregone conclusion that that row of engines would cause trouble if set with nothing but the floor as foundation, and as it was undesirable to raise them much above the floor level, each engine was provided with a separate foundation, built up of brick and mortar in the usual way, but suspended by steel straps between the floor beams, and thus projecting down into the head room of the floor below. Seen from there, each foundation, with its engine, appeared as if resting on airy nothing. But those suspended foundations accomplished all that was expected of them as vibration absorbers.—Cassier's Magazine.

Utah was the appropriate place for holding the recent irrigation congress. That is where the irrigation movement first began in this country. Sixty-six years ago Brigham Young dug a ditch and induced the clear waters of city creek to irrigate the alkaline soil of the Land of Desert, which now blooms and blossoms like the rose.

Hard to Exterminate.

The captain of a well-known Australian clipper, the Caduceus, wishing to clear his ship of rats, offered his crew a glass of grog for every rodent killed or captured. The result was speedily apparent in the diminished number of rats, yet, somehow or other, there were always a few, the crew, anxious for supplies of grog, having devised a means of manufacturing them out of oakum. The captain's curiosity was aroused one day by noticing a supposed rodent floating very "light" on the port quarter. He waited his chance, and when the next man appeared with a rat the captain remarked: "Throw it to windward." The result was dead against the sailor, for the oakum rodent was blown back onto the poop. Thenceforth there were no more rats and no more extra grog.—Shipping World.

It is only far out of the beaten track now, or on special occasions like fetes, that you see universally the costumes and customs of the old Armorican peninsula. Only an hour's journey from Quimper, the modernized chief town of Finistere, and you are among the Bigoudines, a people whose dress suggests the Eskimos and Chinese, whose faces are strongly Mongolian in type, and who in language, customs, and beliefs seem to have no relation with the rest of France. More and more the picturesque problem they present is coming to attract attention. Artists, students and tourists alike are fascinated by it.—From Andre Sagot's "The Bigoudines" in the Century.

CAPITOL BUILDING, SALEM, OREGON.

A Letter From The Governor of Oregon.

Peruna is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Letters of congratulation and commendation testifying to the merits of Peruna as a catarrh remedy are pouring in from every State in the Union. Dr. Hartman is receiving hundreds of such letters daily. All classes write these letters, from the highest to the lowest.

The outdoor laborer, the indoor artisan the clerk, the editor, the statesman, the preacher—all agree that Peruna is the catarrh remedy of the age. The stage and rostrum, recognizing catarrh as their greatest enemy, are especially enthusiastic in their praise and testimony.

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well nigh universal, almost omnipresent. Peruna is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to cheat catarrh out of its victims. Peruna not only cures catarrh, but prevents it. Every household should be supplied with this great remedy for coughs, colds and so forth.

The Governor of Oregon is an ardent admirer of Peruna. He keeps it continually in the house. In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman he says:

STATE OF OREGON,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Dear Sirs—I have had occasion to use your Peruna medicine in my family for colds, and it proved to be an excellent remedy. I have had occasion to use it for other ailments.

Your very truly,
W. M. Lord.

It will be noticed that the Governor says he has had occasion to use Peruna for other ailments. The reason for this is, most other ailments begin with a cold. Using Peruna to promptly cure colds, he protects his family against other ailments. This is exactly what every other family in the United States should do. Keep Peruna in the house. Use it for coughs, colds, la grippe, and other climatic affections of winter, and there will be no other ailments in the house. Such families should provide themselves with a copy of Dr. Hartman's free book, entitled "Winter Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

Army Remount Stations.

Members of the general staff of the army are considering the establishment of remount depots, where all horses and mules for use in the service may be received and trained before sent to various posts. The necessity for such depots has been urged by officers for some time, and Quartermaster-General Humphrey, and by other officers. Great breeding farms, where the government might carry on experiments in the raising of horses suited to the service, have been suggested, but this plan would require a large appropriation, and is not seriously considered. The general staff will doubtless agree on the location of several remount depots and give the proposed system for handling horses a trial. As most of the horses used by the army are supplied by the middle West, the depots will doubtless be in the Mississippi valley.

Miss Gannon, Sec'y Detroit Amateur Art Association, tells young women what to do to avoid pain and suffering caused by female troubles.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can conscientiously recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to those of my sisters suffering with female weakness and the troubles which so often befall women. I suffered for months with general weakness, and felt so weary that I had hard work to keep up. I had shooting pains, and was utterly miserable. In my distress I was advised to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it was a red letter day to me when I took the first dose, for at that time my restoration began. In six weeks I was a changed woman, perfectly well in every respect. I felt so elated and happy that I want all women who suffer to get well as I did."—MISS GUILA GANNON, 359 Jones St., Detroit, Mich., Secretary Amateur Art Association.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

When one considers that Miss Gannon's letter is only one of the countless hundreds which we are continually publishing in the newspapers of this country, the great virtue of Mrs. Pinkham's medicine must be admitted by all.

Necessity For Drainage.

In the improvement of earth roads one very important essential often overlooked is the necessity for drainage to carry off the surplus water before it can soak into the surface, says Good Roads Magazine. Good roads can be constructed even in a prairie country, and by the adoption of improved methods immediate recovery from the effects of heavy rains may be insured. Tile draining is very effective, and with even a shallow dressing of crushed stone or gravel on the surface of an earth road wonderful improvement can be secured.

HIGHWAY BUILDING.

IMPROVING EARTH ROADS WITH CLAY AND SAND

How to Use and Apply Them to Secure the Best Results—The Use of Road Machines in Building These Highways.

In an interesting address delivered at the Greenville (Mich.) good roads convention Frank F. Rogers, C. E., had the following to say regarding the improvement of earth roads:

If you must always have an earth road and cannot get gravel or stone at a reasonable cost put clay on the sand and sand on the clay. When these become suitably mixed, they will form a sort of hardpan, making a very good road surface at most seasons of the year. Of course, the clay is good when hard and dry and the sand quite passable when the weather is so wet that nobody wants to travel; but to secure a medium earth road, good the greatest number of days in the year, that it is possible to make it, this is the best method that we can prescribe.

It should be borne in mind that neither improvement is very good until suitably mixed, and clay should be applied to sand in a manner to secure that mixture as speedily as possible and vice versa.

Decide on the width of a given road between ditches—say twenty to twenty-four feet, not much narrower and not much wider. These are economical widths, and the lack of uniformity in this particular is one of the greatest evils of our lack of system in road building all over this country. Bring the road to a suitable crown from twelve to eighteen inches above the side gutters. This, however, will have to be varied to meet the special needs of drainage for the locality, and should a large ditch be required on a narrow road it should be entirely outside the regular gutter, which will protect the vehicles from the danger of tipping over.

To prepare the bed it may have to be plowed toward the center, but, if so, do not disturb the old roadbed unless absolutely necessary. After plowing, harrow thoroughly, take a road machine and shape the whole bed to a perfectly rounded shape and roll till no more compacting is possible with a roller weighing four tons or more. A farm roller is of little use for this purpose.

After the bed is properly shaped and rolled as described take a road machine and crowd enough earth to each side of a central strip of such width as it may be desirable to cover with clay or gravel. This being done, clay should be applied on sand to the depth of five or six inches where no gravel is used and to the depth of three or four inches where a dressing of as much gravel can be placed upon the clay. After the clay is applied, it may be leveled with a road machine if well pulverized, or, if lumpy, it may be leveled by first rolling to crush the lumps, then harrowing till smooth, but in each case it must be rolled till hard after a smooth surface has been secured.

Where no gravel is used the clay must be covered with from one to two inches of sand by reversing the road machine and crowding a little of the surplus sand from the sides to the center. This will prevent the roads from becoming muddy at the first wet spell. If a top dressing of gravel is used, it should be applied to the thin coat of clay immediately after rolling, then be brought to a true surface by the use of a road machine and rolled till it is thoroughly compacted. If the weather is dry, the gravel should be kept sprinkled during the final rolling.

When sand is used on clay, we usually secure as good results as by putting clay in sand, for it does not always prevent mud when the ground is extremely soft. A clay road should always be well piked with good side ditches, which must quickly take the water to its nearest natural outlet, which in turn must always be so well kept as to take the water at once away from the road allowance. Sand should be applied to clay after the picking is done, without forming any depression for its reception, as has been recommended for gravel. Sand should never be applied at a season of the year when a long dry spell is expected, but rather immediately before wet fall weather and winter sets in, so that by the next season it may become sufficiently mixed with clay to produce the condition already referred to. The same practice should be employed when any considerable depth of loose gravel is applied to a clay soil with the expectation that travel will make it hard.

The application of sand and gravel to clay, as above described, can be done in layers, giving time for the first layer to pack before the second is applied. It is often advisable to wait till the next fall before the second layer is applied, thus giving time to watch results and use just the depth required to secure the best effect, as well as to economize material. After all this is done we have not secured a permanent road suited to heavy traffic, and we shall be obliged to look to the better grades of gravel and broken stone to produce any roads that may really be called permanent.

BAY STATE ROADS.

Some Facts About the Highways of Massachusetts.

It costs on an average $8,000 per mile to build a state road in Massachusetts, says the Boston Globe, but the actual cost depends on locality and conditions, hardly two cases being alike. One-fourth of the cost of a state road is borne by the county in which it is situated, the balance being contributed by the state.

The work of the highway commission has developed a number of high class professional roadbuilders. Many of the younger and more ambitious have entered the employ of the national government in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines in the same line of work. Most of the state roads are of broken stone, but a few are of gravel. The type of road built is determined by the engineer, who makes careful examination of soils, drainage, gravel, stone, grades and traffic.

The thickness of stone on state roads varies from four to sixteen inches, the lesser being placed over good gravel or sand, the greater over heavy clay. The broken stone used on state roads passes through half inch, inch and a half and two and a half inch screens. The largest size is placed on the bottom, the second size on top of this and the crown is made with half inch material. All are rolled separately and thoroughly.

The cost of trap rock for roadbuilding varies from $1.10 per ton to $1.60 per ton. The state owns seventeen steam rollers, which are employed in state roadbuilding. The standard width of stone roadways in Massachusetts built by the commission is fifteen feet. There are some only ten and twelve feet wide, but they are not deemed economical to maintain.

When a state road is constructed, it remains under the control of the state highway commission. The local authorities are taxed an amount not to exceed $50 per mile for maintenance.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

In the correspondence columns of this paper will be found a suggestion by "Citizen" that is well worthy of consideration. He suggests that a mass meeting or conference be held at which candidates could be selected for the various offices and a general plan of campaign originated. Considering the diversity of opinion that has existed between the white men of this county, and the general desire of the great majority to get once more together, there appears good reason to think that an open conference would be conducive to this much desired end. Of course, this conference in suggesting candidates, would not preclude any man from becoming a candidate if he so desired, but it would be a boom to those who were favorably mentioned by the conference.

Hon. Tipton Mullins returned a day or two ago from an extended tour through Texas, Oklahoma and the Indian Territory. He speaks very interestingly of the places he has visited, and has acquired some valuable information respecting the boll weevil, which we hope to give our readers next week.

The Democratic State Executive Committee has declared Monday, April 11, as the day to hold a primary election for the nomination of State officers, and it may fairly be assumed that the County Committee will probably name the same date to nominate county officers. This give three months in which candidates may make the good people acquainted with their merits and particular fitness for the office to which they aspire.

Times change and people adapt themselves to different conditions. It is worthy ambition for any man to desire to fill a public office, but before any man becomes a candidate for the suffrages of the people in any capacity, he should first ask himself if he is capable of filling the office. Time has been when a mans popularity among his fellow citizens elected him to an office his education and acquirements did not permit him to fill satisfactory. In these days State examiners see to it that each officer keeps a correct record of the business of his office, or he is called to account.

The Republican county executive committee met Monday and split. Of the fourteen members present ten were of the "Black and Tan" persuasion, and four were "Lily-whites." The black and tans seem to have the best of it. Anyway there will be two Republican conventions, and presumably contesting delegations to the Republican State and Congressional conventions.

At the same day some of onr old Populist friends held some sort of a meeting, but what they said or did is a profound secret. Whether it was too good or two bad for the public to know I have not been able to learn.

The Peoples Savings Bank is doing a flourishing business and gaining in popularity every day. At the annual meeting of stockholders last Saturday a dividend of 8 per cent was declared and a balance carried to surplus fund. Some changes were made in the board of directors and W. I. Mullins was elected vice-president in place of Judge Adams who resigned.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Clanton, Ala., Jan. 12, 1904

Editor Banner—I wish to ask a few questions, and first, I wish to ask why should the people in Chilton county be divided into three political parties? What do the masses of the people get out of it? Is this division among the people beneficial to the people? If not, who gets anything out of it?

Come, now, let us reason together and see if we can, as taxpayers and neighbors, find out who is helped by the political strife and division that is being kept up between the people in Chilton county. I admit that the Republicans have charge of the national government, and in order to look after the patronage it may be necessary for the Republicans to keep up their organization. But how about the people who are not Republicans, what advantage is the continual strife to them? The answer is plain. It is not worth anything except to a few men who may get elected to office. The people are aroused and stirred up one against another, unpleasant feelings exist, and a few men reap the reward in being elected to office. Who will say that this is not the true state of facts? And now, what is the remedy?

Let the people come together without regard to party or politics and talk the matter over in a friendly manner, and all agree on a plan as to nominations, and recommend the names of good and consistent men. And let the people say in a primary whether or not they endorse the men and the plan, and all strife will end and we will be a united people, and by so doing the best men will fill the offices and the people will be served. And service is what the people want, and when the people are served by honest and competent men of the people's choosing the public is satisfied. Why not try this or some better plan. If any citizen has a better plan let us have it. But above all things let us see if we cannot end this useless strife. CITIZEN.

J. OSMOND MIDDLETON
ELECTED MAYOR OF CLANTON, 1904

CLANTON MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

The election of a Mayor and four Councilmen for the Town of Clanton took place last Monday and resulted in the return of the following gentlemen:

For Mayor—J. Osmond Middleton.

For Councilmen—W. I. Mullins, J. M. Potts, E. G. Rollins and W. M. Wilson.

No opposition was presented to Mr. Middleton for Mayor, but some was offered to the Councilmen, the names of W. D. Spigener and Dr. P. I. Hopkins being substituted for some of the nominees on the citizens ticket. Both are good men and would have been acceptable to the citizens of Clanton, but the citizens ticket was elected as nominated, and makes an excellent board for the Town for 1904.

Above we give a portrait of the new Mayor, a young man, full of life and energy, who has grown to manhood amongst us, has seen the Town grow since its incorporation; and is alive to what is needed for its further improvement. He is thoroughly identified with our people and their interests, and will push the advancement of the Town as far as circumstances will permit.

In June, 1903, he graduated in law at the State University, at Tuscaloosa. Immediately after graduating he came home and set himself in earnest to the practice of his chosen profession, forming a partnership with Mr. A. C. Smith; as a practitioner he has been remarkably successful for one of his years; he is growing rapidly in his profession, and his success, so far, has been all that his friends could have hoped for.

It is as an orator that Mr. Middleton is more widely known, and he never seems so happy as when he appears before the people in this capacity. He was one of the finest orators at the University while there; and on various occasions he has demonstrated to his friends how well he deserved that distinction. He has made a number of speeches at Confederate reunions in this county, and last May he delivered an addres before the Ladie's Memorial Association at Hayneville, being invited to fill the place of the late Hon. Tenant Lomax, an honor of which any young man might well be proud, and a task but which few young men could dare undertake. The splendid manner in which he acquitted himself is shown by the editorial comments on his speech, one paper saying that "the excellent flow of his beautiful language was as sweet to the ear as the fragrance of roses to the nasal organs." That speech was pronounced to be one of the finest ever delivered there on similar occasions.

J. Osmond Middleton has a bright future before him. He is a young man of whom Chilton county may well be proud, and of whom her citizens may well expect great things.

W. I. Mullins is too well known to require any introduction. He has served the town as councilman before and will use his best efforts bring Clanton to the front rank of Alabama cities.

J. M. Potts has also served his apprenticeship as councilman, and with his practical knowledge has greatly improved our streets.

E. G. Rollins is a new man in town affairs, but has made an excellent record as a county officer, which he will doubtless enhance as a town councilmen.

W. M. Wilson is another old councilman who brings experience to bear in all matters affecting the welfare of Clanton.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. Shoults.

Not much news from your reporter this week.

Our debate was a great success, and many good and bad points were brought out about corn and cotton. But cotton won the day; I don't know why; maybe because nearly all the girls were on the cotton side. I think that corn ought to have won.

Mr. O. P. Kelly, O. A Latham and Miss Lillian Smitherman were among our visitors this week.

Our scholars come all sorts of weather. But Thursday was so bad it kept a number of our girls at home. However, on Friday morning they handed in their lessons written out, and then put in extra work to make up.

Fay Hicks, 98½, and Fanny Hicks, 98, are the highest pupils this week. The names of George Woolley, Vergel Kelly, Grover Merchant, Eddy Ellis, Rosa Ellis, Armour Woolley, Lena Walker, Gertrude Woolley, Bush Shoults and Kate Latham were also posted.

The best class in the school perhaps, is the primary. There are twelve little boys and girls in the class and they are all fine speakers, splendid readers and writers. Their map drawing, for instance, is a model of beauty and correctness.

Listen for another wedding at the Collins bridge.

Canada has one Pacific railroad, has arranged to build another and projected a third. In improved waterways the Canadians are a long way ahead. The Dominion, with only 5,000,000 people, is making a great record in providing transportation facilities.

An amazing variety of methods of treating tormenting diseases is set before the public by adventurous persons who delight in experimenting on themselves, declares the New York Tribune. A long continued diet not much above the starvation limit is recommended by some of these unwise counselors for the cure of certain afflictions. Thousands of years ago the owner of a valuable horse fed his sick animal on shavings as a light and innocuous means of satisfying the cravings of the unfortunate creature's stomach. The disease passed away. So did the horse. Human beings who imitate Dr. Tanner and try to live almost entirely on air and water may not reach the age of Methusaleh.

A great educational work is going on in France. In every city, and even in some small villages, educational clubs are being organized among the people. "We want to know the truth about science and government and industry," is the motto of these clubs. They are in every case self-supporting. Not one has been assisted by government or by any wealthy man. In most cases the dues are 10 cents a month. Lectures are given by professors, newspaper men and wage workers. All classes of people mingle in these clubs. The names which many of them adopt are peculiar. One is called the "Ideal Spirit," another the "Co-operation of Ideas," another the "Coming of the People," another the "Emancipation." The first of the clubs was organized less than four years ago, yet it has at the present time 5,000 members. A description of the new movement is given in the Independent by Professor Steeg, of Paris.

"Marriage would no longer be a failure if labiology were understood by the people who now wed blindly, for better or worse. Labiology is a most important scientific study—the study of character by the shape, expression and texture of the lips." So declares Miss Lillian Kemble, of Chicago. "It is simply a revelation. Either the lips are too thick or too thin; some looking like a square cut in the face—a mere porthole for food and an export hole for talk—while others appear weak and infantile. It seems that two fleshy folds surrounding the orifice of the mouth—or, in less technical terms the lips—are ineffaceably impressed with marks of character and may be read with the same ease and interest as the latest book by one initiated into the mysteries of the lip language. These, for instance, are the infallible signs for youths to study if they would shun an unhappy alliance and find the road to connubial bliss."

Says the New York Evening Telegram: "What absurd nonsense is this recent London idea that women should not blush! Shyness is to be eliminated from the personality of the modern woman, and she is never to show a feeling of modesty by the mantling of the roses in her cheeks. We have it positively asserted that a teacher of the art of non-blushing has severely taken to task the women who heard her lecture because they were so feminine as to show by the roseate color in their cheeks that they were affected, sentimentally or otherwise, by remarks addressed to them. Shyness, says this apostle of the new cult, is merely a form of conceit. It is the result of one believing one's self greater than one really is. To cure it the teacher has decided to debate it out of the personality of those who sit at her feet and drink in the wisdom which flows from her lips. Out upon such an idea, anyhow! Far better that woman be conceited, that she imagine herself a hundred times greater than she really is, than that she lose the blush which so charmingly steals into her cheeks at various moments of sentimental import during her life. Mankind in general wants none of a latter day philosophy that steals the roses away from brunette or blonde. To blush, and blush prettily—and what woman does not?—is to win many a young gallant who is overpowered by the rich tinge of beauty that most fitly sets off other charms that accompany it. Don't reform the blush. There are other subjects far more important."

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

JANUARY 7TH.

Mr. Morgan occupied the time of the senate in a reply to the speech of Mr. Lodge, delivered Tuesday. Mr. Morgan again criticised the president and the attitude of this government in connection with the Panama republic. He introduced numerous newspaper extracts to bear out his contention that the revolution was assisted by officers and citizens of the United States.

Mr. Morgan said that if the United States should withdraw from the isthmus Colombia would quickly drive out the few revolutionists and their supporters.

Mr. Morgan in opening said he proposed to have the ayes and nays on various propositons advanced in his resolution; that the debate on the resolution had not controverted any of these propositions, nor had the debate been directed to any question touching upon the merits of the resolution.

The senate in executive session ordered the printing of the testimonial introduced before the military affairs committee in the investigation of charges against the confirmation of Brigadier General Wood to be major general. The brief made by Senator Foraker, setting forth the views of the majority, also will be printed.

The senate decided not to make the documents public.

Representative Burnett, of Alabama, favorably reported from the public lands committee the bill turning over about 90,000 acres of the public lands of Alabama to the common school system of the state. The bill is amended so as to protect certain settlers who homesteaded through mistake.

A prominent democratic senator said: "Study on the engineering features of the Panama route have convinced me that no one now living will ever see a canal constructed by that route."

Senator Fairbanks presented to the senate the favorable report of the committee on foreign relatons on the extradition treaty between the United States and The Netherlands.

The house was in session but twenty minutes. Mr. Hemenway, chairman of the committee on appropriations, obtained unanimous consent that one hour be devoted at the opening of tomorrow's session to the consideration of a bill amending the act appropriating $500,000 for the eradication of foot and mouth disease among cattle, so as to make $250,000 of that amount available to meet the emergency caused by the Mexican boll weevil. The bill was favorably reported today.

JANUARY 8TH.

Alleged postoffice frauds were under discussion in the senate, the subject being opened by a set speech by Mr. Simmons, of North Carolina, who insisted there should be an investigation by the senate into the charges. Mr. Platt, of Connecticut, denied that the republicans were trying to cover up any wrong in the postoffice department.

The republican contention was that there had been a thorough investigation by the postoffice department, and that a senate investigation was now being pressed by the democrats for partisan purposes. The democrats insisted that there were facts and charges that the republicans were trying to smother.

The senate adjourned until Monday.

When the senate met Mr. Scott, of West Virginia, offered a joint resolution providing for an investigation of the Darien canal route. He made a brief speech in support of the proposition for a sea level canal, stating that such a waterway would be only thirty miles in length.

The house made available the sum of $250,000 to be used to meet the emergency caused by the ravages of the cotton boll weevil and other insects, and diseases affecting cotton. The measure was adopted without division, meeting general support. The sum is to be diverted from the half million dollars appropriated last year to eradicate the foot disease among cattle.

One hundred and fifteen bills were passed in twenty minutes.

JANUARY 11TH.

Senator Scott, of the senate committee on military affairs, has submitted in executive session of the senate a review of the evidence introduced by the committee in the hearing on the nomination of Brigadier General Wood to be a major general.

He prefaced his remarks with the statement that confirmation to so high a position as that of major general should be made with due deliberation, and the person to be confirmed should be highly qualified and in every way worthy and above suspicion.

The senate, in executive session, laid on the table the motion to reconsider the confirmation of the nomination of W. I. Buchanan to be minister to Panama. By this action Mr. Buchanan has now full powers to act for this government in all diplomatic exchanges between the United States and the new republic.

The house adjourned early out of respect to the memory of the late Representative Skiles, of Ohio.

The house unanimously adopted a resolution calling upon the attorney general for a full report on the disposition of the five hundred thousand dollars appropriation by congress for the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, the great salary bill of the government, was reported and carries $28,258,295, which is $94,680 in excess of the appropriation for the current year and $1,452,805 less than the aggregate.

Banker Dead.

By the death of W. C. O'Neal, president of the American National bank of Pensacola, Fla., and of the Enterprise Banking company, of Enterprise, Ala., Florida loses a wealthy citizen and a great deal of litigation is ended.

A few months ago he became engaged in a difficulty with a man who held the position of referee in bankruptcy and struck him. On the claim that it was for the latter's official acts, he was imprisoned for contempt of court. He was active in pushing impeachment charges against Judge Swayne.

He died of heart trouble, and it is supposed that this was induced by worry over his imprisonment and the impeachment charges.

Mr. O'Neal was vice president of the National bank of Dothan, Ala., and director of the banks of Marion, Fla., and Greenville and Andalusia, Ala., and of the Montgomery, Ala., Street Railway company.

Lengthened the Hours.

A unanimous decision was reached by the cabinet Friday that the hours of labor for government employees shall be from 9 a. m. until 4:30 p. m., a half hour of that time being allowed for luncheon. The new regulation went into effect Monday.

The question was raised by the appropriations committees of the house and senate on applications made to them for additional clerks. It was pointed out by the committees that the law distinctly provides that employees should work seven hours a day, and that, under the present system, the government was getting only six and a half hours of labor. The committees urged that, as a matter of economy, the present employes ought to be required to work full seven hours.

The decision affects 100,000 employes, and adds 114 1-2 hours of labor annually to each employe's time.

FOUR RESIDENCES BURNED.

Early Tuesday morning in Birmingham, Ala., fire destroyed the residence of Dr. F. F. Snedecor, the adjoining house of C. B. Ratliff and the kindergarten of Miss Williams were totally destroyed, and the residence of John Lewis was badly damaged.

The total loss will amount to nearly $20,000, covered by about $12,000 insurance.

The fire originated in the Ratliff house, which was nearly complete. It is supposed to have started from a fire which was built on one of the hearths for the purpose of drying the plastering on the walls, although this is not positively known to be a fact.

Supposed Suicide.

The remains of the farmer, "Doc" Slaton, of Valley Head, who in a fit of mental hallucination some four months ago left home, declaring that he was going away to kill himself, were found in the woods Monday.

When found the body was horribly mutilated by hogs, and there was but little left save the skeleton. There was evidence of a bullet hole through the skull. The coat and overcoat were on the ground some little distance from the body. The pistol with all the chambers empty except one was lying on the ground not far from the body. The inference is that Slaton carried out his threat and shot himself.

Machen Case Called.

The cases of August W. Machen, former general superintendent of the free delivery service, Samuel A. and Diller B. Groff, of Washington city, and Mr. and Mrs. George E. Lorenz of Toledo, all of whom are charged with defrauding the government by conspiracy in connection with the sale of box fasteners to the postoffice, were called for trial Monday in Washington. Many witnesses are on hand and it is probable the trial will proceed without further delay.

Captain R. P. Hobson has announced that he will oppose J. H. Bankhead for congress from the sixth Alabama district.

A $90,000 bond issue for the construction of a court house upon the site of the building recently burned at Meridian, Miss., has been awarded to the First National bank of that city. The bonds run for twenty years and bear 5 per cent interest. They sold at a premium of $4,225.

The steamer Rees Pritchard struck a snag and sank in the Mississippi near Satartia. No lives were lost. An effort will be made to raise the sunken steamer.

The steamer Connasauga, Captain George Gould, struck a snag about 2 miles above Gadsden, Ala., and she is now resting on the bottom of the river. No lives were lost and all of the cargo was saved.

Tom Armour Killed.

An attempt at arrest of both Tom and Harrison Armour was made in a house near Boaz, where the men were at breakfast. Tom jumped behind a chimney corner and opened fire on the officers, who riddled him with buckshot. During the melee Harrison escaped. He was tracked for three miles, but not overtaken.

Tom Armour, wanted on a charge of killing William Little at Morris, Ala., several months ago, was killed at Boaz Monday afternoon by a deputy sheriff who was attempting to arrest him. Warrants for Harrison and Tom Armour, charged with the murder of Little, have been out for some time and rewards of $250 for the capture of either of the men were offered.

The sale of the foundry plant of the Bates Metal company, of Birmingham, Ala., to the Ajax company of Philadelphia for $72,169 has resulted in a confusion of reports concerning an alleged leakage from the storekeeping department of the Southern railway. No such shortage exists, it is claimed.

Santos Dumont has arrived in the United States and will contest for the world's fair prize of $100,000 for an air ship.

Admiral Evans, who commands the Asiatic squadron, has been ordered from Guam to the Philippines. The official explanation is that the step is taken in order that the absence of the American war ships from northern Asiatic waters may serve as evidence of the strict neutrality of the United States in any conflict between Russia and Japan.

Cuban Senate.

On Monday the Cuban senate, after cleaning up legislative business and being in readiness to adjourn until spring, rushed the ratification of the so-called parliament treaty with the United States. There was no debate and the vote was taken by a show of hands.

The treaty includes all the provisions of the Platt amendment verbatim. This was the proposition of the Cuban government made because of the desire to eventually eliminate the amendment from the legislation and so remove the cause of the constant criticism of the makers of the constitution for accepting such an amendment from the United States.

Coal Mine Figures.

Fifty-seven men lost their lives in and around coal mines in Alabama in 1903. According to the report of State Mine Inspector Gray, nineteen of these were white men and thirty-eight colored. Only one man lost his life last year from gas explosion.

About one million more tons of coal were produced in 1903 than during the previous year. It is estimated the production for the past year will aggregate 12,000,000 tons.

ON A TECHNICALITY

Pineapple Indictments Quashed: New Trial Ordered.

At the special term of the circuit court which has been in session and which resulted in the indictment of five white men at Pineapple, Ala., under the charges of arson and murder came to an abrupt termination Saturday.

Attorneys for the defense moved to quash the indictment on the ground that J. M. Williams had been drawn as a grand juror but that his brother J. E. Williams had served.

After hearing the arguments on the question Judge Moore ordered the indictments quashed and adjourned the special term.

He then immediately gave notice of the holding of another special term Monday morning and ordered the sheriff to hold the prisoners to await the action of the jury then to be empanelled.

The new grand jury will be drawn Monday to report Wednesday. L. E. Jeffries has been retained by Pineapple citizens to assist Solicitor Quarles in the prosecution.

The New Chief.

Major-general Adna R. Chaffee was sworn in Saturday as chief of the general staff. The formal ceremony took place in the presence of Secretary of War Root. Gen. Chaffee has the distinction of having risen from the ranks since 1861.

During the period he led the American forces in the advance on Pekin, he made a favorable showing in comparison with the best soldiers of the great armies represented. Then he was given command of the army in the Philippines. Here he had trouble with Governor Taft and in view of the fact that the latter is about to become secretary of war the differences between the two are being discussed with much interest in army circles. Gen. Chaffee and Governor Taft could not agree as to the location of the line dividing the civil and military authority in the islands. The dispute was carried up to the president, and he sent a peremptory message directing them to reach an agreement without delay. They did, but it is understood that relations between the two still remain strained.

A Sealed Verdict.

The fate of Harry Newton, the Elmore county murderer, has been settled by a jury of his peers and returned to the court at Wetumpka, Ala., sealed.

The trial of Newton has been one of the most notable ever held in Elmore county. He was charged with the murder of Samuel Lacey on October 13th last and the details of this murder as published were so horrible as to shock the entire community. He was recently pardoned for a murder at Tuscaloosa in 1897.

Murderous Assault.

Martin J. Coniff, with headquarters now at Laurel, Miss., was assaulted in a saloon at Bessemer, Ala., and so badly injured that there is grave doubt as to his recovery.

The deed was done by Taylor Smith, a mulatto barkeeper employed by the saloon, and the act was evidently committed for the purpose of robbery, as Mr. Coniff had shown considerable money while around the saloon. Mr. Coniff's skull is fractured.

Eleven minority stockholders of the Southern Steamship company, Mobile, Ala., have filed a petition for a receiver for the company, alleging conspiracy to transfer their rights to the United Fruit company.

Francis Wayland, LL. D., formerly dean of the Yale law school and professor of English constitutional law is dead.

A Stove Factory.

It is reported that a wealthy syndicate contemplates building at Tuscaloosa, Ala., a mammoth by-product plant which will give employment to several hundred persons. The plant will be one of the most up-to-date to be found anywhere and will make a specialty of high grade stoves.

Immense Coal Trade.

"Alabama coal has monopolized the New Orleans market."

Every day not less than 25,000 tons of coal are being shipped from this district to the various gulf points. The one-time monopoly of the New Orleans port by Pittsburg coal has been broken entirely. That field is not sending one ton a day to the Crescent City.

On this account, it is claimed, the Pittsburg Coal company is making its extensive purchases in Walker county.

The Southern railway is sending 2,000 tons daily via the tipple at Greenville, where it is barged on the Mississippi river to New Orleans.

Earnings of the Suez canal were $259,000 more than in 1902, notwithstanding the reduction of 10 cents per ton during the year. In six months the deficit has been reduced from $360,000 to $152,970.

Charles Foster, of Fostoria, Ohio, former governor of Ohio, and former secretary of the treasurer, has been stricken with cerebral paralysis.

At Brookside, Ala., Saturday fire destroyed three residences.

GEN. GORDO

Famous Confed-ra... Passes Over the R...

Lieutenant General ... Gordon died at his winter ... Miami, Fla., Saturday. The final illness which overtook him Wednesday was congestion of the stomach and liver following an acute attack of indigestion.

Gen. Gordon was born in Upson county, Georgia, June 6, 1832, of Scotch ancestry, which had a prominent part in the revolutionary war, graduated from the Georgia university in 1852, and a few months later was admitted to the practice of law. Early in 1861 he enlisted in the volunteer Confederate service and was elected captain of his company.

He rose rapidly by promotion to be lieutenant-colonel of the Sixth Alabama infantry in December 1861. In May 1864 he was promoted to be major general and took part in the important battles which marked the closing scenes of the civil war.

When hostilities were ended he called his men about him and advised them to bear the trial of defeat, to go home in peace, obey the laws and rebuild the wasted country.

He has taken prominent part in the councils of his party ... 1866. He was a candidate for governor of Georgia in 1868, and in 1873 and 1879 was elected to the United States senate. Resigning his position in 1880, he participated actively in building the Georgia Pacific railroad.

In 1886 and 1888 he was elected governor of Georgia, and in 1890 again entered the United States senate for the full term. Since his retirement from political activity he has devoted much of his time to lecturing.

Since the organization of the United Confederate Veterans he has held the position of its commander-in-chief, and his frequent re-elections to that position have testified to the warmth of affection in which he has been held in the south.

Definite arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made, but the remains will lie in state in Atlanta and the funeral will be held in the Georgia house of representatives.

Railroad War Ended.

The railroad war which has been waged for months near Knoxville, Tenn., between the Southern and the Louisville and Nashville roads, has been brought to an end by a compromise that will result in eight injunctions held by the roads against each other being dismissed.

All disputed cases are covered in this withdrawal except a valuable right of way in South Knoxville, which is now in the hands of the United States circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati.

AGRICULTURAL.

Planting Fruit Trees.

Whether or not fruit trees should be set in the fall or spring depends largely upon the conditions and location. It is now conceded by the most practical fruit growers that early spring is the best time to set them out. However, the trees should be purchased in the fall and secured early enough before they can be heeled in where they will be perfectly secure and protected during the winter months. The ground should be in thorough condition as early in the spring as possible, and the trees set out.

Lame Sheep.

Sheep so often die of what is sometimes mistaken for a sort of dry rot. And yet, on examination, the hoof is found in good condition, although the sheep have limped in almost helpless way, thus leading one to think it is the hoof disease. Closely examined, the cause of lameness will be found near the dew claws. Here you will find burrowing worms. These are the maggots of a fly with a name entirely too nice for it. It is death to the sheep if its progeny is not destroyed. Cut away the fleece and apply oil of tar to kill the maggots. Then cover the sore with lard and sulphur. Benzoated lard is considered best.—I. M. Shepler, in American Cultivator.

Handling Barb Wire.

Find below a device for handling barb wire in fence building. This little frame will unroll a spool of barb wire without tangling, and keep up all slack; it is especially adapted to timber and brush land where there is no room for a wagon. A broomstick at B runs through the spool; blocks at AA strengthen the pieces where bored.—E. A. Roberts.

Dairy Notes.

It is not a good plan to feed cows at milking time, as they are likely to hold up their milk if by any chance the feed is withheld. The best plan is to feed before milking so as to milk while the cow is in a ruminant mood.

Keep on friendly terms with your cows. The cow that exhibits a desire to lick you while you are milking her will give the largest possible quantity of milk because she is not excited, nervous or afraid while you are around her.

Besides producing a calf a good cow will yield her weight in milk solids in a year; that is, in fat, casein, albumen, milk sugar and ash. She will yield from five to ten times her weight in milk and one-half her weight in butter.

A German investigator made measurements on eighty cows whereby he divided them into groups. From the result obtained from these it was concluded that there was unmistakable relation between external form and the production of milk and butter. Those who do not believe there is such a thing a dairy type should not be too sure of their position.—Mirror-Farmer.

As to Spraying.

If a thing is worth doing it is worth doing well, an adage that applies to orchard operations as well as to other affairs of life. A tour of five months through orchard sections has convinced the writer that the orchardist in a dozen does the work of spraying properly and thoroughly.

They seem to have an idea that the insecticide used is one which destroys the insect or scale with its fumes, when, as a matter of fact, it must come into direct contact with the scale to be effective. While most of the recognized formulas for sale are effective if properly used, the so-called cold application is preferable, for while most expensive in the matter of ingredients, much time is saved in its use.

Take twenty pounds of sulphur and thin to a paste with water. Slake forty pounds of lime, and when it is about half slaked stir in the sulphur mixture, using at the same time caustic soda ground and in the proportion of one pound to each pound of the sulphur. Add water and mix thoroughly, using sixty gallons of water in completing the mixture, including that used in slaking the lime and mixing the sulphur. Apply to the trees thoroughly, so that when the tree has been sprayed it will look as if covered with flour. This mixture leaves the bark of the tree clean and will destroy the scale if done thoroughly and in time.—Indianapolis News.

Light Feeding For Horses.

The writer has been taken to task because he insists that the majority of farmers do not feed their horses sufficiently heavy. It is understood that this applies to the horses that are expected to do heavy farm work only, although many of them are obliged to do such work and all of the road work besides. Statistics show that horses in cities are much better fed than those on the farm. For example, the average road horse in the city, the cab horse and the horse drawing loads of about that weight are fed fourteen to fifteen pounds of oats and ten to twelve pounds of hay daily; where corn is a portion of the ration the proportions are about fifteen pounds of corn, ten pounds of oats and fifteen pounds of hay.

The rations of the dray horse, whose work is nearer to that done by the farm horse, is at least one-half more than the figures given for the horses doing lighter work. Compare these rations with those fed by the average farmer. How many farmers feed oats as a part of the regular ration? How many of them feed hay? In too many cases the ration is corn for grain and corn stover for roughage. Is it any wonder that farm horses are quickly worn out?—Indianapolis News.

Keeping Winter Apples.

As a rule, winter apples are picked too early and, in a measure, this accounts for the rapidity with which they rot. Experienced growers make a practice of picking over each tree several times; that is, they will pick the fruit from the south side of the tree, where it ripens first, and go around and through the trees in this way. Such growers never think of packing windfalls in the same barrels with the hand-picked fruit, a falling of the less experienced grower. While it may be impracticable for apple growers to have individual cold storage houses, the plan advocated in this department some time ago of a number of large growers in a section combining and building storage houses, will yet come about. In the meantime there should be some plan of storage devised whereby at least the best of the crop can be cared for, so that it may go to market at a time when it will bring the best prices. What such a plan will be must depend largely upon the facilities of the grower.

The main essentials in storing apples are that the fruit be kept cool and dry. If one has a fruit cellar, a good plan is to pack the apples in barrels as soon after they are picked as possible, seeing that each specimen is perfectly dry, and after setting the barrels on racks, so that there will be as near perfect ventilation as possible, cover the top with boards. The heads should not be put in until the fruit is prepared for shipment. It would be a good plan to try several methods of keeping apples this winter.—Indianapolis News.

The Farm Dairy.

Upon the country dairy output depends to a considerable extent, the supply of dairy products in small towns and villages. A strong local demand is favorable to good prices on all really superior articles. There are few instances in which the farm dairy cannot be made a profit producer. Care must be taken to put only the best on the market, as it is the uniformity of quality year after year that establishes one a reputation in any particular line of produce marketing. Butter should be placed in neat packages of uniform size and shape. Attractiveness aids more in selling an article than any one item, as one will pay more for anything edible, if it is tempting in appearance. Where one has regular customers in town it is an easy matter to work up a trade in cream, buttermilk, sweet skim milk and cottage cheese if one has an inclination for expansion in this line. Dairy by-products are very profitable, however, when kept at home and fed to pigs and hens.

There is a certain advantage in farm dairying not often taken into account, namely: The consumption of large amounts of cheaply grown forage and the conversion of the waste of same into humus making material to be returned to the land from which such crops have been removed. This constitutes one of the most paying items of the home dairying. The price of land is fast advancing, especially in the middle West, and portions of the East. It will only be a matter of time until every acre of land will be called upon by the wide-awake farmer to produce its utmost yearly. The farmer who keeps a moderate sized dairy herd will find this a great help in maintaining soil fertility.—C. B. B., in Indiana Farmer.

Farm Notes.

A pig in the mud never thrives.

Give the pig a dry floor to feed upon.

Teach the pigs to eat as early in their lives as possible.

With hogs, over-feeding is as unprofitable as starving.

In many cases it will pay to buy hay and stuff to feed to the pigs.

Mud and dirt breed vermin and produce skin diseases in the hog.

Early breeding of sows nearly always causes weakness of the pigs.

The best and cheapest pork is from hogs that have never been wintered.

A pig that is stunted early in life should never be used as a breeder.

If a sow is in good flesh she can be bred in a week's time after weaning.

The health of the hogs depends in a large measure upon their surroundings.

The quality of the pork may be much improved by careful and cleanly feeding.

In a majority of cases the litters improve in size and quality as the sow grows older.

Too early killing of brood sows is one of the reasons why pork raising is not profitable.

In nearly all cases hogs are easier kept healthy if they have a free range than if closely confined.

Floors are often arranged to sleep and the ground to feed on, when the reverse should be the case.

It is important to have the boar well broken, so that he can be handled with care and moved without excitement.—American Farm and Orchard.

FOR WOMAN'S BENEFIT

Revival of Linen Chest.

Everywhere in the shops to-day one finds linen chests, more or less elaborate.

Nothing but a fine antique will do for some young women, and genuine old chests whose heavy wood is finely carved and rich with color and lustre of centuries are not sold for a song. Imitation antiques are plentiful and some of them are attractive enough if one buys them for what they are and does not pay the price of real antiques for them.

A strictly modern French chest made to fill a New York order is of dark oak, severely plain, but mounted in wonderful art nouveau metal work set with semi-precious stones.

Such chests are not for all lovers of linen, but linen all women must have, and the earlier the collecting is begun the more satisfactory the supply is when its owner's wedding day comes. The wise mother buys the linen chest and begins stocking it long before the daughter is old enough to take a vital interest in the proceeding.

It is easy to have an exceptionally beautiful supply of linen if one watches the sales, and if one buys a little at a time. Even if a woman has unlimited means at her disposal she cannot at one full swoop collect a stock of linen as satisfactory as one picked up piece by piece, because of some particular merit or charm in each piece.

One may buy almost any sort of linen store hemmed nowadays. The hurry and rush of modern life has demanded that concession, but the girl who is cut out for domesticity will prefer hemming and working her own linen.

Of course, the supply she will need will depend upon the position she will occupy, and certain basic rules of selection every one may follow.

First there is the kitchen supply, cup towels, glass towels, roller towels, dish cloths, cheesecloth dusters, tick-covered iron holders, a bag for clothespins, cotton-flannel bags to draw over the brooms when wood floors are to be brushed. All these are to be hemmed, worked with one or two initials and laid away in the linen chest.

Then there is the servant's linen, a bountiful supply of sheets, pillow slips, towels, spreads, tablecloths, napkins, not necessarily of fine quality, but carefully selected, durable, well worked.

When this foundation is laid one has come to the delightful part of the work, the choosing of the general house linen in various grades. Here temptation meets one and covetousness becomes one's darling sin, but one must keep a level head and consider the practical as well as the beautiful, and one must learn to be an unerring judge of quality.—Evangelist.

Women Fifty Years Hence.

The Rev. Dr. Hillis sees grave fears for men's future in the progress women are making. He told them so in a sermon on "Women."

"Women," said Dr. Hillis, "in spite of men's refusal to give them the rights and privileges to which they are entitled, are to-day in 145 branches of business and in instances showing more ability than the men.

"In one of the greatest financial institutions of this great city not long ago a well-known man, drawing a salary of $25,000 a year, suffered a nervous collapse. The directors selected the young woman, who, for ten years had been the stenographer. She, the directors told me, has done better work than the man she succeeded and is doing it for but $10,000 a year.

"In fifty years," said Dr. Hillis, "the women will know more than the men. They have more time to read and study and they are improving their time. Eventually they will vote themselves and tell the men whom to vote for. There is a lesson of rebuke in this for men.

"Eventually all the universities will be co-educational, and the women will carry off all the prizes. That's what they are afraid of in the colleges which will not allow women. The women study while the young men are educating the calves of their legs. The women are writing our novels; the best portrait painter is a woman; recently a woman took the highest possible prize in mathematics."—New York Evening Telegram.

Hair Hints.

A woman who has made a study of health gives the following suggestions for the care of the hair:

"Keep the hair as clean as the rest of the body.

"Let the air and sunshine have free access to it. Never wear a hat when you can go without it. It will retard the growth of your hair just as surely as covering up a plant would hinder its development.

"If you wear a wheat field, an aviary or a grape arbor on your hat, you must expect that your hair will suffer. Heat and weight are not conducive to growing luxuriant locks.

"Don't put a lot of strange nostrums on your hair. If you do, you will get a lot of strange results.

"Wash the hair in warm castile suds. Rinse it in cold water. The change of temperature stimulates growth. If you want to make your hair grow, this washing may be repeated every other day.

"When you dry your hair, do it in the sunshine. Besides helping the growth of the hair, it will produce beautiful tints and sheens that no artificial aids can bring.

"Don't twist your hair in a towel to dry it. You will break many of the hairs that way. Dry it carefully by gentle pressure."—New York Tribune.

The Chin Strap.

A chin strap for holding the jaws together at night is an excellent thing for checking the inroads of the double chin, that fatal sign of years and flabbiness. As breathing through the mouth is known to be a prolific cause of catarrh, sore throat, bronchitis and other nose and throat affections, physicians invariably recommend the use of a band or strap of some sort which will hold the mouth and jaw in position during sleep. This strap can be made at home, if the dollar or so that the drug stores ask is considered too much. Make a circular band of strong linen or cotton cloth that will fit firmly over the forehead and around the head. To this attach on one side a broad band of the same material to pass under the chin and fasten securely on the other side, thus holding the jaw up in its place; or, a broad elastic may be used to make the chin halter. This permits considerably more freedom to the jaw and mouth. Sometimes it is the mouth itself which refuses to remain shut. In that case a band must be arranged to cover the mouth and hold it together.

One reason for wearing a chin strap at night is that with sleep the jaws relax, and relaxation lies at the root of the loss of contour that comes to the face with middle life.

Rest For Women.

The rest hour is quite as necessary to women in summer as in winter. There are very few people who are not better for going away by themselves, if only for fifteen minutes or half an hour, during the day. Lie down on the bed or lounge, allow the muscles to relax, and try to banish all perplexing thoughts. Make certain that you will never be interrupted or subject to call during these few moments and the habit of sleep will come to you. A rest of even ten minutes, free from interruption, will do more good toward soothing the nerves than four times the same length of time spent lying down with noisy children near, or thoughtless persons discussing the latest fashion. The important matter is to secure for the tired worker absolute peace at the rest hour. Even without sleep, it is better than a rest hour amid noisy surroundings in sleep, which is almost certain to be a troubled one. As a matter of ceremony, the rest hour should be insisted on, because work done after it is certain to be so much better that it much more than makes up for the time taken from the work. Work accomplished with the nerves exhausted never amounts to as much as work done when the energies are fresh.

Girls and Their Education.

When you have a fine girl, with a good mind, who can learn anything in reason, and be trained to almost any sort of useful labor, after her education has come to the point where specialization might begin, you have to face the possibility that by going on and giving her a special thing to think about and work at, you may be aiding to divert her from a woman's greatest career to one, notable it may be, but less satisfying and of less importance. The risk—the apparent risk—is not that a girl may know too much to marry, but that during the years when marriage is best, and easiest, achieved she may be so busy with other concerns as to miss meeting the man whom she ought to marry.

For while it may be confidently asserted that no mere intellectual preoccupation is going to hinder a girl from marrying the man whom she recognizes to be the right man if he comes along at the right time and suggests it to her, it is possible that she may be too much preoccupied to recognize him when he comes, and also that her work may remove her from the social point she would naturally occupy, and cause her to miss meeting him altogether.—E. S. Martin, in Harper's Bazar.

Hats are in many cases made entirely of pleatings.

Shoulder capes are fitted down over the shoulders and upper arms.

Sleeves gained the additional breadth by means of the ubiquitous pleat.

Velvet covered buttons adorn coats and dresses with equal success.

When girdles are pleated the pleats are so laid as to go round and round.

Pleated blouses caught into pleated girdles are a feature of new costumes.

French folds, either overlapping or caught by a jour stitching, are yet in favor.

Buttons and buttonholes serve seriously as well as for ornament on tailor garments.

There is a growing fancy for simple skirts of long, flowing, graceful shape and sparsely adorned.

Silver and gilt buttons, square and round, occasionally show drooping ornaments like a fringe of silver or gilt beads drooping from the centre of the top.

The pretty bell-shaped button in silver is charming when it is small enough. It hangs with the mouth down like our Liberty bell, and tinkles gently with each movement.

As every one knows, a separate waist is indispensable as a third piece to skirt and jacket or to coat suits. Large drapery sleeves are entirely unfit upon such waists. Silk undersleeves, or some moderate alteration of that sort, which will not interfere, is advised, but no draperies, as once wearing would ruin them.

Medicine as a profession for women is constantly growing in popularity in London. Women now holding medical degrees in Great Britain number more than five hundred.

A paper on the "Diseases of Steel" was recently read before the Birmingham (England) Institute. Mr. J. E. Stead said that "ailments of steel" would be a better title, and that they could be cured by reheating.

The chemists of the United States Agricultural Department have shown that ability to fix the nitrogen, which is infinitely abundant in the air, and apply it to the wornout fields of the world will enable mankind to cultivate what is practically virgin soil forever.

A plague of ants lately invaded an office at Everley, England. Paper soaked with oil of peppermint was spread about, when the ants disappeared in half an hour, and, although the odor of peppermint quite evaporated in a few days, their memory was good and they never returned.

In an address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, Mr. Charles Hawkin's remark that water obtained by gravitation is almost, if not quite, as expensive as water obtained by pumping, may be something of a surprise to a layman, but is easily explained by the greater cost of gravitation works.

Speaking of cremation the London Lancet expresses the opinion that the chances of a living body thought to be dead being reduced to ashes are too indefinitely remote to merit attention. In the vast majority of instances there is no real foundation for the stories of premature burial or intended burial.

The art of making glass was introduced into Japan about 120 years ago by a Hollander, who settled at Osaka. For several generations the knowledge of the process was confined to a single family, and it was not until about 1879 that the employment of coal instead of charcoal, and the construction of brick chimneys enabled the manufacturers to introduce improvements which placed the industry on a substantial basis.

Famous Blind Man.

The name of John Metcalfe, of Knaresborough, engineer and roadmaker, is in the feverish times in danger of lapsing into undeserved oblivion. John Metcalfe was blind from the age of six years until he died. Yet as a boy and man he invariably displayed a high-spirited courage. He was a true sportsman, a fine swimmer, and a hard rider to hounds. It was his solitary walk from London to Harrowgate by a way unknown to him that first turned his attention to road making. The roads in those days were very bad. He obtained authority from Parliament to improve this state of things when he was fifty years old. In Yorkshire, Lancashire, Cheshire and Derbyshire most of the principal roads were made by him. He built bridges and leveled rough places. Some of the plans were made for him by others, but usually he designed them himself, and he did his own surveying. He climbed mountains, trudged along on the edge of precipices, he crossed swamps and morasses, waded through bogs and forded rivers, relying wholly and solely on the long staff that was forever in his hand. He died in harness, full of years and laden with many honors, at the great age of ninety-three.—V. C.

Passing of the "Rickshaw."

Japan is finding that electric traction and the "rickshaw" are incompatible, and the result is that over 2000 human horses in Tokyo have given up the unequal struggle with the electric car, and have decided to emigrate in a body to the Hokkaido, there to engage in the fisheries and other callings. It seems a pity, for there are few pleasanter ways of traveling on a good road than behind a couple of stalwart hurumа-ya who do their eight miles an hour with ease. From the national point of view the disappearance of the hurumа-ya may have important consequences. In physique they form almost a class apart, and though their calling does not conduce to longevity, they were a valuable asset in Japan's military system, as they proved in the war with China. In a country where horses are poor and scarce man power traction was formerly a necessity. The motor car will now probably take its place.—London Chronicle.

"To hear with," was the answer.

"What are your eyes for?"

"To see with."

"And what is your nose for?"

"To blow," was the innocent answer.—Lippincott's Magazine.

OUR BUDGET OF HUMOR.

To My Dog.

They sung of love, Virginia's love for Pyn;
Here's for Greek Leander, whom the waves
Brought to her feet lifeless beyond recall;
Abelard's love for Heloise, their graves
The mark of it; and there are passions all
Of which the sentimental poet raves.
But yet another love, and not the least,
Where cupid plays no part, yet hearts confide,
Firm as the heathen's worship for the East,
Loyal and true it cometh to abide;
A love that needeth neither oath nor priest,
The love of beast for man and man for beast.
Then, poet, please, no love's catalogue,
His love for me and mine for my old dog.

R. A. RASCO.

For County Superintendent of Education few men in this county are better qualified than Prof. R. A. Rasco, whose announcement appears in this issue. He has made for himself an enviable reputation as an educator, and in the conduct of his schools displayed wonderful executive ability. The Superintendent requires to be a man of tact and judgment, and in these particulars Prof. Rasco fully fills the bill. If nominated and elected he will make a very efficient Superintendent of Education.

F. LOYD TATE.

When the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit was created it became necessary to appoint a Judge and Circuit Solicitor. To the latter office Hon. F. Loyd Tate, of Wetumpka, was appointed, and filled the office to the entire satisfaction of the bar and public. He now asks the voters of the district to elect him to the office, an endorsement to which his services fully entitle him. He made many friends on his first circuit by his courteous and genial manner, who will doubtless show their appreciation by nominating and electing him. He is a good man for the place.

GENERAL GORDON.

JUST one week from the death of General Longstreet, General John B. Gordon, the Commander of the United Confederate Veterans, has answered the last summons. He died near Miama, Florida, at the home of his daughter, and at the age of 72 years.

The military career of General Gordon commenced when, as Captain of the Raccoon Rangers, his company was mustered into the Confederate service at Montgomery, in April, 1861, and became a part of the splendid Sixth Alabama Regiment. From the first battle of Manasses to the end at Appomattox, the story of Gordon is the story of the Army of Northern Virginia, for in every important engagement he was an active participant, and this was attested by the several wounds received in battle. His promotion from Captain to Lieutenant General attests his military worth, and the esteem in which he was held. He was the very idol of his soldiers and the very incarnation of gallantry in action.

In civil life all our people delighted to honor him, and to accord that meed of praise that was his by deserving. Few men so ably filled the office of governor of Georgia, and few men ever left the Senate of the United States so universally regretted, albeit his retirement from that body was a voluntary one.

From throughout the whole South the voice of mourning is heard, on this, the day he is laid to rest. The head of the strong man is bowed in grief. His memory is precious to his country—a heritage our own, imperishable to last until the earth itself shall be no more. In the beautiful language of Judge Thomas G. Jones, in his dispatch to Mrs. Gordon, "the thousands who followed the General think of him not as dead, but as promoted, and communing with Lee and Jackson around the throne of God. We cannot sorrow for him but only for ourselves."

REPUBLICANS SPLIT

Pursuant to notification by J. B. Downs, chairman, the Executive Committee of the Republican party of Chilton county convened at Clanton Monday, January 11.

Upon roll call fourteen members were found to be present. The full committee consists of eighteen members, four members failing to answer roll call at this meeting. The chairman announced a quorum present.

D. N. Riggins offered the following resolution: Resolved, the chairman and secretary are hereby authorized and instructed to issue the following call for a county convention, to be held at Thorsby, on the 13th day of February, 1904, for the purpose of selecting and electing five delegates to represent Chilton county at the Fourth Congressional District Republican convention, to be held at Calera, on the 23d day of February; to select and elect a county chairman and a county executive committee and to transact all business that may properly come before it.

Resolved, that precinct or beat meetings shall be held on Monday, February 1, the time and place designated by the regular precinct or beat chairman.

All registered and duly qualified electors who favor Republican principles and who will support our nominees and the action of the county convention, are invited to participate, and none others shall be allowed to take part. If there is no beat chairman, or if no call is made in any precinct or beat, then any qualified Republicans, and those that will act with them in the future, may hold a meeting at the usual polling place in the beat between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Monday, the 1st day of February, and then and there elect the number of delegates apportioned to that beat or precinct, to the county convention to be held at Thorsby, on the 13th day of February.

Resolved, the chairman or secretary of the beat or precinct meeting shall, immediately on the adjournment of said meeting, notify the secretary of the county committee, of the place of meeting; the number of those that participated therein; the names of those that were selected as delegates, and of any other business that was transacted, to facilitate the making up the roll of the county convention. The number of delegates shall be thirty-three, and divided as follows. Each beat shall have three delegates.

The above resolution was seconded by Secar Harris. As a substitute for the above resolution, H. A. Wilson offered as a substitute, a resolution, in words and figures the same as the above, except the resolution as offered by said Wilson provided that the county convention was to be held at Clanton, and was to be a mass convention, and was to be held also February 13, 1904, for the purpose of electing delegates to the 4th congressional district Republican convention, to be held at Talladega instead of Calera, and for the purpose of electing delegates to the State convention.

Upon the substitute being put, the roll being called, said substitute was put and was voted down by a vote of seven against and six for, B. G. Burnett not voting either way. Without taking a vote, Chairman Downs, against the protest of a majority of the committee, announced that the committee stood adjourned for dinner. Upon motion of F. O. Dudley that the committee not adjourn until disposition of resolution offered by D. N. Riggins, said Downs declined to put the question and walked out of the room. Thereupon the committee dispersed.

At 1:30 p.m. the committee reconvened. D. N. Riggins insisted that his resolution be put, and demanded the roll call on it. Chairman Downs refused to order the roll called, and put the resolution to an aye and nay vote, and the chairman announced that the resolution failed to carry. Whereupon a number of members of the committee adjourned to the court house, and Secar Harris was unanimously elected temporary chairman and W. R. Wilson temporary secretary of the committee. Upon motion of D. N. Riggins, the temporary organization was made permanent. The Riggins resolution was then unanimously adopted, and signed by all ten of the members of the committee present.

Committee then adjourned to meet at Thorsby, Feb. 13, 1904, the day set for the convention.

Stanton.

Mr. C. M. Ellard of Birmingham has returned to school and reports a good vacation.

Our loving thoughts follow the Gandy and Connell boys to their new homes, the former to Riverside and the latter to Huntsville.

Our fellow student, Mr. John C. Johnson, has been called to the pastorate of a large church in Perry county. We wish him success in this important field.

Stanton now has two newspapers, the Literary Digest and The Youth's Friend Series.

There are several species of fish and reptiles that never sleep during their stay in the world.

Mr. Speer's "home made speech did good, for this was the quietest Xmas seen in Stanton in a long time. So says Mr. Know all.

All our pupils are back from their holiday vacation and settled down to hard work again. We are glad to have Miss Lexia Speer of Prattville with us in school.

Following is list of pupils on honor roll this month: Misses Lottie Perry, Irene Gandy, Maud Gandy, Isla Fitts, Winnie Mitchell, Ruth Gandy and Amelia Perry; Messrs. Ira Dunsmore, Thomas Mitchell, Oliver Perry, William Weaver, and Charlie Letcher.

Miss Nannie Butler of Deatsville spent Christmas with her sister Mrs. Speer.

"Simon" Weaver says Stanton people are awful blunderers. They are all the time calling him Simon, when it really is "Solomon."

The debate on education and money was good. Mr. Erly Parnell is getting to be a champion debater.

Mr. Nelson, the new Methodist minister, will fill his pulpit here Sunday morning.

Rev. W. H. Connell has been called to the Merrimac Baptist church at Huntsville, where he, with his interesting family, are now located.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists, Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

THE Democratic National Convention will be held at St. Louis, July 6, 1904.

Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Scott's Emulsion is simply a milk of pure cod liver oil with some hypophosphites especially prepared for delicate stomachs.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Jan. 11, 1904

The consensus of opinion here regardless the building of an isthmian canal is universal in favor of the canal among all sorts of public men, but they differ radically when it comes to the route and the methods adopted by the Republican administration in making the Panama route the only one over which the canal can be built. The Democrats in congress are a unit in favor of the canal, but they do not intend to let the skullduggery of the present administration prevail if they can help it, and I think they can. They are not satisfied with the message of the President which he sent to the Senate on subject of Panama, and they think he has evaded the main questions asked him, and they will not stand for it. He has not cleared up the mystery surrounding the movements of this government just previous to the announcement that the Panama republic was born, and they either will have the facts or the Panama treaty will not be ratified, all the talk of the Republican leaders to the contrary notwithstanding. The Democrats want a canal, but they want it with honor.

They know that the Panama route is not the only one that there is in that section of the world, and that the Nicaragua route is better than the Panama; that not so many people will die of fever while the canal is being built, and that there is a law unrepealed on the statute books of the nation authorizing the President of the United States to negotiate with the republics of Nicaragua and Costa Rica for the right of way for such a canal. Furthermore, they know that the money has been appropriated for the Nicaragua route, and has not been appropriated for the Panama route. They do not like the antics of the administration in this matter, and, notwithstanding the instructions given to some southern Senators by their legislatures, they will refuse to obey them so far as the Panama route is concerned, because they know that is not the only chance for a canal, and they will defeat the ratification of the Panama treaty and demand that the law concerning the Nicaragua canal be carried out.

We will then have a canal much nearer the United States, and especially the Southern States than would be the Panama canal, and they will have rebuked the Republican administration for its disregard of law and the outrageous conduct in robbing the United States of Colombia of one of its states. Unless the President of the United States can make a better defense of his position in this Panama deal that he has done, the Panama treaty will not be ratified, provided the Democrats stand together as they now say they will do. We will have a canal and we will swat the Republican administration in the neck.

The Democrats in the House of Representatives tried mighty hard this week to get the Republicans to agree to an investigation of the post office scandals, but they failed. The Republicans refuse to be investigated. They killed a resolution for the purpose of calling an investigation of the Bristow charges by referring it to a committee by a slim vote of 107 to 111. After it is referred to the committee it will continue to sleep in the pigeon hole of the desk of the chairman of the committee.

That should show the people of the country where the sincerity of the Republican party lies in the matter. They know full well that if the investigation is ever pulled off it will put more kinds of big Republicans in a hole and soap the sides and pull up the ladder, than any man now dreams of. That is why they will smother the thing in its inception. The people may draw their own conclusions.

Some of the Republican leaders on the floor of the House are repeatedly saying on their feet that there never were more prosperous times in this country than at present, and that the working man can get all the work he wants at remunerative wages. This is not true. The working man not only is getting his wages cut by all the big trusts and corporations in the country, but the government itself is cutting wages.

CHARLES A. EDWARDS.

A Very Close Call.

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by Clanton Drug Co., Hopkins Drug Co. Price 50 cents.

Shod a horse when 99 years old.
Always conquered the grip with Pe-ru-na.
Witness in a land suit at the age of 110 years.
Believes Peruna the greatest remedy of the age for catarrhal diseases.

ISAAC BROCK, a citizen of McLennan County, Texas, has lived for 115 years. For many years he resided at Rosque Falls, eighteen miles west of Waco, but now lives with his son-in-law at Valley Mills, Texas.

A short time ago, by request, Uncle Isaac came to Waco and sat for his picture. In his hand he held a stick cut from the grave of General Andrew Jackson, which has been carried by him ever since. Mr. Brock is a dignified old gentleman, showing few signs of decrepitude. His family Bible is still preserved, and it shows that the date of his birth was written 115 years ago.

Surely a few words from this remarkable old gentleman, who has had 115 years of experience to draw from, would be interesting as well as profitable. A lengthy biographical sketch is given of this remarkable old man in the Waco Times-Herald, December 4, 1898. A still more pretentious biography of this, the oldest living man, illustrated with a double column portrait, was given the readers of the Dallas Morning News, dated December 11, 1898, and also the Chicago Times-Herald of same date. This centenarian is an ardent friend of Peruna, having used it many years.

In speaking of his good health and extreme old age Mr. Brock says:

"After a man has lived in the world as long as I have he ought to have found out a great many things by experience. I think I have done so.

"One of the things I have found out to my entire satisfaction is the proper thing for ailments that are due directly to the effects of the climate. For 115 years I have withstood the changeable climate of the United States.

"I have always been a very healthy man, but of course subject to the little affections which are due to sudden changes in the climate and temperature. During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds and diarrhoea.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only, reliable remedy for these affections. It has been my standby for many years, and I attribute my good health and extreme old age to this remedy.

"It exactly meets all my requirements. It protects me from the evil effects of sudden changes; it keeps me in good appetite; it gives me strength; it keeps my blood in good circulation. I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine.

"When epidemics of la grippe first began to make their appearance in this country I was a sufferer from this disease.

"I had several long sieges with the grip. At first I did not know that Peruna was a remedy for this disease. When I heard that la grippe was epidemic catarrh, I tried Peruna for la grippe and found it to be just the thing."

In a letter dated January 31, 1903, Mr. Brock writes:

"I am well and feeling as well as I have for years. The only thing that bothers me is my sight. If I could see better I could walk all over the farm and it would do me good. I would not be without Peruna."

Yours truly,

Isaac Brock.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

A POWERFUL DISCOURSE ENTITLED "HIDDEN TALENTS."

The Rev. Dr. Henry C. Swentzel Draws a New Lesson From the Parable—The One Talent Man Should Not Pose as a Person With a Grievance.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Dr. Henry C. Swentzel, rector of St. Luke's Church, preached Sunday morning on "Hidden Talents." He took his text from St. Matthew xxv:18: "He that had received one talent went and digged in the earth and hid his lord's money." Dr. Swentzel said:

God holds the [illegible] omnipotent [illegible] eternity. He dispenses [illegible] boundless wealth [illegible] and breadth [illegible] myriad [illegible] of the divine [illegible] is not only a [illegible] magnificent [illegible] Every [illegible] the forests [illegible] oratories [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] to protest against [illegible] the doctrine [illegible] erality of the heavenly Father's providence. They have [illegible] interpretation of His [illegible] does not square with the facts and experiences of human life. They are [illegible] that His ways are not equal; that He has fettered Himself by a hard and fast doctrine of foreordination, predestination and election; that His counsels are marred by what amounts practically to unjust discrimination and favoritism. Without pausing to emphasize the impiety of criticising Almighty God or to expose the futility and vanity of passing judgment upon His program for humanity, we ought to be persuaded even by our surroundings that the Lord is prompted ever by a masterful desire to promote the health and wealth, the power and happiness, of His children. If we were qualified to appreciate His plans for mankind, we would accept the world with its beauties and harmonies, its lights and shadows, its resplendent heavens and fragrant flowers, its overflowing granaries, its countless picture galleries, its monumental glories, as parables of divine sovereignty.

But the man with one talent is likely to present himself as an objector to this attractive and inspiring view of the Father's rulership. He is dissatisfied. He has a grievance. He is persuaded that he ought to have a better chance, larger privileges, greater opportunities, a more encouraging outlook. It is perfectly true that there are inequalities. All are not endowed with the same gifts. Some seem to have more while others have less; but there is undoubtedly a law of compensation which opens the way for a high general average of satisfaction in living, a satisfaction which is not affected by what are called success and failure, riches and penury. God never gives everything to any one person, but He does offer a generous gift to every soul, and all will find life to be worth a thousand times more than it costs if they will but do their duty. If the many would honestly do their best with what they have, a large share of present inequalities would disappear, and it would be clearer to all that the Almighty is truly a universal Father. Alas, who has done his best? If the complainer had but half filled the measure of his possibilities, if he had been willing to do what he easily could have done, if he had not hidden his talent, the situation to him would be changed, and he would be more perfectly in harmony with the life-creed proclaimed by revelation and by all the worlds.

Inasmuch as our Lord is the author of the parable of the talents, the religious story with its moral should be received with the utmost thoughtfulness. According to His teaching, everybody receives something, and the very smallest gift is one talent. A talent is a goodly sum of money—equal to a little less than $2000. That amount would be a promising starting capital to a young man of fair business ability. Many, it will be alleged, must begin life on a much smaller basis, for which there may be human reasons which are both regrettable and inexorable, and which we cannot stay to discuss. Ordinarily, however, each soul has a goodly start and sets out with a fair endowment. Generally speaking, everybody has a chance—he can be something, he can do something—he can serve his mission. It is wholesome to be reminded betimes that many of the men who have made history have sprung form a comparatively low origin. In every nation saints, heroes and leaders are, for the most part, born in humble cottages, the poor boys of not many yesterdays ago. To every soul God gives an adequate equipment. Work is the only royal road to excellence. There are people who expect to be carried on angels' wings to the goal of their ambition, but angels and their wings were made for no such purpose.

The trouble with the complaining man of one talent is that he has hidden his power in the earth. God made him to live a splendid life; the man has failed more or less utterly. He may be misunderstood, but far oftener he misunderstands himself. In taking stock of his assets he neglects to rate them even at their face value. He wonders why he is where he is; he alleges insuperable obstacles and insists that he has been sorely handicapped; he regards himself as a victim. It may be apparent that he is not so richly gifted as certain others are, but that is no reason why he should set up an inferior standard for himself and expect nothing as the outcome of his existence. Success is not a matter of talents. It is not true that they whose achievements have given them a place in the world's legion of honor were men whose shining talents, without industry and without development, won for them immortal distinction. All who have real strength are hard workers, whose towering object was not to get through the world with the least possible outlay of energy, who are willing to spend and be spent in living their lives. Brilliant abilities count for little. The high places in the world are seldom filled by people of genius, but by men and women who have simply made the most of their capacity. It is an ever recurring surprise that most unlikely souls come to the front in all the spheres of activity. Many a genius goes at the last to the potter's field, while memorials in marble or bronze are reared to commemorate the virtues and triumphs of characters that were not so rich in natural gifts as they were abundant in labors. Everybody is well enough endowed. The least we have is one talent, which, if it be rightly used, will suffice for our energies and fill the measure of a laudable ambition.

Everybody is good for something; nobody is necessarily good for nothing. The man with one talent has some power. We do not refer to his attributes, though these may be admirable; he may have faculties which are more or less notable; he may have memory, imagination, various gifts which perhaps he does not suspect. But he has a finer talent to be a man—the talent of faithfulness to the right, of courage for maintaining principle, of honesty and sturdiness for work; he has a talent that will give him a standing among his fellows, and that will make him valuable amid the various relationships of his life. By the grace of God he may hope to be something and do something, and he is in honor bound to make large exactions of himself. He may never take his place among the billionaires, or secure fame, or be known far outside of the small circle of his home and his shop, but everybody who tries to do his duty in his own station, whose example upholds righteousness, whose influence, be it much or little, is on God's side in the combat between good and evil, is a public benefactor, and his name, though almost unknown here, is written in heaven's book of worthies.

[illegible] We [illegible] are [illegible] all the [illegible] blessings with which we are entrusted. Here rest all that was mortal of our beloved dead, and at their funeral rites the church and earth [illegible] earth. Here the great have lived, the brave have fought for right and rights, and royal souls have done their work for the cause of progress. Here Jesus spent three and thirty years. His feet trod upon its hills and vales. His precious blood flowed down from His sacred body to its soil, and His mangled corpse lay in its tomb. How much the earth has in it to fascinate. Is it a marvel that so many fall before its seductions and hide the great and holy talent in the clay? How natural, but how wicked. To every one who buries the talent, his personal force, in worldliness comes the sharp condemnation, "thou wicked and slothful servant."

It is nothing less than a high crime to centre one's being in the earth. When he has the power to be a son of God, when he has an equipment that should get results, when he can be efficient and effective throughout his sphere, when he can make a contribution to the fund of goodness and happiness, what a sorry pity it is that he should put such possibilities into a hole. And yet that is precisely what so many are doing. Some of them are rich, while others are poor, some have knowledge and culture, while others are ignorant and hard, but they are all alike in that they have buried the precious gift. It matters not whether they are lofty or lowly, whether they live in a palace or a garret, they have erred grievously if they have buried the power which alone can make life worth living. What an unspeakable degradation it is to leave the plan where God would have us think and work and to descend to the slavery of a vulgar ambition for worldly concerns. To pass one's years without raising to the dignity and excellences of noble manhood and noble womanhood—to go on from year to year without recognizing the Divine Lord, without noting the privileges which Christ has assured—to reduce ourselves to the level of machinery, to set up a song and dance as though that were the greatest thing in the world—is to take ourselves into a region which is not fit for immortals. Let us do our work and enjoy our recreations, but let us also appreciate the doctrine that to be true men and true women is the highest possible estate. Away with the base delusion that the average person is called to a condition of inevitable inferiority, and that it is not for him to look for large personal development and excellence. All could be strong if they would use their talents.

We have personality. There is such a thing as the "personal equation." Everybody has a fair chance. The man who has buried his talent is apt to deny all this, and may possibly settle down to be a fatalist, a pessimist, a misanthrope, a chronic grumbler. How true the parable is to nature and to life. The complainant is out of harmony with everybody and everything. His gravamen is most unlovely. He may urge heredity by alleging that his antecedents were unfavorable and his birthright counts for nothing. He may point to circumstances as prohibitory and invincible when he would assert his right to be a man. He may charge that divine providence constantly thwarts him and reduces his every hope to ashes. In the last analysis he takes the position of the condemned man of the parable and says to the Lord: "I knew that Thou art an hard man," an allegation which is disproved by the fact that the Lord had given him a whole talent. Although the human heart recognizes some measure of responsibility, it attempts to argue the matter and sets up a defence, and it ends by laying the blame at the feet of God. The Father has done His part abundantly; it only remains for His children to do theirs; the talent has value only in its use.

St. Paul views this question from a most exalted standpoint. He says: "There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit, and there are differences of administration, but the same Lord, and there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God that worketh all in all, but the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal."

We speak of self-made men as though they were miracles. In referring to them as such as mean that, in spite of difficulties, they have attained remarkable excellence. But every worthy individual is self made by the grace of God. Even under the most favorable circumstances, a man, if he is to amount to anything, must make himself. It, therefore, behooves us to go to work upon ourselves. We ought to take ourselves more seriously in the highest possible sense. We have capacities. God has made us for some good. He has given us each one talent, at least. The sons of God, we do not belong to the rubbish pile of the universe. If we will take ourselves in hand—if we will be ourselves and not try to be somebody else—if we will serve our own mission—if we will faithfully and honestly accept and meet the situation as we find it, we will surprise ourselves sooner or later when the results will begin to appear.

"While we live, let us live," or as the old Romans put it—"dum vivimus vivimus." But let us insist upon life in the best possible sense. There is capital enough to begin with. We can develop a sturdier fiber. We need not be ordinary, commonplace, vulgar, inane and insipid. Mediocrity is inexcusable. We can be high-toned, we can be splendid specimens of manhood and womanhood, we can be our best and do our best, we can be our true selves by growing more and more into the likeness of the strong Son of Man.

Influence of a Holy Life.

The subtle germ of Christ's truth will be borne on the secret atmosphere of a holy life into hearts which no preacher's voice could penetrate, where the tongue of men and of angels would fail; there is an eloquence in living goodness which will often prove persuasive. It is the eloquence of the summer heat when it basks upon the thick-ribbed ice—blows would but break it, but beneath the softest, gentlest, yet most potent influence, the hard, impenetrable masses melt away.—John Caird.

INTERNATIONAL LESSO[N] [illegible] FOR JANUARY [illegible]

Subject: The Baptism and Temptation of Jesus, Matt. iii., 13 to iv., 11—Golden Text, Matt. iii., 17—Memory Verses, [illegible] 3, 4—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. The baptism (vs. 13-17). 13. [illegible] with Jesus. So far as we know this [was] His first public act [illegible] He was [illegible] [illegible] to Jordan. Probably [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] There were [illegible] public ministry. [illegible] Himself at the [illegible] "Fulfil all righteousness." [illegible] which would be [illegible] of the requirements of God [illegible] Him." The same [illegible] at first to decline the [illegible] now caused him to [illegible] service Christ enjoined upon him.

[illegible]

16. "The Heavens were opened." Luke says that Jesus prayed as soon as He was baptized (Luke 3: 21). Here is the first recorded prayer of Christ and its answer. It was when He was praying that the Spirit was sent down upon Him, and in all probability it was this that He was praying for. A threefold sign was given: 1. The Heavens opened. 2. The dove descended. 3. The Father spake. "He saw." Christ saw it (Mark 1: 10), and John saw it (John 1: 31-34), and it is probable that all who were present saw it, for this was intended to be His public inauguration. "Like a dove." There has been a difference of opinion as to whether this was a real, literal dove. Luke says it was in a "bodily" shape like a dove (Luke 3: 22). 17. "My beloved Son." Jesus Christ is the Son of God from eternity. He never began to be His Son. He was also His Son because of His supernatural birth, and He was His Son by special designation to the work of the world's Redeemer.

II. The first temptation (vs. 1-4). 1. "Then." Immediately after His baptism. Such are the violent alternations of human experience; baptized and tempted; approved of God and handed over to the devil. "Of the spirit." Luke says He was "full of the Spirit." Mark says, the Spirit driveth Him. A divine influence led Him on. "Into the wilderness." Tradition has fixed upon a high ridge called Quarantania near Jericho. Mark says He was with the wild beasts. "To be tempted." Christ begins His work with a personal encounter with Satan. To tempt is, literally, to stretch out, to try, the strength [illegible] Temptation is the testing of a person. 2. "Forty days." Moses, Elijah and our Lord could fast forty days because they were in communion with God and lived a heavenly life. Luke says He was tempted during the whole forty days. The struggle was powerful, personal and intensely real. Christ for our sakes met and conquered the tempter's utmost strength. "Afterward an hungered." After the forty days were ended. 3. "Tempter came." How Satan appeared to Christ we do not know, but if he came in bodily form it must have been as an angel of light. "If Thou be." Beware of temptation that comes with an if in its mouth. "The Son of God." The consciousness of His divine Sonship may now in a measure have been withheld. Alone in the wilderness and weak and worn from fasting, Satan saw his chance. "Stones . . . bread." You are hungry; now if You are the Son of God use the power You have to supply Your necessities, and thus prove Your divinity. In this first temptation Satan tempts our Lord; as he did Eve, by the bodily appetite. He appeals to the animal nature first. By this avenue he approaches and conquers the great majority of mankind. Beneath this temptation of bodily appetites all gluttons, drunkards and debauchees have fallen and become the devil's prey. 4. "It is written." Deut. 8: 3. Jesus answered the devil by using the sword of the Spirit. "Not live by bread alone." Human support depends not on bread, but upon "God's unfailing word of promise and pledge of all needful providential care."

III. The second temptation (vs. 5-7). 5. "Pinnacle of the temple." The scene changes from the wilderness to Jerusalem. Some well known pinnacle must have been intended, probably the royal porch on the southern side of the temple. 6. "Cast thyself down." In His first reply to the devil Jesus had shown His unbounded confidence in God. Now Satan [says] to Him at that very point, If Thou be the Son of God cast Thyself from this pinnacle. All the world will wonder at so grand an exploit. This was a temptation to presumption, or as Mr. Farrar says, to spiritual pride. "For it is written." The devil has a Bible, but he misquotes and misapplies. "Give his angels charge." A mutilated quotation of Psa. 91: 11. 7. "Tempt." Deut. 6: 16. To tempt God is to put Him to the proof—demand evidence of His power and of His will to fulfil His promises, instead of waiting patiently and trusting. This temptation appealed to the love of show. Those carried away from God by worldly pleasures or the vanities of fashion fall here.

IV. The third temptation (vs. 8-11). 8. "Exceeding high mountain." Some high mountain in Judea where a general view could be had of the country. "Showeth . . . kingdoms of the world." The root of the third temptation lay in the supposition that the kingdoms of the world were the devil's kingdoms and that he could dispose of them. 9. "Worship me." Here the devil appears in his true character. Christ was probably asked to worship "not by an external act of homage, but by using force and establishing a temporal kingdom." 10. "Get thee hence." Jesus [will parley] with him no longer, but with authority commands him to go to his own place. [The] third temptation appealed to the [ambi]tion. By this temptation the great [men] of the world have fallen in myriads. "Devil leaveth Him." Satan had put forth the strongest effort of which he was capable and had been baffled at every point. "Angels . . . ministered." Brought the food that was necessary to support nature.

NEW CHOICE OF OUR NAVY

Commodore Nicholson Pe-ru-na--Other Prominent Men Testify.

Commodore Somerville Nicholson, of the United States Navy, in a letter from 1837 R St., N. W., Washington, D. C., says:

"Your Peruna has been and is now used by so many of my friends and acquaintances as a sure cure for catarrh that I am convinced of its curative qualities, and I unhesitatingly recommend it to all persons suffering from that complaint."—S. Nicholson.

The highest men in our nation have given Peruna a strong endorsement. Men of all classes and stations are equally represented.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Ask Your Druggist for a free Peruna Almanac for 1904.

Spain has buried the hatchet and will appear at the St. Louis Exposition with the best show she can get together, observes the Boston Transcript. She will be as welcome in our midst as the most favored of nations. We remember San Juan, but with regrets that it was ever necessary. As to the Maine, we may say as much.

The U. S. Dept. of Agriculture
Gives to Salzer's Oats its heartiest endorsement. Salzer's New National Oats yielded in 1903 from 150 to 300 bu. per acre in 20 different States, and you, Mr. Farmer, can beat this in 1904, if you will. Salzer's seeds are pedigree seeds bred up through careful selection to big yields.

	Per Acre.
Salzer's Beardless Barley yielded	121 bu.
Salzer's Home Builder Corn	300 bu.
Spelta and Macaroni Wheat	80 bu.
Salzer's Victoria Rape	60,000 lbs.
Salzer's Teosinte, the fodder wonder	160,000 lbs.
Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass	50,000 lbs.
Salzer's Pedigree Potatoes	1,000 bu.

Now such yields pay and you can have them, Mr. Farmer, in 1904.

SEND 10c. IN STAMPS and this notice to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., and you will get their big catalog and lots of farm seed samples free. [A.C.L.]

Stones That Are Alive.

The most curious specimens of vegetable or plant life in existence are the so-called "living stones" of the Falkland Islands. Those islands are among the most cheerless spots in the world, being constantly subjected to a strong polar wind.

In such a climate it is impossible for trees to grow erect, as they do in other countries, but nature has made amends by furnishing a supply of wood in the most curious shape imaginable. The visitor to the Falklands sees scattered here and there singular shaped blocks of what appear to be weather-beaten and moss-covered boulders of various sizes.

Attempt to turn one of these boulders over and you will meet with an actual surprise, because the stone is actually anchored by roots of great strength; in fact, you will find that you are fooling with one of the native trees.

No other country in the world has such a peculiar "forest" growth, and it is said to be next to impossible to work the odd shaped blocks into fuel, because the wood is perfectly devoid of grain and appears to be a twisted mass of woody fibres.—Chicago Post.

THREE YEARS AFTER.

Eugene E. Lario, of 751 Twentieth Avenue, ticket seller in the Union Station, Denver, Col., says: "You are at liberty to repeat what I first stated through our Denver papers about Doan's Kidney Pills in the summer of 1890, for I have had no reason in the interim to change my opinion of the remedy. I was subject to severe attacks of backache, always aggravated if I sat long at a desk. Doan's Kidney Pills absolutely stopped my backache. I have never had a pain or a twinge since."

AN EVENTFUL YEAR

In Railroad History: 5,700 Miles of New Track.

Complete statistics show the year just closed to have been an eventful one in the history of American railroads. During 1901 and 1902 railroad mergers had been carried through on an unprecedented scale. The result was that in the matter of railroad consolidations 1902 proved a far less important year than either 1901 or 1902.

About 5,700 miles of new railroad were constructed in the United States in 1903 or about 175 more than was built in 1902. Most of the new milage represented extensions and new branches. If the extension of the Wabash into Pittsburg is excepted there was no parallel railroad building during the year. The most important single piece of work accomplished was the Southern Pacific 40-mile cut-off across Great Salt Lake.

Never in the career of railroads were rates better maintained than in 1903. The railroads in every section of the country had all the traffic they could possibly handle and there was no incentive to the cutting of rates.

In the matter of gross receipts the railroads broke all previous records in 1903. Having made an increase of something like $150,000,000 over the figures of 1902. In the matter of net earnings, however, the roads did not make quite so favorable a showing. The increase in wages and the increase in the cost of practically all materials that enter into operation and maintenance increasedd operating expenses heavily and reduced net earnings.

In a financial way the Pennsylvania far outstripped all the other roads. Early in the year it sold $75,000,000 of new stock for $90,000,000. This was followed by the sale of over $100,-000,000 of stocks and bonds on the subsidiary properties.

Election Trouble.

A NERVOUS CHILD'S TRAINING.

By Injudicious Treatment Such an One May Be Wrecked.

A child born with a nervous constitution is to be pitied or envied, according as he has parents who do or do not know how to treat him. Character is made or marred, even more than we are wont to believe, by the training which the child receives, and the future of no child is more absolutely in the keeping of its father and mother than that of the nervous child. By injudicious treatment such a child may be made to grow up a physical and moral wreck, at odds with all the world, while under wise management it may develop into one of the highest types of lovable man or woman—gentle, affectionate, sensitive intellectual and dependable.

The nervous child is often difficult to manage, especially if the mother is impatient with its despondency or its irritability. Scoldings only increase the tension of its nervous system, and more severe punishment, which the phlegmatic child takes with scarce a whimper and to its betterment, is often cruel in the extreme.

There are two types of nervous children—the active child, always on the go, inquisitive and acquisitive, but delicate as the mimosa leaf, shrinking back into itself at the first repulse or harsh word, and the pale, quiet, sensitive child, intelligent and thoughtful, but retiring. The child of the first type develops into the inventor, the active philanthropist, the promoter, the schemer, the adventurer, or the leader of criminals, according as his training has been wise and foolish. The child of the second type becomes the philosopher, the thinker, the man of letters, the poet, or the misanthrope, the sour recluse, and the plotter against society and government.

One great mistake in training a nervous child is to try to strengthen the nerves by opposition. A nervous child must be guided, not driven; if afraid of the dark it must not be forced to sleep in a closed room without a glimmer of light. It should not be laughed at for natural timidity, but should be gently convinced by argument of the groundlessness of its fears. At the same time its physical constitution should receive careful attention. Tonics, good, digestible food, an open-air life, avoiding long hours of study, frequent change of air and scene are all not only serviceable, but, one might say, indispensable in the transformation of the child of nervous disposition into the well-poised man or woman.—Youth's Companion.

If poets are born their ancestors should be held responsible.

In a polling of popular American poems Thanatopsis leads all the rest. Its sonorous lines are unquestionably as good for purposes of youthful mouthing as any ever penned in any land; and if the content is a bit trite those who admire the poem most admire it probably the more on that account.

Useful Apple Seed.

Probably a comparatively small proportion of people know of the remedial action of the common apple seed in cases where one get a foreign substance in the eye. Almost everybody has used or heard of "eye stones." The seed of the apple acts in precisely the same way. Introduce it under the lid and it will travel around until it has found the offending cinder or other harmful object. It gives no discomfort and will sometimes stay in the eye twenty-four hours before it has fully done its work.

Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful, I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours very truly, MRS. MAY FAIRBANKS, 216 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn." (Mrs. Fairbanks is one of the most successful and highest salaried traveling saleswomen in the West.)

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues, and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For over two years I suffered more than tongue can express with kidney and bladder trouble. My physician pronounced my trouble catarrh of the bladder, caused by displacement of the womb. I had a frequent desire to urinate, and it was very painful, and lumps of blood would pass with the urine. Also had backache very often.

"After writing to you, and receiving your reply to my letter, I followed your advice, and feel that you and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have cured me. The medicine drew my womb into its proper place, and then I was well. I never feel any pain now, and can do my housework with ease."—MRS. ALICE LARON, Kincaid, Miss.

No other medicine for female ills in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Try for Health

222 South Peoria St.,
CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Sarga Dunker

Don't you want freedom from pain? Take Wine of Cardui and make one supreme effort to be well. You do not need to be a weak, helpless sufferer. You can have a woman's health and do a woman's work in life. Why not secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today?

WINE of CARDUI

THE WEATHER CALENDAR

The Chattanooga Medicine Co. the manufactures of Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black Draught have just issued the 1904 edition of their Cardui Weather Chart and calendar. This calendar with its 13 sheets 14x20 inches in size makes a bright ornament for the wall and is a useful acquisition in any home or office on account of its displayed weather predictions. The prominent numbers can be read across a large room as can the colored signal flags showing the weather conditions for each day. These weather signals illustrate the forecasts of Prof. Andrew J. DeVoe who achieved great prominence by his accurate predictions of the great Galveston, St. Louis and Minnesota storms and cyclones. So great is the popularity of these predictions that they are printed in 2,500,000 of these calenders and in 18,000,000 of the Ladies Birthday Almanacs which are issued by the Chattanooga Medicine company, each year. We understand that a copy of this weather chart and calender may be secured by sending 10c in stamps to the Chattanooga Medicine company, Chattanooga, Tenn. Any of our readers who have not secured a copy of the Ladies Birthday Almanac can get one by sending their address to "Ladies' Birthday Almanac Chattanooga, Tenn", or by calling on their druggist.

KEEP GOOD COMPANY

There is not anything better for any young boy or girl than good company. If everybody would just try to make themselves good so that no one would not mind being with them, what a great thing it would be. Just think how many young men and boys we have in our midst today who are what we call "tough." I do not care what he may call himself and that is the very reason why I would call them "tough" because the word would of course. I have been thinking for some time that some boys were known as "tough" and the best thing I know of to make them more acceptable was to keep good company. Now, some boys will say that they do not care what people think of them, but I have noticed that those two boys are not liked by the people in the whole community. And the reason why is they are like a hog. Because they get drunk and wallow in the mud like a hog. Now, if this is not true some boys, please explain it. Of course there are some boys who are as nice as they can be, and some do not try to be anybody at all. Of course there are some girls that are as bad as boys, and this is the reason why I have mentioned these things about the boys and girls, is to show them where they are not doing their duty by not making themselves good for the benefit of their country.

Now, I hope that you will remember the heading of this piece, keep good company, that is the thing for everybody to do if they want to be respected by everyone. Now, you may want to know how to keep good company and who to keep company with. Well the best company I know of is some nice girl. If you will get in company with a girl that is nice and alright then you will not be in bad company at all. Now, some boy will say right straight that he would keep company with a girl but they won't let him. You can just watch that boy and you will see that he is a low down character or the girls would not stand him.

I was in a place not long ago and a young man came in drunk; we were all having a nice time talking and after awhile it came time for us to leave, the ladies begin to get their hats; there was one lady said "I don't know what I am to do." This fellow who was drunk aimed to go home with her. I just thought to myself I would know what I would do.

Well, I have said enough for this time. Hope everybody will do their best to live right and to do all the good they can in this world. I just want to say this much, if you want to know who I am you will have to keep up w[illegible] My subject last week [illegible] "perfect" and "Keep good company" will come again next week and tell you [illegible] "Good advice."

Best wishes to the Banner and its readers.

I had a mule gored into the lungs by a bull. When the mule would breathe the air escaping through the wound would have blown out a lighted candle. Injected Tichenor's Antiseptic in the wound and left my mule, believing that she would surely die. On the morrow I found her much improved and the wound in a healthy condition. I continued the use of Antiseptic and to its virtues I am due the life and usefulness of my mule. She is still living and giving good service.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

A few weeks ago a gentleman came into The Banner office and ordered a year's subscription for R. B. Davenport, giving his post office as Markham, Texas. The paper was promptly mailed to that address until we were notified by the post office authorities that there is no such post office in Texas. Will some friend of Mr. Devenport's kindly send us his correct address?

Last Thursday night F. Loyd Tate came up from Wetumpka, to be in the minstrel show I suppose, but made a miss somehow or another and never saw the show at all.

I don't know for certain that he came for the especial purpose of seeing the show, perhaps, as he is a candidate, he had other reasons, anyhow, he seemed quite proud to be in Clanton, and is very hopeful over his nomination and election.

Not much doing in the political line, but considerable talk going around about prospective candidates. The county committee is called to meet February 2, and then comes the deluge. Once the candidates get to work there will be no dearth of news.

After a man has been engaged in active business the greater part of his lifetime, it is a somewhat hard matter for him to occupy his time after he retires. Some months ago, when F. A. Gulledge went out of business at Verbena, I wondered what he would find to do to amuse himself. It now transpires that, while out of active business, he is a busy man, as you will find by referring to his card in the last column of this page. Do you want to borrow money or discount a note, see Mr. Gulledge. Have you a place to sell or want to buy, then see Mr. Gulledge. But his chief hobby is in improving the breed of cattle, and this he thinks would be of great benefit to the county. He owns some fine stock, which is at the service of the public, the matter of profit being a very secondary consideration.

CALL FOR COUNTY COMMITTEE

A meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County, is hereby called to convene at Clanton, on Tuesday, the 2nd day of February, 1904, for the purpose of taking such action with reference to the next general election as may be deemed best.

Thorsby, Ala., Jan. 18, 1904

Editor Banner—I chanced to be in Clanton a few days ago and was approached by several people who asked: When will the saloon open in Thorsby? I was not very much surprised at this questioning, for the reason that a letter had been written by someone at Thorsby and published in the Banner, setting forth that the city election in Thorsby had resulted in favor of open saloon and further stated that unfair methods had been used to bring about the result. To those who are familiar with the law, there is no need of a denial, but there is quite a number of people who do not understand the situation that are sorry to hear that Chilton county is again to be in the saloon column. To all such let me say that a more false or malicious statement has never been uttered or written by anyone. The same spirit prompted this statement that heretofore characterized the school question in Thorsby. There has been no such question for settlement in the city of Thorsby as saloon or anti-saloon, wine or anti-wine, because the wine law was enacted by the legislature for the county of Chilton, and our city has no right or power to repeal it. I mean in gallon lots. The quart law was enacted by the city council of Thorsby immediately after the charter was granted; it was re enacted again during the latter half of the year 1903, and these great prohibitionists, who are shouting and writing down with the wine, were members of the city council and never uttered a word of protest against its enactment. They, in fact, drafted the ordinance embodying the quart clause, but some people are so constructed if they can't rule they want to ruin, and this is a plain case.

In regard to votes being thrown out that should have been counted, and illegal votes cast, this is a straightout, plain, untarnished "Lie."

Now, Mr. Editor, I write these lines for the purpose only of setting this question right, and hope that people who read or hear otherwise of such conduct on the part of Thorsby and her citizens, will take time to investigate before rendering judgment. Very truly,

D. N. RIGGINS.

CANDIDATE FOR JUDGE OF PROBATE

To the People of Chilton County:

I do not presume to surprise you by announcing that I am a candidate for Judge of Probate of Chilton County subject to the action of the Democratic party. I haven't the time to see many of the voters in person, and having been a candidate in 1898, and pretty thoroughly canvassed the county and also served you as Clerk of the Circuit Court for the past five years, I do not deem it necessary for me to make a house to house canvass even if the duties of the office I now hold would permit. My office work also prevents me from writing very many individual letters, hence I hope I am excused for using the form of a circular letter as a method of soliciting your influence in my behalf.

I am persuaded that in the coming election the people will exercise extraordinary care and discretion and cast their ballots as the relative merits of the candidates may dictate and not be governed by incidental influences and side issues. All these things, I believe, will be considered and the people will govern themselves accordingly.

I do not mean to argue my own merits, but as to my fitness and qualifications, if you do not know of your own personal knowledge, I refer you to any and all who have done business with me during the five years I have been Clerk of the Circuit Court of your county. Of course, it is a well known fact that this is my native home and that I have never lived in any other county, and whatever has been done for me has come from the hands and hearts of Chilton County folks, for all of which I feel profoundly grateful to them, individually and collectively, and whatever good I have been able to do or service render has been to and for the PEOPLE of Chilton.

Now, I would not have you think that I am unmindful of the fact that I am asking you for the highest office in the gift of the citizens of our county, and I want you to bear in mind that I ask no support for this high and honored position unless my record shows me to be worthy and well qualified, and one who stands for the accomplishment of every laudable undertaking and the overthrow of every cause not in accord with law and justice.

Thanking you for any and all favors you have shown me in the past, and hoping that you can, consistently with your candid estimate of my qualifications and your obligations between the candidates, give me your aid and support, I am

Very truly yours,

E. B. DEASON.

The fire that occurred at Wilton, Ala., last Tuesday night, and supposed to have been a mystery, turned out to have been caused by a negro named Will Johnson, alias Will Thomas.

Herbert Bell, of Brierfield, caught him with several bolts of cloth, canned goods and soap in his possession. The evidence gave rise to the belief that the fire was caused to cover the burglary of Jackson's store and postoffice.

The senate committee on foreign relations directed Senator Cullom to report the Panama treaty with three amendments. The republican members voted for the treaty, but only two democrats, Morgan and Money, were present. The former voted against the treaty and Mr. Money stated that he had not yet had time to consider it, as it was the first meeting of the committee he had been able to attend.

The three amendments related to sanitation, limitation of cities and control of harbors. The United States by the amendment relating to sanitation is granted more direct power in all sanitary regulations. The amendment concerning the limitation of the cities more specifically defines the limits of Panama and Colon in relation to the canal zone. The harbor amendment gives the United States control of the harbors for the purpose of improvements.

Mississippi's New Officers.

All of the Mississippi state officials who were elected last November, except the governor, took the oath of office and entered upon the discharge of their duties Monday at noon and will serve four years. They are as follows:

Lieutenant Governor—J. P. Carter, of Perry.

Secretary of State—J. W. Powers, of Hinds.

Auditor—T. M. Henry, of Hinds.

Treasurer—W. J. Miller, of Penola.

Superintendent of Education—H. L. Whitfield, of Rankin.

Land Commissioner—N. N. Hall, of Holmes.

The inauguration of Governor Jas. K. Vardaman takes place Tuesday at noon, and will be the most unostentatious affair ever experienced in the state. This is according to the expressed desire of the new governor. He simply takes the oath of office before Chief Justice Whitfield, delivers his address and goes to work.

Ensley, Ala., has sold $60,000 worth of sewerage bonds at par.

At a largely attended mass meeting of Nashville citizens resolutions were passed requesting the Tennessee senators to vote for the adoption of the Panama canal treaty.

The New York Central railroad is negotiating with the American Locomotive company for the purchase of 112 locomotives. The contract will amount to $1,750,000.

BROTHERS ARRESTED

Harry and Frank Walden, sons of a farmer who lives near Hartselle, Ala., are accused of numerous crimes.

Robbery after robbery has occurred recently in Hartselle and the Decaturs and all are charged to them.

When arrested there was found on their persons an overcoat stolen from New Decatur, a quantity of tickets which had been stolen from the New Decatur depot, several neckties and some underclothing stolen from Hartselle & Co.'s store, several pieces of jewelry stolen from Britnells' drug store, Hartselle, and various other articles.

A Nice Order.

The Pennsylvania steel corporation has beaten the American steel trust and Carnegie company for a contract for material for the Turkish Hedjaz railway, and has signed a contract for 20,000 tons of rails for the railway.

Bishop Charles B. Galloway cabled all Methodist missionaries in Korea to move immediately to Seoul or go at once to Japan. Has received direct advices that their lives are in great danger.

COTTON WAS KING.

The Great Record in the Year that Has Just Passed.

"King Cotton" made his greatest record in the export figures of the calendar year 1903. From 1893 to 1903 cotton exports averaged a little more than three-fourths of a million dollars a day. In 1903 they averaged more than one million per day, and in the closing months of the year twenty two and a half million dollars per day. Exports of cotton in December, 1903, shows a greater value than in any preceding month in the history of cotton exportation, the total being over $72,000,000, and this averaging two and one-half million dollars for every day of the month.

The United Kingdom was in 1903 the largest customer for our cotton. The total value of cotton exported from the United States to the United Kingdom in the calendar year 1903 was, in round terms, $147,000,000, and this forms 39 per cent of our total cotton exports in that year. Germany stood second in the list of our cotton customers, the total value of our cotton exported to Germany during the year being 111 million dollars.

The United Kingdom in the year 1903 aggregated but about five million dollars in excess of the total for 1900, while that to Germany exceeded by twenty-three millions the total for 1900, the former record year.

During the past twenty years exports of cotton reached low ebb in 1895, when $184,432,322 worth was shipped. In 1903 the value was $378,518,718.

FT. BARRANCAS

Will Be Enlarged—More Soldiers Coming.

Two more companies of artillery are expected to arrive at Fort Barrancas, near Pensacola, Fla., about February 4th. The companies have been serving in Cuba for the past two or three years and will be brought on a transport, which is due to arrive on that date.

Tents are being set up and other preparations made for the troops. It was the first intention to send the troops through Pensacola to another point, but from what can now be learned the two companies will be stationed at the local post.

The companies will occupy tents, it is stated, until new barracks can be constructed, which will be quite soon. The new barracks, which have been authorized, will cost about $200,000, and contracts will be awarded in a few months.

Miners' Convention.

President Mitchell and Vice President Lewis made reports. The treasurer's report contains this:

"There has been received from the anthracite strike assessment and in donations listed as the defense fund $57,646, and from the 10 per cent assessment $258,351. There has been paid in donations to assist various district and other unions needing help $308,780.

"The receipts for strike purposes have exceeded the expenditures by $7,218, while the net increase in the funds of the national organization for eleven months ending November 30 is $79,078. On that date there was in Indianapolis banks belonging to the organization $1,129,137. The paid-up membership is 289,836. The total membership is approximately 330,000."

To avoid the loss of revenue from these 40,000 members not paid up, which would amount to $96,000 annually, the stamp system is advocated.

The fifteenth annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America opened in Tomlinson hall, Indianapolis, Ind., Monday morning. Approximately 1,000 delegates from the various districts of the country are in attendance, Canada being also represented.

The convention will continue for ten days and will be followed by the annual joint conference between the miners and coal operators of the states of Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and western Pennsylvania. It is at the joint conference that the wage scale for the ensuing year is fixed. It involves 300 operators and 150,000 miners.

The right of the city of Natchez, Miss., to convert a cemetery into a public park is questioned. The ground was donated to the city for burial purposes in 1817 by two merchants. One of the conditions was that it be forever used as a burial ground.

In 1890 the dead were unearthed and moved together with coffins and tombstones to another part of the city and the cemetery was turned into a park. In order to maintain its identity as a burial ground the authorities made a hole in one corner of the park, put the bones of many of the dead into it and erected a mound over them. The heirs now claim the city has lost the title to the property.

Advices received from Winston county are to the effect that ex-Sheriff B. M. O'Rear, formerly of Walker county, Alabama, who shot and killed John Wilson on December 23d last, was admitted to bail in the sum of $1,500 in a preliminary hearing.

Bessemer and Ensley, Ala., rolling mills are getting ready for business. It is reported that they have a large number of orders on hand, enough to run the entire plants for a long time.

FLORIDA'S FINANCES

State Comptroller Issues His Annual Report.

In his annual report State Comptroller Croom has this to say:

The rate of taxation levied in 1902 for general revenue to pay the appropriations for the current expenses of the state and for interest on the bonded debt was two and one-half (2 1-2) mills, and the tax rate levied for the same purpose for 1903 was one and one-half (1 1-2) mills a reduction of one mill.

The state tax rate for all purposes as authorized by the legislature is six and one half (6 1-2) mills as follows:

General revenue to pay the appropriations for the current expenses of the state and for interest on the bonded debt	2 mills
State school tax	1 mill
Pension tax	2 mills
Board of health tax	1-2 mill
Total	6 1-2 mills

The tax rate levied for each of the different state purposes for 1902 and 1903, was 5 mills.

It will be seen that the general revenue tax, in connection with which the governor was vested with discretion, was reduced in 1903 one mill below the rate to which it was reduced for 1902. The fact that the total taxation for 1903 is the same as that levied for 1902 is due to an increase by the legislature of one mill on account of the pension tax, which was rendered necessary by the additions to the roll of pensioners.

The state school tax is fixed by the constitution and is not subject to change by legislative or executive action.

It was possible to reduce the tax rate for general revenue purposes in spite of the fact that the legislature of 1901 appropriated about $328,000 for extraordinary purposes (enlarging capitol, educational institutions, etc.), and the legislature of 1903 appropriated for like extraordinary purposes about $444,000 (educational institutions, uniform system of county high schools, etc.), payable from the money derived from taxation for the general revenue fund, from which the regular current expenses and interest on the state debt are paid.

The bonded debt has been reduced until the indebtedness amounts to $601,567 in 3 per cent bonds, issued under the act of 1901, and they are all held by the educational funds of the state.

No other indebtedness of any kind exists and all legal claims are promptly paid upon presentation. There is an aggregate balance of $507,661.40 in the state treasury, of which $269,068.58 is to the credit of general revenue fund to meet current expenses. The tax rate for this purpose is the lowest, with perhaps one or two exceptions, of any of the states in the union.

The number of pensioners has increased from 1,675 in 1902 to 2,700 in 1903. Warrants in payment of pensions are issued quarterly.

In 1898 the assessed valuation of all taxable property was $93,900,823.75, and 1903 the assessed valuation $111,333,735.

During the past year four new banks were authorized to commence business and four more filed applications for charters.

State property is insured for a total of $490,393.

The state of Florida issued bonds in the years 1871 and 1[illegible] amounting in the aggregate to one million two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, drawing interest at the rate of seven and six per cent per annum, respectively. All of these bonds have been retired and destroyed by fire, except one bond of the denomination of one hundred dollars, which was presented for payment too late to be included in manuscript bond and destroyed with the other bonds, and is now being held by the state treasurer.

The amount distributed to the several counties from the proceeds of the hire of state convicts for nine months of 1903 was $120,571.85; the amount apportioned for distribution to the several counties for the last quarter of 1903 is $40,000; total, $160,571.85.

This is an income to the counties that is not derived from taxation and in many instances is more than sufficient to pay all the costs of criminal prosecution chargeable against the counties, thus avoiding the levy of any taxes for that purpose.

In the case of Rogers vs. the state of Alabama the supreme court of the United States sustained the right of the negro to serve as juror in criminal cases. Rogers was tried for murder and negroes were not allowed to sit on the jury for no other reason, it is alleged, than that of their race and color. The supreme court holds this to be a denial of equal rights under the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution.

John Simpson, one of the best known young men of Montgomery, Ala., has disappeared. He left the city about ten days ago, and nothing has since been heard of him. He was bookkeeper for the Snow-Tullis Hardware company, and is reported to be short over $2,000.

Charters of four new banks in Mississippi have been approved: Hickory, $30,000; Tebula, $50,000; Hexie, $25,000, and Bay Springs, $50,000.

"PERRY HEATH, Secretary.
"M. A. HANNA, Chairman."

TO FIGHT THE BOLL WEEVIL.

Department of Agriculture Has Formulated Plans for the Campaign.

It is expected that the president will sign the bill appropriating $250,000 to fight the cotton boll weevil at once.

The agricultural department is already formulating plans of procedure to minimize the ravages of the pest. The department does not contemplate a war of extermination on the weevil. The plan is to establish small farms here and there in Texas, and parts of Arkansas and Louisiana.

On these farms experiments will be made by so fertilizing cotton as to make it mature before September, when the weevil gets in its work. The farmers will be given the benefits of these demonstrations. Various kinds of cotton will be planted to ascertain the best variety for early maturity. North Carolina cotton will be especially used.

The agricultural department, about the 1st of next month, will issue a series of instructions to farmers on the subject. The boll weevil is traveling at the estimated rate of 125 miles a year.

Bryan's Plans.

Mr. Bryan telegraphs as follows from Hannibal, Mo.:

"Have not heard of Hearst's St. Louis paper. I shall publish daily edition of The Commoner in St. Louis during the convention.

"W. J. BRYAN."

The big Florida winter resort hotels are opening.

Making Records.

All the mines in the Pratt City district of Alabama are running on full time. The new machine that was installed during the suspension last summer is proving successful. The output of No. 1 mine during the past week has broken all former records. The daily output averages nearly 1,000 tons. Other mines also report gains.

Two Chambers County Residents Run Over by Train.

Tom Turnham and Jesse Edge were killed by a south-bound Central of Georgia train from Roanoke at a crossing a half mile north of Lafayette, Ala., Friday afternoon. They were on their way home.

Two mules were killed and the wagon and load of supplies were a total wreck. Edge was killed instantly. Turnham lived half an hour, but was unconscious.

The heads and bodies of both were terribly mangled.

Each leaves a large family with meager means.

There is said to be great irritation in St. Petersburg over the failure of Russian diplomacy. It is recognized that the conclusion of the Chinese-American treaty has materially affected Russia's prestige. It is reported that Russia stands in greater fear at the present moment of the United States than Great Britain.

The president sent to the senate the nomination of William H. Armbrecht to be United States attorney for the southern district of Alabama.

When the house convened the [illegible] ate resolution authorizing the erection of a monument in memory of the late President Benjamin Harrison [illegible] land owned by the United States [illegible] the city of Indianapolis was passed.

Representative Underwood, of Alabama, was introduced in the house [illegible] bill to exclude certain aliens from admission to the United States under the immigration laws. The bill provides that admission to the United States shall be denied to persons over fifteen years of age who cannot read the English language or some other language; but an admissible immigrant now in or hereafter admitted into the United States may bring [illegible] or send for his wife, his children under eighteen years of age, and his parents or grandparents over fifty years of age, if they are otherwise admissible, whether they are so able to write or not.

Representative Robinson introduced a bill providing for the admission of Oklahoma and Indian Territory into the union as the state of Oklahoma.

JANUARY 15TH.

Today's session of the senate began and closed with the passage of a number of bills on the calendar.

The intervening time was given over to a speech by Mr. Teller on the Panama canal question, Mr. Teller contending that the course of the president in connection with the recent revolt of Panama had been contrary to precedent, and in contravention of international law.

The senate adjourned until Monday.

The Gorman Panama resolution was laid before the senate. Before any one was recognized to speak on the resolution Mr. Gorman offered a number of amendments, striking out the word "intervention" wherever it appears, thus modifying the resolution so as to make it an inquiry of the president concerning the use of American military forces in the Isthmus of Panama.

The house held no session Saturday.

JANUARY 18TH.

The postoffice inquiry resolution and the Panama canal question divided the attention of the senate. The first half of the session was given up to the inquiry, Messrs. Hale and Gorman being the speakers. The question went over until tomorrow.

The discussion of the Panama canal question was conned to the continuation of Mr. Teller's argument that the course of the United States in the recent revolt of Panama was contrary to international law and sound morals.

Resolutions looking to an investigation by congress of the postoffice department was laid before the senate before the opening of the session.

The house devoted a brief session to the District of Columbia business. While in committee of the whole on one of the bills the postoffice scandal was discussed.

When the house convened the speaker announced the resignation of Mr. Griggs, democrat, of Georgia, from the committee on coinage, weights and measures, and Mr. Hardwick, democrat, of Georgia, from the committee on revision of the laws and the appointment of Mr. Hardwick to the committee on coinage, weights and measures; Mr. Garber, democrat of Ohio, to the committee on revision of the laws, and Mr. Currier, republican, of New Hampshire, as chairman of the committee on patents.

Some irregularities in the postoffice department were discussed, the discussion being precipitated by a letter from M. W. Lewis to Representative Bartlett, of Georgia.

Orders have been sent to the commodore in command of the German West Indian squadron to send the ships now at Havana to United States ports. During the next ten days the Vinetta with the commodore on board will go to New Orleans, the Falke to Mobile, and the Gazelle to Galveston, Tex.

New Rolling Mill.

Excavation is being made for the laying of the foundation of the new rolling mill and manufacturing plant which is now in course of erection by the Eclipse Rolling Mill and Manufacturing company, at East Birmingham. The machinery is now on the ground and will be installed as soon as possible. The officers of this company say they will have the plant completed within sixty or ninety days and ready to turn out orders for all material made by them.

TRAIN ROBBERS

A passenger train on the Seaboard Air Line was held up one mile east of Sanderson, Fla., Saturday night by four white men.

The engine was stopped by a volley of shots. The fireman and engineer were taken off the engine and carried to the second-class coach and the robbers ran the train ahead about a half mile, where they blew open the baggage car, mistaking it for the express. The train conductor went forward, but was fired on and driven back to the coaches.

Conductor L. S. Peck, who was in charge of the train, called for firearms and volunteers. N. H. Harrison, claim agent of the road; B. B. McCaa, traveling auditor, and J. C. Williamson, foreign agent, responded and the four went forward, opened fire and drove the robbers away.

The robbers secured nothing and made no attempt to rob the passengers. The sheriffs of Duval and Baker counties are on the trail of the robbers with bloodhounds.

JAMES L. BLAIR DEAD.

Was Counsel General for the St. Louis World's Fair.

James L. Blair of St. Louis died at Eustis, Fla., Saturday morning. Mr. Blair went there about five weeks ago in search of health, and it was thought he was improving until last week when his condition changed alarmingly for the worst.

Mr. Blair held the position of general counsel for the St. Louis exposition, and Mrs. Blair, that of president of the board of lady managers, which positions were resigned owing to certain charges of official misconduct of the deceased.

The cause of the death as stated in the physician's certificate is congestion of the brain.

A SEWERAGE SYSTEM

To Be Installed in the City of Athens, Alabama.

Athens, Ala., has let the contract for a sewerage system for the town. The successful bidder was the Nashville Plumbing company and they took the contract for laying four miles of sewer for $11,063.85.

Work is to begin the first of February and is to be completed by the first of June.

The work is to be paid in cash as the town has nearly enough cash on hand to pay the bill when the work is done.

Caught in New Orleans.

Fred W. Peterson, formerly a bank clerk of Montgomery, Ala., has been captured in New Orleans.

Until last August Peterson had for five years been in the employ of the Merchants' and Planters' Farley National bank, working as a collection clerk. He was considered a very sober young man, free of bad habits.

In August he asked for a leave of absence of two weeks, under the guise of spending the vacation in North Carolina. Soon after his departure an examination of his accounts showed that he was short $4,965. Detectives followed him to Chicago and New York. No further trace was secured and a report was received that he died in a western town.

Several weeks ago, however, it was ascertained by friends of Peterson that he was in New Orleans and he was apparently making no effort to conceal his identity. The bonding company soon located him and he was arrested.

The Citizens' Savings Bank and Trust company, capitalized at $50,000, has been organized in Birmingham, Ala., and will begin business about March 1st.

James E. Butler, of New Hope, Ala., sold 1,400 bales of cotton Saturday at the uniform rate of 13 1-4 cents a pound. The money consideration was nearly $100,000, making this the largest sale of cotton ever made in Madison county.

The West Pratt Coal company has doubled its capital.

Docked a Dock.

The small wooden floating dock at the Pensacola, Fla., navy yard was taken out on the Spanish steel dock, the work being done successfully. Two holes were found in the bottom of the dock, which will be repaired. Some weeks ago, when an effort was made to dock this structure, the blocks slipped and both were badly damaged, the pontoons of the steel dock being crushed.

It is announced that the czarina is suffering from pleurisy. The first court ball of the season, which was set for January 25th, has been postponed in consequence.

Murdered His Sick Wife.

Jack Norwood, a well known farmer residing near Flint, Ala., murdered his wife and escaped from justice. Officers are scouring the country for him. It is said that Norwood's wife had been ill for sometime and confined to her bed. She died suddenly and he refused to have her dressed for burial. Suspicion was aroused and upon examination several ugly knife wounds were found upon the body.

SOURCE OF REVENUE

The Convict System as It is Now Managed.

The quarterly report of President J. M. Carmichael, of the state board of convict inspectors, made public by the state executive department, shows that the convict department for the calendar year of 1903 earned the total of $220,661.88.

The report was made at the end of the first year's trial of the new plan of working the convicts by the state instead of leasing them to the mining companies and operators. In 1899 the department earned something over $6,000 and in 1903 it earned over $200,000.

The following statement shows alone the net earnings, after full payment of all liabilities and expenses originated and incurred during the year. The stock and property counted in the statement are still on hand. The statement, however, includes nothing for permanent improvements which have been made:

Amount paid into the treasury for the year	$186,112 96
Amount earned during the year, due, but perfectly good	21,044 55
Live stock purchased for farms still on hand	1,927 00
Mules, tools, implements and furnishing for the mines	11,603 37
Total amount of net earnings for 1903	$220,681 88

This statement contains the value of the cotton of the year 1902, but does not contain the value of the cotton made during the year 1903, which is nearly all still on hand and worth more than the 1902 crop.

May Pay 65 Per Cent.

The receiver for the Bessemer, Ala., Savings bank is preparing to pay a dividend, and it is thought that it will not be later than the 1st of February. There has been a great deal of confusion in getting the bank's affairs in shape, on account of so many of the creditors failing to file their claims. It is thought that the first dividend will be about 15 per cent.

The court has ordered a sale of the property of the bank at public outcry during the next thirty days, and another payment will be made on or about the first of March, and it is thought that this will pay the creditors another dividend of 15 per cent. Then the litigation will begin and if the receiver is as fortunate as is now thought the defunct bank will pay a total dividend of 65 per cent.

The Pig Iron Market.

During the past week the pig iron market has been normal so far as inquries are concerned for this period of the year. Owing to the recent heavy purchases of southern brands there have not been many sales at the advanced prices. Extraordinary efforts were made to allow all consumers to cover their probable wants for the first three months at the lowest basis. Southern furnaces as a rule are unwilling to sell beyond the first quarter. The demand for northern iron is confined to small contracts for early delivery.

Saw Mill Burned.

The saw mill of John Cathcart at Decatur, Ala., one of the largest mills in north Alabama, was totally destroyed by fire at an early hour Saturday morning. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss will aggregate $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

Rifle teams of Birmingham and Bessemer, Ala., met in a shooting Friday. Bessemer winning by the score of 1,190 to 1,182.

A general rearrangement of the military map of the United States is brought about by the order establishing the new military divisions, effective Friday. Under the new order of things there are four military divisions in the United States and one in the Philippines.

Placer mining has been resorted to of the refuse in the Iroquois theater.

May Supplant Spain's Product.

Alabama pyrites is now being experimented with, and if the experiments should prove satisfactory there is a probability that they will take the place of pyrites now being imported from Spain in great quantities.

The pyrites beds in Clay county are said to be voluminous and will stand hard working for some years to come. The Louisville and Nashville railroad has backed the construction of a railroad, extending from their line through Talladega to Pyriton, and there will be no trouble in getting the product.

Older Than Her Country.

Linda Allison, claiming to be the oldest colored woman in the United States, died at Pensacola, Fla., Saturday. She was born in Virginia in 1770, and had reached nearly the century ago when she was freed after the civil war. She has been a resident of Pensacola since securing her freedom, but for twenty-three years has been blind and unable to walk.

EUROPEAN CAVALRY

May Be Supplied From American Stock.

Although the United States is deficient in creating new breeds of animals, according to Secretary Wilson, who outlined the policy of the department of agriculture to the house committee on agriculture, Sir Thomas Lipton buys horses and pigs at Chicago.

The horses, says the secretary, he ships to Ireland and trains them as jumpers, then sells them in Great Britain to "ten stone Englishmen" as Irish jumpers. The pigs, of which he selects the thin ones, he cans as "Irish bacon," which he also sells in England.

Secretary Wilson believes the United States can furnish the mounts for the cavalry of Europe with proper study of the breeding of horses, and the department is turning its attention to this subject at the present time. The only thing the United States has ever produced in the way of new breeds, he says, is perhaps a few breeds of hens, although we have converted a running horse into a trotter.

Many other statements of interest were made to the committee by the secretary. Discussing the problem of irrigation he said the experts of his department were studying the problem of how to handle the soil so as to conserve the water available. In this connection he mentioned the sugar beet crop, which, he said, was steadily on the increase.

The forests of the country, the secretary declared to be disappearing at an alarming rate. He asked for an increase of $100,000 additional for the bureau of forestry, declaring this to be the time to inaugurate the new methods in forestry.

DENIES MURDER,

But Admits Gambling With the Dead Man Same Day.

Ben Johnson, a young white man, is charged with the murder of G. W. Wall, near Cordova, Ala., Friday afternoon.

The theory is that Johnson killed Wall and put the body on the tracks of the Frisco railroad, where it was run over and mangled.

A watch belonging to Wall was found in Johnson's house and Wall's knife was found on Johnson's person.

Johnson gave this statement: That he met Wall at the Frisco railroad depot, and that he proposed a game of cards with him, and that they went up the railroad track about half a mile from Cordova and engaged in a game, he (Johnson) winning several dollars from Wall, and that he left Wall about 3 o'clock, Johnson returning to Cordova, Wall going toward Jasper.

Wall is said to be from Flat Top mines, having held the position of chief powder man. He was well-dressed and looked to be in good circumstances.

The town of Brighton, Ala., has filed a complaint against the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company that a dam which the company built near the town has been the cause of a great deal of malarial suffering among the citizens of the town.

Milk in bricks is being sold in California. The process is one of evaporation and the addition of seven parts of water to the solid form will produce an almost natural milk in which cream will rise.

Mrs. Knight, of Mobile, Ala., has sent to Mississippi's department of archives and history, a handsome life, size painting of her father, Gen. W. F. Bradley, a Mississippian, who was one of the leaders of the confedracy.

Sues for $150,000.

Capt. James M. Elliott, who recently purchased the Anniston, Ala., plant of the Southern Car and Foundry company, has entered suit in the New York courts for $150,000 against the Pittsburg parties to whom he sold the Southern Car and Foundry company. This amount is said to be the balance of purchase money due Capt. Elliott.

A CIRCUIT'S CONSTITUTIONALITY

To Be Tested as the Result of a Murder Trial.

The attorneys of Harry Newton, white, the ex-convict who was convicted of killing Sam Lacy at Wetumpka, Ala., and given a life sentence, are going to test the constitutionality of the act creating the fifteenth judicial circuit. This circuit is known as the "Pony Circuit" and is composed of the counties of Montgomery, Elmore, Chilton and Autauga. The attorneys claim that the act is unconstitutional and set out eleven grounds to support their contention.

THE RUG MAKERS' WORK

IT TAKES MILLIONS OF LITTLE STRANDS TO MAKE A MASTERPIECE.

Weary Years of Labor Required to Fix in Place the Minute Pieces Which Go to Build Up the Marvelous Whole.

Some ward whose name is not given us has told the story of the oriental rug and hanging—a story that is now illustrated by an Armenian in Los Angeles who patiently weaves his rug each day in the window of one of Broadway's stores, relates the Times of that city. It is a story full of interest, replete with life lessons and one which will delight those interested in the rare and beautiful products of the Orient.

Even as you read it you may be ensconced in the oriental corner of your home, its allurements showing indistinct through the fascinating subdued light that comes from everywhere yet seems to come from nowhere—and to reach its peaceful depths and bury yourself in its innumerable cushions you must pass over the big rug which deadens the sound of your footsteps and adds its full share to the glory of the room.

It is a splendid work of art, this rug—all its colors so beautifully harmonized and blended, its design intricate but perfect. Many times it has gladdened your artistic eye—but has your mind ever counted its cost? Have you ever wondered how its millions of pieces were grown, gathered, colored and finally woven to make the work of art that you crush beneath your feet? Do you know what part of a lifetime—yes, what part of a life—went into that rug?

Years of a lifetime—weary years of patient, painstaking work with minute pieces, each fixed in its appointed place to build up the marvelous whole.

In the far-off hills and vales of Armenia the rug maker's sheep graze, and from them he gathers the wool to weave into his masterpieces. From the plants which he finds on the broad acres he distills the dyes which give to the fabric its distinctive and artistic colors. Spinning the rouga threads and coloring them, he clips them into millions of pieces between an inch and two inches long.

Then for a time the artisan gives place to the artist—for the rug maker must be a designer of patterns as well as a craftsman. Hour after hour and day after day he bends to his sketching work, and when at last it is finished and he says "It is well!" he lays aside the paper, having no need for it in the process of weaving except, perhaps, for occasional reference. The pattern has been so carefully worked out on paper that every detail is fixed in his mind, and he sits down to his loom and builds his rug as the painter coming in from a day with nature, glances at his sketch book and puts the hills and trees and sky into his picture from the impressions his mind carries of what his eyes have seen.

For it is only the employe who hangs the pattern above his head. The lone rug maker, representative of the old, picturesque school, needs no pattern to guide him, for he takes his work at its beginning and carries it to completion from the wool on the sheep's back to the masterpiece which adorns your floor.

Just now he is at work on a rug only 2x4 feet in size, but it will require not less than three months' work to finish it. "The big rug, the fine one," he says, stopping a moment to answer some questions, "many years the rug maker must work on it—many, many years—I cannot tell how many. For we work not by days and years when the masterpiece is in front. Time? It is nothing! What do a few years count if the work is done well? And the rug maker thinks not of time but of a masterpiece."

Picking up a few of the inch-long strands and weaving them slowly and carefully between the threads of the loom in front of him, he smiled as if in pity for the emptiness of the question. Stopping again in his work, he turned to the Times' representative sitting beside him and continued.

"You Americans; you ask not those questions of the painter. Why? You take his picture, and put it on the wall, and call him great, and write much in your papers about him. It is his masterpiece. He himself is in the picture. It is great, wonderful. It is so with the rug maker in Armenia. The rug is his picture—he loves to make it as the painter loves to paint—and what difference if a lifetime is gone when the rug is finished, so that the work is well done? It is not work, that which we do for love of it, and the rug maker loves his work, always."

Employe rug makers earn from 10 to 20 cents a day—think of it! But the spirit of commercialism and love of gold are gradually penetrating to the home of the oriental rug makers, and there is grave danger that the oriental rug will pass into history as have the buffalo of the western plains. For the Armenian has discovered that he can go into other countries and earn from $1 to $3 a day in other lines of work, and he is slowly but surely abandoning his weary, poorly-paid vocation. The members of the "old school" will continue to make rugs as long as they live, but they cannot begin to supply the demand and the younger generation, the active and ambitious workers, are not satisfied with the meagre remuneration offered by the rug-making profession and the "work for the sake of working" spirit appears to be diminishing in Armenia just as it is in other countries.

If you are a lover and owner of orientals you will be interested in this Broadway rug maker, and a visit to him will make you more than ever appreciative of the masterpieces upon your floors. The rug he is now making is 48 inches long by 24 inches wide. Allowing only one-sixteenth of an inch for the width of each thread—and this is generous—it will require about half a million pieces of thread to complete this rug, and if exact figures could be had the number would probably approximate a million. This is a coarse rug, too, and from it you can get a faint idea of the millions—possibly billions—of pieces required to make one of the large silk rugs. You can also figure how many, many weary years it takes to finish one of those masterpieces.

A COLLECTION OF MANGERS.

One of the Sights in the New Bavarian National Museum.

The great charm of the new Bavarian National Museum at Munich perhaps lies in the fact that its collections were made first and its building afterward. This method has resulted in unusual harmony and surprises at every turn. The architect has planned arches to be borne by stone columns from early Roman Bavaria, and rooms to be ceiled by genuine panels from the Middle Ages, he has cut doorways to fit the worn doors at his command, and has built a vaulted chapel to hold the wealth of ecclesiastical treasures.

Among the many individual collections of the museum, by far the most original is the so-called "Krippensammlung," or collection of mangers. To the ears of Protestant America this expresses little or nothing, and seems to be a more appropriate department for a county fair than for an art museum. But the Roman Catholic church in its constant appeals to the eyes and ears of its followers, has, through long centuries, invented some very beautiful methods of teaching little children, as well as those children of an older growth, the unlettered and the untaught. Thus it is that the Holy Sepulcher is still built on Good Friday in many foreign churches, while on Christmas eve the story of Holy Night is represented to the eye by a group of little figures gathered about a manger.

Whoever has happened on such a scene at Christmas time in a Catholic church in our own country has doubtless been more impressed with the originality of the method than with any artistic merit in the figures; but, in the land of artists across the sea, much skill and beauty have been wrought into the little Christmas mangers. These have been a part of the equipment of churches and monasteries for centuries, but in times of disestablishment and poverty many of them were scattered abroad. About a thousand have been gathered into this Schmeder collection at Munich, which represents German, Austrian, Neapolitan and Sicilian workmanship, and for variety and interest leaves nothing to be desired.

Imagine, if you can, hundreds of little figures—dolls if you choose, but rather miniature men and women, for most of them are carved with a skill which amounts to art. So full of life is every line and feature that one half expects to see them move. Some are of wax, but most of wood or bisque, a few are only two or three inches tall, but the majority are from eight to 16 inches. The coloring of the features is lifelike, and the poses of the figures are natural; the costumes are elaborate, and would charm the doll-loving little girl, while the soldiers, clad in full armor, would delight her brother as well.

Many of these fascinating figures are displayed in cases which fill several rooms, but the most interesting part of the collection consists of scenes actually arranged as they were every Christmas in the churches and monasteries for which they were made. Great panes of glass are set in the walls of darkened passages, and behind these are constructed miniature landscapes, the extreme background formed by painted scenes which seem to carry the eye for miles. The only light comes from above, and is so cleverly arranged that it adds the last touch of reality to the whole. In such settings the little figures are so lifelike that one seems to be looking at human beings through reversed opera-glasses, or to be as near the land of Lilliput as the thickness of a pane of glass.—From Emma Ernestine Porter's "Christmas Mangers" in the Century.

Widows.

A Chicago mathematician announces that Chicago, with 60,396 widows, has a larger number than any other community in the country. It is added that the number of widowers in the city is only 23,097.

As a matter of fact, the state in which widows are most numerous is New York, in which they number 320,000. The city in which they are most numerous is the city of New York, where there are 105,000.

There were by the last federal census 2,720,000 widows in the whole United States, of whom, it is not worthy to remark, 83,000 were in Indiana and only 8000 in Utah.

There were 128,000 in Massachusetts, less than the total number in the two states of Alabama and Mississippi, though the view pretty generally prevails that the number of widows is disproportionately large throughout New England.

There are nearly 2000 in Hawaii and 1700 in Alaska, a proportionately larger number than in the city of Chicago.—New York Sun.

Vienna, Austria, is now suffering from a dust plague, the low temperature rendering it impossible to water the streets with safety.

STOCK LAW ELECTION

The Court of County Commissioners held a special term Monday for the purpose of considering a petition from a majority of the freeholders in Beats 5 and 10 for the repeal of the existing stock law in these Beats. This is the first case of the kind to come before the Commissioners under the new general stock law passed by the last legislature.

The petition bore 229 signatures and the necessary amount to pay the cost of the election was put up with the Probate Judge.

The court ordered that an election be held at the regular polling places in Beats 5 and 10 on Monday, Februrary 29, 1904, and the following managers of election were appointed:

Verbena Box, Beat 5—J. H. Gulledge, J. T. Bland and Noah Duffee; Returning officer, W. T. Manning.

Cooper Box, Beat 10—J. M. Grant, R. J. Downs and H. M. Ferguson; Returning officer, J. M. Curlee.

The returns have to be made to the Court on the day following the election, and on the second day the Court canvasses the returns and announces the result. If a majority of the votes cast are for Stock Law, Yes, then the existing stock law will be continued, and if the majority votes for Stock Law, No, then the law is repealed. No other election on this same question can be held in those two Beats until a year has elasped, and the voters had better make up their minds whether they want stock law or no, and vote accordingly.

E. B. DEASON.

For some time past it has been generally thought that Mr. E. B. Deason would likely be a candidate for the office of Judge of Probate and he annonnces his candidacy. He is so well known throughout the length and breadth of Chilton, in which county his entire life has been spent, that the people are thoroughly acquainted with him both as a citizen and county officer. He has ably served the people as Clerk of the Circuit Court; affable and agreeable in manner he would always inconvenience himself to oblige the public. His knowledge of court business would aid him greatly in the office of Probate Judge, and if he should be nominated and elected the county would have a most efficient officer.

J. M. HOLLEY.

This gentleman is a candidate for the office of Solicitor for the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit, his announcement appearing in another column. For many years he has been a resident of Elmore county, his home being at Wetumpka, where he stands high in the community. As a lawyer he is well and favorably known, and for several years was County Solicitor of Elmore county, a position in line with the office to which he now asks the voters of the District to elect him. If nominated and elected he would doubtless make a most capable official.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Jan. 18, 1904

From the action taken by several of the southern states, it looks now that the treaty with Panama would be ratified by the Senate. The people of the south undoubtedly want a canal that they have so long been denied by the machinations of the transcontinental railroads and the help of their co adjutors, the Republicans in congress. They are emphatically right in wanting a canal. It means much for them, and their future, but they ought not to tie the hands of their Senators in congress in the matter of this ratification. If Panama were the only place at which a canal could be built, they perhaps would be justified in telling their Senators that this is the last chance and we must have the canal no matter how many commandments we fracture in getting it.

But this is not only not the only place where a canal can be built, but there was a law on the statute books for the construction of a canal at Nicaragua, and the money already appropriated for it. There was not the shadow of excuse for the rape of Columbia and the birth of the bastard Panama republic. The rape was committed, and the bastard was born for the reason that the railroads wanted the canal as far away from the United States as it was possible to get it provided there was to be a canal whether or no, and because the Republican party was to get a campaign fund of five million dollars out of the ten million promised to Panama. These are two excellent reasons from a Republican standpoint for looting a neighbor republic of one of its provinces or states. While it is true we all can recognize a bastard child as a fact and an entity, and not quarrel with it because of its illegitimate birth, yet we all condemn the crime as bastardy. For that crime the Republican administration should be punished by the people of the country. The treaty should be turned down. Instead of allowing the President to say to the Democrats in the Senate that it is up to them to ratify the treaty or get no canal, they should defeat the ratification of the treaty and then say to the President that it is up to him to obey the Spooner law and go to Nicaragua or get no canal. If the treaty is ratified it will have been done by the workings of the commercial consciences of the people of the country.

The bill recently introduced by Mr. Gaines, Tennessee, for the relief of tobacco growers, and the vigor with which he is urging it, is awakening much interest. It repeals all taxes and restrictions on free and unlimited trade in leaf tobacco and permits anybody, anywhere, to buy and sell it in any quantity. It provides also that a grower may stem and twist and sell his own crop without tax or license, or deliver it to another person to sell for him. The heavy tax on leaf tobacco (six cents) and the rigid and exacting requirements of the law regulating its manufacture have given the tobacco trust complete control of tobacco and growers are complaining everywhere that they are not allowed a living price for growing it. Mr. Gaines has gone laboriously through the history of tobacco tax legislation and found that at its inception it was distinctly and repeatedly stated that it was only a war measure and would be remitted when the war necessities subsided. All of those war measures have been remitted except this burden on tobacco growers. Under existing law the department rigidly holds that the least change in the form of raw tobacco as it comes out of the barn is "manufacturing."

If a farmer stems a hand, or twists or presses it, or in any wise changes it from its form in the natural hand, he becomes a manufacturer and must either take out a license and conform to the various and onerous requirements of the law, or he is prosecuted and fined and imprisoned as a felon. He is not permitted to prepare his own product for market nor participate in any profits. The law delivers him bodily over to the trust. Tobacco growers everywhere are urging the relief afforded by Mr. Gaines' bill.

STOCK LAW ELECTION

The Court of County Commissioners held a special term Monday for the purpose of considering a petition from a majority of the freeholders in Beats 5 and 10 for the repeal of the existing stock law in these Beats. This is the first case of the kind to come before the Commissioners under the new general stock law passed by the last legislature.

The petition bore 229 signatures and the necessary amount to pay the cost of the election was put up with the Probate Judge.

The court ordered that an election be held at the regular polling places in Beats 5 and 10 on Monday, Februrary 29, 1904, and the following managers of election were appointed:

Verbena Box, Beat 5—J. H. Gulledge, J. T. Bland and Noah Duffee; Returning officer, W. T. Manning.

Cooper Box, Beat 10—J. M. Grant, R. J. Downs and H. M. Ferguson; Returning officer, J. M. Curlee.

The returns have to be made to the Court on the day following the election, and on the second day the Court canvasses the returns and announces the result. If a majority of the votes cast are for Stock Law, Yes, then the existing stock law will be continued, and if the majority votes for Stock Law, No, then the law is repealed. No other election on this same question can be held in those two Beats until a year has elasped, and the voters had better make up their minds whether they want stock law or no, and vote accordingly.

E. B. DEASON.

For some time past it has been generally thought that Mr. E. B. Deason would likely be a candidate for the office of Judge of Probate and he announces his candidacy. He is so well known throughout the length and breadth of Chilton, in which county his entire life has been spent, that the people are thoroughly acquainted with him both as a citizen and county officer. He has ably served the people as Clerk of the Circuit Court; affable and agreeable in manner he would always inconvenience himself to oblige the public. His knowledge of court business would aid him greatly in the office of Probate Judge, and if he should be nominated and elected the county would have a most efficient officer.

J. M. HOLLEY.

This gentleman is a candidate for the office of Solicitor for the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit, his announcement appearing in another column. For many years he has been a resident of Elmore county, his home being at Wetumpka, where he stands high in the community. As a lawyer he is well and favorably known, and for several years was County Solicitor of Elmore county, a position in line with the office to which he now asks the voters of the District to elect him. If nominated and elected he would doubtless make a most capable official.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Jan. 18, 1904

From the action taken by several of the southern states, it looks now that the treaty with Panama would be ratified by the Senate. The people of the south undoubtedly want a canal that they have so long been denied by the machinations of the transcontinental railroads and the help of their co adjutors, the Republicans in congress. They are eminently right in wanting a canal. It means much for them, and their future, but they ought not to tie the hands of their Senators in congress in the matter of this ratification. If Panama were the only place at which a canal could be built, they perhaps would be justified in telling their Senators that this is the last chance and we must have the canal no matter how many commandments we fracture in getting it.

But this is not only not the only place where a canal can be built, but there was a law on the statute books for the construction of a canal at Nicaragua, and the money already appropriated for it. There was not the shadow of excuse for the rape of Columbia and the birth of the bastard Panama republic. The rape was committed, and the bastard was born for the reason that the railroads wanted the canal as far away from the United States as it was possible to get it provided there was to be a canal whether or no, and because the Republican party was to get a campaign fund of five million dollars out of the ten million promised to Panama. These are two excellent reasons from a Republican standpoint for looting a neighbor republic of one of its provinces or states. While it is true we all can recognize a bastard child as a fact and an entity, and not quarrel with it because of its illegitimate birth, yet we all condemn the crime as bastardy. For that crime the Republican administration should be punished by the people of the country. The treaty should be turned down. Instead of allowing the President to say to the Democrats in the Senate that it is up to them to ratify the treaty or get no canal, they should defeat the ratification of the treaty and then say to the President that it is up to him to obey the Spooner law and go to Nicaragua or get no canal. If the treaty is ratified it will have been done by the workings of the commercial consciences of the people of the country.

The bill recently introduced by Mr. Gaines, Tennessee, for the relief of tobacco growers, and the vigor with which he is urging it, is awakening much interest. It repeals all taxes and restrictions on free and unlimited trade in leaf tobacco and permits anybody, anywhere, to buy and sell it in any quantity. It provides also that a grower may stem and twist and sell his own crop without tax or license, or deliver it to another person to sell for him. The heavy tax on leaf tobacco (six cents) and the rigid and exacting requirements of the law regulating its manufacture have given the tobacco trust complete control of tobacco and growers are complaining everywhere that they are not allowed a living price for growing it. Mr. Gaines has gone laboriously through the history of tobacco tax legislation and found that at its inception it was distinctly and repeatedly stated that it was only a war measure and would be remitted when the war necessities subsided. All of those war measures have been remitted except this burden on tobacco growers. Under existing law the department rigidly holds that the least change in the form of raw tobacco as it comes out of the barn is "manufacturing."

If a farmer stems a hand, or twists or presses it, or in any wise changes it from its form in the natural hand, he becomes a manufacturer and must either take out a license and conform to the various and onerous requirements of the law, or he is prosecuted and fined and imprisoned as a felon. He is not permitted to prepare his own product for market nor participate in any profits. The law delivers him bodily over to the trust. Tobacco growers everywhere are urging the relief afforded by Mr. Gaines' bill.

SOUTHERN FARM NOTES.

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO THE PLANTER, STOCKMAN AND TRUCK GROWER.

Beef Cattle.

We have from time to time urged the Southern farmers to give more attention to growing beef cattle. We have done so because we believed they could make money by doing so. And at the same time they could improve their farms. We have frequently called attention to the high prices that good beef was bringing. We still do so, but we are glad to find that the prices have declined. We say we are glad, because the price has gone so high that it was injuring instead of helping the business. Beef was so high that many were unable to buy it, hence the consumption was being seriously cut down.

People quit eating beef, not from choice, but from necessity. They were simply not able to pay for it. This sudden falling off in consumption on one side and the increase in supply stimulated by the high prices on the other side have materially affected the cattle market.

As our beef bills had not shown any fall in price we were a little slow in catching on to the decline in prices of beef cattle.

We have numerous complaints of difficulty in getting fair prices for beef cattle. We still insist that good beef can be sold at good prices. This is true, but it may often happen that there is no market in your immediate neighborhood. If we get to raising more good cattle so as to be able to get up car load lots it will help to get higher prices and ready sale. The packing houses in Atlanta and other Southern cities are always ready to buy all good beeves at full prices.

One trouble is that we have not learned the difference between good beef and poor beef. A cow may be fat and not be a desirable beef for the butcher or packer.

Our scrubs are too much bone and waste and too little meat in proportion.

One correspondent says it is better to sell these scrubs weighing 2500 pounds than to sell one or two Short Horns weighing the same, because the scrubs cost nothing to raise and the Short Horns cost $25 to raise.

We have never learned how to raise these scrubs, or any other kind of cattle for nothing. They cost fully as much if not more than the better breeds. They eat as much day by day, and generally require many more days to get in salable condition. And when you get ready to sell they will not bring as high a price because they are not as good beef.

Scrubs have so much waste that they usually sell for about two to two and a half cents per pound gross. Better beef breeds will bring about twice as much.

A breed that has been selected for its beef producing qualities for generations past will grow so much faster and fatten so much easier that it really costs less to grow them than it does to grow scrubs. It is a mistaken idea that they require more and better food.

It is true that they will show higher appreciation for good feeding and grow faster when well fed, but that only makes them cost less to reach any given weight.

Herefords, Short-horned, Red-polled and others will hold their own with any other cattle that are given a living chance.

But it does not pay to raise any breed on short rations and exposure. The better they are cared for and the more liberally they are fed the less will be the cost with any breed. The first six months are the most important part of any beef's life. They should be pushed while calves if we wish to get the best results.

Another says the calf has had one-half the milk for six months or more. Calves should be separated from the mother at three days.

First of all we need more and better pastures. Pasture does not mean acres to walk over, but grass to eat. Very many of our pastures—so called—are a disgrace to the farm and a reflection upon the intelligence of the owner. These are not a necessity. We have plenty of land and a number of the best pasture grasses ready to grow upon the land. But if we expect good grass we must prepare the land and give the grass a chance. Then we must supplement the pasture with an abundant supply of forage. This is easily done. A few acres well managed will enable every farmer to carry from fifteen to twenty head of cattle. When this is done a carload can be gotten up in any community, and buyers will come to your doors and give you full prices.

There are more disasters to the cotton crop than to the cattle crop. The profits are much less in cotton growing than in cattle growing. There is much more expense in growing cotton than in growing cattle. Cotton growing keeps the land from rapid improvement; in many cases helps to make it poorer. Cattle growing always improves the land and may be made to do so very rapidly. It requires less capital to grow cattle, and above all it enables you to keep out of debt.—Southern Cultivator.

Arranging a Hog Pasture.

W. L. H., Hero, Miss., writes: "I have several acres of land that I wish to put into pig pasture. It is all good land, varying from sandy basis to a little rolling. My idea has been to sow early this fall in Turf oats or rye, something that would answer for winter grazing. Early in the spring break well and sow or sod to Bermuda grass. Would I obtain good results from this plan? If not, please advise me as to what you think would be the most effective."

Oats will be preferable for the fall seeding of your land intended as a winter and spring pasture for your hogs. While rye make a vigorous growth it becomes hard and woody very much sooner than the oats, and the hogs will not eat it as closely nor with as much relish as they do the latter. In experiments conducted at this station we have found that when oats are allowed to practically mature and then grazed by hogs that they make satisfactory gains on the grain while consuming a considerable amount of the straw. Then as the exercise which they obtain keeps them healthy, while the land is enriched by the droppings of the animals, it is a very desirable method of handling the animals in the winter and early spring. By running a temporary fence across your field in March or April, one-half of the oats could be pastured down when young and the other half allowed to mature and pastured off when well headed out if desirable. Otherwise you could break up the land as soon as possible in the spring and seed to Bermuda grass. You should have no trouble in obtaining sets of the grass in your immediate vicinity, as it is quite extensively cultivated in Mississippi. Plant in rows one foot to eighteen inches apart and one foot apart in the drills. While you might plant the grass at a much greater distance, this will insure the ground being covered quickly, and in a favorable season the grass should be ready for grazing some time between July and September. Bermuda sod is an excellent thing for hogs to graze on, and as the sod is dense and tough, they do not injure it as much as in the case of many other plants.—Professor A. M. Soule.

Planting an Orchard.

We are glad to see a growing interest in planting fruit trees of all kinds all over the South. We welcome this sentiment because it shows a disposition to look more to permanent farming.

A tree is longer lived than a cotton stalk, and so when a man begins to plant trees he expects to stay and reap the benefit thereof.

For peaches, pear, apples and such like from sixteen to twenty feet each way is a good distance. We do not think it pays to crowd trees too much, and when planted as we are now directing they will grow larger, live longer and bear more and better fruit.

Pecan trees should be set from thirty to fifty feet apart, generally forty feet is about right.

The cheapest and by far the best method of making the holes for the trees is to blow them with dynamite; use a four-ounce cartridge with two feet of fuse.

With a crowbar make the hole where you wish the tree to stand two feet deep, place the cartridge in this and fire it off. This will pulverize the clay four feet deep and four feet across, and is a cheaper and better hole than can be prepared in any other way.

Place the tree in this and put in a little manure or fertilizer in the soil and press firmly around the roots of the tree. Trees set in this way will live longer and do better.

There is no danger attending the use of dynamite except in handling the caps.—Dixie Farmer.

A Word About Pecans.

We are glad to see a growing disposition to grow pecan trees.

We wish to emphasize that the pecan is one of the very prettiest shade trees that can be grown in the South.

In towns and villages as well as upon the farm they should be extensively planted for this purpose.

We know of no other tree that combines so many features of the useful and beautiful.—Southern Cultivator.

THE BREAD WE EAT

By HARRY SNYDER,
Chemist of the United States Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Minnesota.

FOOD is valuable not alone for what it contains, but for what the body can get from it. As an extreme example, leather contains about eighty per cent. of protein, but in such a form that the body cannot utilize it; on the other hand a juicy beefsteak has only eighteen per cent. of protein, nearly all of which is available to the body.

While graham flour contains slightly more of some nutrients than white flour, the graham is less digestible, and the result is that there are more available nutrients in white bread. The body secures from it more energy. A number of investigations have been made upon this point. Every digestion experiment which has been made has shown that white bread is more completely absorbed by the body than whole meal bread. So many experiments have been made in so many different places by Rubner, Goodfellow, Meyer, Romberg, Voit, and later by the United States Department of Agriculture, with the same general conclusion, that it is safe to accept the results as founded upon good experimental evidence.

The recent experiments by the United States Department of Agriculture have shown that the gluten and other nutrients in graham bread are less easily digested than the same nutrients in white bread, the bran and other wheat offals in the graham flour lessening its digestibility. This conclusion has been reached from a series of comparative digestion trials covering a period of six years. A number of men in sound health were experimented upon; some were working-men, others were students; men of both sedentary and active habits being included in the trials. A teamster, a college athlete, a naturally lazy fellow, and both corpulent and lean men were subjects of experiment. In one set of tests, the men were fed for several days upon graham bread and milk. Then white bread was substituted for the graham, and for the same number of days the rations consisted of white bread and milk. All of the food consumed was weighed, and samples were analyzed, as were also all the waste products from the body. The graham and the white flours were milled from the same lot of wheat. The conclusion reached is briefly stated as follows: "According to the chemical analysis of graham, entire wheat and standard patent flours milled from the same lot of hard Scotch Fife wheat, the graham flour contained the highest and the patent flour the lowest percentage of total protein (gluten matter). But according to the results of digestion experiments with these flours, the proportions of digestible or available protein and available energy in the patent flour were larger than in either the entire wheat or the graham flour. The lower digestibility of the protein in the graham flours is due to the fact that in both of these a considerable portion of the protein is contained in the coarser particles (bran), and so resists the action of the digestive juices and escapes digestion. Thus while there actually may be more protein in a given amount of graham or whole wheat flour than in the same weight of patent flour from the same wheat, the body obtains less of protein and energy from the coarse flour than it does from the fine, because, although the including of the bran and germ increases the percentage of protein, it decreases the digestibility." White bread supplies more available nutrients to the body than bread made from graham, entire wheat or any other kind of flour milled at the present time.

Graham bread has its place in the dietary of some persons of sedentary habits who do not have sufficient physical exercise. In such cases the bran excites peristalsis, gives the muscles of the intestines needed exercise and assists in correcting costiveness. This is a purely physiological action, and is due mainly to the mechanical action of the branny particles upon the intestinal tract.

While white bread contains more available nutrients in the forms of gluten and starch than graham bread, it is claimed by some that graham is preferable because it contains more available phosphates. Experimental evidence does not bear out this claim. The phosphates of graham, like the gluten, while greater in amount, are in less available form than in white bread. A ration of white bread alone contains sufficient phosphates to establish a phosphate equilibrium in the body of an adult; and, furthermore, not all of the phosphates of white bread are absorbed by the body, and if they were needed they would be digested and absorbed.

Dr. Robert Hutchinson, of the London Hospital, in his recent work on Food and the Principles of Dietetics, states that "When we pass on to consider the relative nutritive values of white and whole meal bread, we are on ground which has been the scene of many a controversy.

"On the whole, we may fairly regard the vexed question of whole meal versus white bread as finally settled, and settled in favor of the latter."

Those who really enjoy graham bread and find that it agrees with them should continue its use. The beneficial results arise not from increased nutrients secured from the food, but from the mechanical action of the food.—Harper's Weekly.

BOILING LAKE.

In Dominica a Natural Curiosity That Is Little Known.

Mr. Sterns-Fadelle, of Dominica, has just published a little book giving some interesting information recently obtained about a curious natural phenomenon in Dominica, one of the Lesser Antilles.

This island is only 291 square miles in area. It was colonized by the Spaniards in the seventeenth century and peopled later by French emigrants, who controlled the island uninterruptedly until the eighteenth century, and its resources have been exploited by English and French; and yet its natural curiosity in the northern part of the island had never been seen or heard of until twenty-eight years ago.

This can be explained only by the fact that the neighborhood of the boiling lake of Dominica is difficult of access. The lake was discovered by an Englishman, Dr. Nichols, who organized an expedition to explore the unknown part of the island.

One day his little party was clambering up a mountain. They suddenly came upon evidences of sulphur, and a moment later stood looking down into a crater which was filled with boiling water.

Stifling vapors rose from the agitated surface, rumblings of thunder came from the subterranean regions, and near the centre of the little lake, where the water was most violently disturbed, the furious boiling lifted the surface ten or twelve feet above the general level. The lake was constantly fed by small brooks that poured from the heights above the crater.

Mr. Sterns-Fadelle says that the lake is still boiling. It has been found to be at an altitude of 2400 metres above sea level. In form it is elliptical.

When it is filled with water it is about 200 feet long and less than 100 feet wide. Its depth is unknown. An attempt to touch bottom was made thirty feet from the water's edge, where, at a depth of 195 feet, no bottom was reported.

The water is not always in movement. At certain times the surface is calm and glistens brilliantly under the rays of the sun.

At other times it is violently agitated and boils away, exactly like a big teakettle. But, instead of the singing that accompanies the ebullitions in the kettle, the boiling fluid in this cauldron is accompanied by the gruffest and most unpleasant detonations. Little waves roll up to the narrow shelf or sandy beach, which is covered with a scum of sulphur.—New York Sun.

Lord Rowton.

There had been a disastrous fire in Clerkenwell which left a large number of very poor people homeless and destitute. There is something grotesque, and yet something not without pathos, in the method in which the late Lord Rowton set about relieving the distress. Fitted with a strong leathern girdle, from which depended two enormous pockets, he drove to Downing street to see his chief, Lord Beaconsfield. "In heaven's name, what is this?" was the exclamation of surprised salute. "I am going," replied the Secretary, "to distribute large pieces of copper and silver to the Clerkenwell sufferers. I have a hansom waiting below; when I have placed some small change in these pockets I shall drive off." "As may be seen today from the files of the illustrated newspapers," commented Mr. Escott, "the most gracious apparition amid the smoking ruins and charred homesteads on the spot of the outrage was a beautifully dressed young gentleman, with a girdle round his silk-faced frock coat, distributing benedictions and small change to hungry and grateful recipients at the East End."—M. A. P.

Reflections of an Old Goat.

It's an infamous slander and an insult to put my portrait on a beer sign. What ought to be there is the picture of some dirty-faced, red-nosed old bum that drinks the stuff.

If I run the streets everybody throws stones at me, and if I take refuge in the alleys, they say I'm looking for a meal of tin cans. That's why I sometimes associate with the policeman on the block.

I always consider it a compliment when a girl with a wad of gum turns up her nose at me. I don't chew gum myself.

I think mighty little of a man that tries to raise a beard like mine. If nature had wanted to make a goat of him it wouldn't have stood him on his hind feet and made him walk that way.

There's another thing. I don't smell half as loud as a bear, and yet people who hold their noses when I'm in sight will crowd around the grizzly's cage in the park and cackle with delight.

A boy is the meanest thing that grows, and the older he grows the meaner he is.

I've got as good a right to reflect as anybody has.—Chicago Tribune.

An Underground Confession.

Women are growing quite embarrassingly frank about the basis and the crown of their charms. On Saturday afternoon a pretty young married woman, with her five-year-old son—so much we could infer—jumped into a first-class carriage on the underground. After her came three friends, two girls and a man. "Yes, I'd never be without my wig," said the pretty woman. "It isn't as if I hadn't enough hair of my own. Celia can vouch for that." Celia nodded—we all looked for Celia's nod. "Why, the other Sunday we were lunching at Wimbleton, one of those damp, muggy days. Margaret was there—with her fringe all over her eyes. Mine was all right and yet Margaret has a maid and I haven't. I've worn a wig for three years, and I don't care who knows it." The rest of us—strangers—held our breath till the tale was told.—London Chronicle.

Caught by a Cap.

A correspondent of Country Life writes: "An Italian friend was speaking to me a few days ago of the different ways practised in Italy for the catching and destruction of birds. He asked me if I had ever heard how crows were dealt with, and on my answering in the negative he proceeded: A hole of a certain depth is dug in the ground, at the bottom of which is placed some decayed meat. A funnel-shaped wedge of paper is then inserted into the hole, the upper edge of the paper being coated with birdlime, 'Maitre Corbeau' sees the food from afar, descends to grasp it in his beak, and when he has firm hold of it he rises up again. His head is, however, swathed with the paper cap, and in his mad endeavor to rid himself of it he circles up to extraordinary heights in the air, revolving constantly and at so rapid a pace that, soon overcome with giddiness, he falls to the earth a corpse—a prey to his own instinct for food and to man's cunning and cruelty."

Boisterous Russian Merchants.

Many of the Russian merchants who attend the annual fair at Nijni Novgorod appear to amuse themselves like drunken cowboys. Last summer there were 1169 cases of broken limbs. None of these, it is said, were brought before the magistrates, being settled out of court by payment of indemnities.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JANUARY 24.

Subject: Jesus Rejected at Nazareth. Luke iv., 16-30.—Golden Text, John i., 11.—Memory Verses, 18, 19.—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

16. Jesus preaching in Nazareth (vs. 16-21). 16. "Came to Nazareth." This was a living visit. His own people were in no mood to receive Him, but Jesus very promptly opens His public work in Galilee at His own home. "He custom was." This is a good example for us. There are many evidences that Jesus had fixed religious habits. "Synagogue." The synagogue were not in use until after the Babylonish captivity. They could only be erected where ten men in easy circumstances (called men of leisure) could be found to attend them. The people sat with their faces toward the temple. There were "chief seats" for the rulers, and the women sat by themselves. "Sabbath day." We should on the Sabbath day always avoid work, conversation and reading until for the Lord's day and give ourselves to spiritual exercises. This was His custom. If He needed the means of grace surely we do. "Stood up." They stood up to read the Scriptures, but sat down to teach. The whole congregation stood during the reading. "Esaias." Greek form of Isaiah. "Opened the book." The roll. The Scriptures were written on parchment with two rollers, so that as they were read one was rolled on and the other rolled off. The portion selected was Isaiah 61: 1, 2.

18. "Spirit is upon Me." This was given Him as His baptism. "Hath anointed Me." I have been set apart for this very purpose. This is the first great qualification of a true preacher. "The Gospel." Good news concerning Himself, His salvation and the deliverance He brings. "The broken hearted." Those overwhelmed with sorrow for their sins or sufferings. "The captives." The gospel comes as a great moral emancipation proclamation to those in bondage to sin, evil habits or the devil. "The blind." The spiritually blind. The light of the world has appeared—one who is able to unseal blind minds as well as blind eyes. "Bruised." As the great physician He comes to heal those who are broken and crushed because of sins committed. The "wounds, and bruises, and putrefying sores" may now be "closed" and "bound up" and healed. Note the difference between the prophet and Christ: They proclaimed liberty. He "sets at liberty."

19. "Acceptable year of the Lord." A reference to the year of jubilee. Lev. 25: 8-17. This was the year when, 1. Debts and obligations were released. 2. All Hebrew servants were set free. 3. Each resumed possession of his inheritance. This was a type of gospel times. The genuine jubilee year goes beyond the gospel picture. The liberty proclaimed is soul liberty.

20. "Closed the book." Rolled up the roll. "To the minister." The ruler of the synagogue or his servant. "Sat down." See on verse 16. This indicated that He was through reading and was now about to teach. "Eyes fastened on Him." Many things contributed to arrest their attention: 1. The report of His teachings and mighty works which had preceded Him. 2. The remarkable character of the words He had read. 3. His manner and bearing. 4. The fact that they knew Him so well. 5. The unction of the Holy Spirit upon Him.

21. "Fulfilled in your ears." He saw their condition and He knew that He could save them. He is prophet, physician, Redeemer, deliverer. They are poor captives, blind and bruised. He stands before them with the calm consciousness of power "to grapple with and overcome all their miseries."

II. The discussion (vs. 22-27). 22. "Bare Him witness." "Gave signs of approbation." "Gracious words." This passage and John 7: 46, give us some idea of the majesty and sweetness which characterized our Lord's utterances. "Joseph's Son." How can it be possible that the son of this obscure family—a carpenter who has made furniture for our houses a man without education, without rank or office—that He should be the Messiah, the King of the Jews?

23. "Ye say." Jesus shows that He knows their thoughts. "Proverb." Or parable; denoting any kind of figurative discourse. "Physician, heal Thyself." That is, they would ask why He did not perform miracles in Nazareth—at home, instead of at Capernaum. Jesus had, only a few months before, healed a nobleman's son at Capernaum (John 4: 46-54), and this was probably only one example of many. "Do also here." Let us see Your power. The best modern equivalent is, "Charity begins at home;" do something here. Work a miracle and prove to us that You are the Messiah. 24. "In His own country." No prophet is received in his own country as he is elsewhere. It is very difficult for any people to believe in the greatness or power of one who has grown up among them. This is the reason He gives for declining to work miracles in Nazareth. Their unbelief hindered Him. He would not display His power merely to gratify curiosity.

25. "I tell you." He now proceeds to show how Elijah and Elisha, two of their greatest prophets, had gone to the Gentiles with their blessings, and that by divine direction while many in Israel were suffering unrelieved. "In the days of Elias." See 1 Kings 17: 1-9. "The heaven was shut up." There were two rainy seasons, called the early and latter rains. "The first fell in October, the latter in April. The first prepared the ground for the seed, the latter, ripened the harvest. As both of these were withheld, consequently there was a great famine." 26. "Save unto Sarepta." Greek form of Zarephath. Elijah was not sent to the widows of Israel, but to a widow of Zarephath—a village on the Mediterranean coast.

27. "Eliseus." Greek form for Elisha. The meaning of these two verses is, God dispenses His benefits when, where and to whom He pleases. No person can complain, because no person deserves any good from His hand. Jesus might justly do the same in the displays of His grace. Thus He showed that His blessings were intended for Gentiles as well as Jews. "Naaman." See 2 Kings 5: 1-14.

III. The rejection (vs. 28-30). 28. When their race prejudices were struck they at once "were filled with wrath." Prejudice is stronger than reason. They could not give countenance to a preacher who even inferred that the Gentiles whom they hated so bitterly, could be blessed. 29. "Brow of the hill." Nazareth spreads itself out upon the eastern face of a mountain, where there is a perpendicular wall of rock from forty to fifty feet high. 30. "Passing through." His escape from them was no doubt miraculous. They desired to see a miracle and here they had one.

Some of the critics of our public school methods complain that troops of the boy students lack polished manners. No doubt, but faithful teachers in countless instances are doing all they can to improve the demeanor of "the young barbarians." After all, intelligent persons recognize the fact that the average urchin may be rude material to mold into a Chesterfield or an Admirable Crichton.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—"I cannot speak too highly of the value of Peruna. I believe that I owe my life to its wonderful merits. I suffered with catarrh of the head and lungs in its worst form, until the doctors fairly gave me up, and I despaired of ever getting well again.

"I noticed your advertisement and the splendid testimonials given by the people who had been cured by Peruna, and determined to try a bottle. I felt but little better, but used a second and third bottle and kept on improving slowly.

"It took six bottles to cure me, but they were worth a King's ransom to me. I talk Peruna to all my friends and am a true believer in its worth."—Mrs. Col. E. J. Gresham.

During the interval which has elapsed I have had occasion to resort to Doan's Kidney Pills when I noticed warnings of an attack. THE ENGLISH BRICK MYTH.

Colonial Houses Built of the Native Article.

At a recent meeting of the Columbia Historical Society in Washington George Alfred Townsend ("Gath") read a paper on the prevalent belief that many of the houses of Colonial times were built of brick imported from England.

Throughout the Atlantic seaboard this myth has held away for many years past, and nothing is commoner than the assertion that such and such a house "is very old; built in Colonial times of brick from England." The facts that brick were not extensively manufactured in England until the reign of William the First; that the ships of those days were small and carried only such things as were absolutely necessary for the colonists, and that the latter made their own bricks, just as they cut their own wood and cured their winter's supply of bacon, should be sufficient proof, said the speaker, of the unlikelihood of the colonists importing their building material from abroad.

These facts were brought out in the strongest possible light in Mr. Townsend's paper. He showed that such was the scarcity of brick in the England of the days from the Tudors to the House of Orange that the word occurs only once in Shakespeare. He further cited abundant proofs from the history of early America to justify his conclusion that there is not a single building in Virginia, Maryland or Pennsylvania built of English brick, and that the only structure of English brick in the District is that part of the Library of Congress which is known as the court and which was built of cream colored porcelain brick from Leeds, England.

In New England, he stated, there are one or two buildings of English bricks, the proof of which is indisputable, but it is doubtful if there are any buildings in New York made of brick imported from Holland.

Chopin and His Funeral March.

The story of how Chopin composed his wonderful "Funeral March" is related by M. Ziem, the celebrated painter, who still lives on the heights of Monmartre, and despite his great age is clear in his recollection of the facts that occurred over half a century ago. Ziem was the friend and comrade of Chopin, and it was in the former's studio—that a Bohemian repast was given, with Ludre, De Polignac, the musician; Ricard, the painter; Chevandier de Valdrome, and Chopin, as gay and festive spirits around the table. There was an old rickety piano in the corner. All the panels having been taken out for pictures, as Ziem was poor, and had to economize. Behind a curtain was a skeleton, and this gave an idea to Ziem, who brought the skeleton out, covered it with drapery, and began to agitate it with realistic effect. De Polignac then took the skeleton to the piano and sat with it as though to make it play. It was at this moment that Chopin, who had been rather quiet, was seized with sudden inspiration. Uttering an ejaculation, he rushed forward to the piano, pushed aside De Polignac, and to the stupefaction and awe of his friends, improvised the world famous "Funeral March." "We were all extremely touched," added Ziem, "and dead silence reigned. We thought no more of laughter, and saluted with respect and admiration the composer's new creation."—Paris Correspondence of London Daily Chronicle.

Wreath of Human Bones.

On a grave in a cemetery at Chichester, England, there is a wreath which at first glance appears to be a coral. In reality it is composed of human bones. The bones were collected during his travels by the deceased, who carved them with a penknife, and formed them into the wreath which now adorns his grave.

New U. S. Artillery.

The field artillery of the United States army is soon to be equipped with new rapid fire recoil guns, and the five batteries at Fort Riley will be the first to be supplied with the new armament. The guns are now being manufactured in Dusseldorf, Germany, by the Earhardt Company. This German pattern was tested at Fort Riley a little more than a year ago with six other guns of modern type. It was also tested at Sandy Hook, N. Y. The guns will be equipped with cylinders, the air pressure in which will dispose of the recoil in firing.

Slaughter on American Railroads.

"The British Parliament would not stand for a day the slaughter that goes on upon the railroads of America," said John Burns, the famous labor member of Parliament, in a recent London speech. His words are emphasized by the fact that last saturday thirty-two people were killed on our railroads by accidents that might have been prevented.

"The slaughter on our own railroads is bad enough," said Burns, "but it is child's play to what goes on in America. The casualty list of the American railways equals that of a first class war.

"I have been accused of calling industrial America a slaughter house, and if you ask me for proof I point you to the death roll of the brave men who lose their lives in the hoarding up of millions for the railroad magnates."

Last year there were 3,600 people killed by the railroads—nearly ten a day. The law says that the railroads shall make the work of their employes "reasonably safe." At what point does the work of a railroad man become unreasonably ——erous?—New York Journal.

Race Suicide Again

The other day when Dr. Benjamin Andrews warned society that culture was becoming obscured and that there were dark ages ahead, he declared, among other things, that there was no fear that our population was too small, but much that it was losing virility. He said he hoped that President Roosevelt would take early occasion to amend his plea for swelling the census, by urging quality of population as more to be desired than number, "thus undoing a little of the incalculable evil his recent words on this subject have wrought among the poor and thoughtless." Dr. Andrews seems somewhat over-confident about this evil that has been done. Exhortation is not a lasting means of producing a rapid increase of population. Hard facts, like the cost of maintenance, may be trusted to check any such tendency before it has become an evil, calculable or otherwise.—Harper's

Japanese Jingoism.

The prompt dismissal of the Japanese parliament after its display of jingoism at the opening session was probably necessary as a peace measure. One proceeding of the parliament was noteworthy, however, as an innovation; the adoption of an address in reply to the Mikado's speech from the throne practically advising him to get a new ministry was a longer step in the direction of the establishment of a real constitutional monarchy in Japan than any that had previously been taken.—Philadelphia Record.

When I was thirty-five years old, I suffered severe backache and frequent bearing-down pains; in fact, I had womb trouble. I was very anxious to get well, and reading of the cures your Compound had made, I decided to try it. I took only six bottles, but it built me up and cured me entirely of my troubles.

"My family and relatives were naturally as gratified as I was. My niece had heart trouble and nervous prostration, and was considered incurable. She took your Vegetable Compound and it cured her in a short time, and she became well and strong, and her home to her great joy and her husband's delight was blessed with a baby. BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, Ga., Jan. 26, 1903.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

THE WEATHER CALENDAR

The Chattanooga Medicine Co., the manufactures of Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black Draught have just issued the 1904 edition of their Cardui Weather Chart and calendar. This calendar with its 13 sheets 13x20 inches in size makes a bright ornament for the wall and is a useful acquisition in any home or office on account of its displayed weather predictions. The prominent numbers can be read across a large room as can the colored signal flags showing the weather conditions for each day. These weather signals illustrate the forecasts of Prof. Andrew J. DeVoe who achieved great prominence by his accurate predictions of the great Galveston, St. Louis and Minnesota storms and cyclones. So great is the popularty of these predictions that they are printed in 2,5000,000 of these calenders and in 18,000,000 of the Ladies Birthday Almanacs which are issued by the Chattanooga Medicine company, each year. We understand that a copy of this weather chart and calendar may be secured by sending 10c in stamps to the Chattanooga Medicine company, Chattanooga, Tenn. Any of our readers who have not secured a copy of the Ladies Birthday Almanac can get one by sending their address to "Ladies' Birthday Almanac Chattanooga, Tenn., or by calling on their druggist.

Mr. George Reid departed this world the 3d of January. Mrs. Ida Wilson the 5th of January. May God bless the fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, wives, sons and daughters. We can all sympathize for them all, they will all be missed. They were good Christian hearted people. How we miss their cheerful presence, and view with saddened hearts the place made vacant by their absence, but with an eye of faith we can look to the beautiful world beyond and hear them singing happy songs of praise, while they wear the crown of righteousness which the righteous Judge has given them and which He will give to all those who follow in His footsteps. So then let us each and everyone live so that when our Heavenly Father sends His messenger to call us away from this world of sin and sorrow we may clasp the hands of our loved ones gone before in that bright land of peace and love, never no more to part, never no more to weep. BUY A BOTTLE.

Hurtsboro, Ala., April 25, 1901.
I had a mule gored into the lungs by a bull. When the mule would breathe the air escaping through the wound would have blown out a lightened candle. Injected Tichenor's Antiseptic in the wound and left my mule, believing that the would surely die. On the morrow I found her much improved and the wound in a healthy condition. I continued the use of Antiseptic and to its virtues I attribute the life and usefulness of my mule. She is still living and giving good service.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

The wind one morning woke up from sleep
Saying now for a frolic, now for a leap,
Now for a madcap, galloping chase,
I'll make a commotion in every place."

And that's just what happened early last Friday morning. A regular cyclone it was, and did some considerable damage in and around Clanton. A two-story house in course of erection in West Clanton for J. B. Downs was completely demolished, and a cottage being erected for W. I. Mullins on his place was blown flat down, the contractors, Farley & Thacker, being the unfortunate losers in this case. Part of the tin roof of W. I. Mullins storehouse was torn off and a number of smaller disasters occurred around and about. In another place will be found an account of the destruction of Moundville, near Tuscaloosa, and other damage done by the same storm.

How is this for the banner bale of the crop of 1903? Last Saturday Albert Gore brought in a bale weighing 655 pounds and sold it to W. M. Pinckard & Co. for 14 cents per pound, realizing the nice little sum of $91.70 for the bale. Bravo, Albert, may you raise many such another bale and get $100 for every one of them.

Just a word to correspondents. Thank you, one and all, ladies and gentlemen, for your interesting communications giving all the local happenings all over the county. The Banner has about as fine a staff of correspondents as any paper in Alabama, and to them is due much of the success of the paper. But (and I hate to make a but when nearly everything is perfect, but there is a but in it) if you would only send your letters not later than Tuesday it would be such a help. Let me tell you how it is. On Thursday we print and mail The Banner; Friday and Saturday morning we break up the forms and distribute the type; Saturday afternoon we commence setting type for next issue; Monday and Tuesday we delight in setting up the correspondence; Wednesday we finish off everything and get ready for printing. So you see that when you letters reach us Wednesday morning all the space is nearly filled up and while we would be very glad to publish your letters, there is no space and no time, consequently they have to be carried over to next week, when the news is stale. Try and send them in by Monday or Tuesday morning at the latest and much oblige.

And now a word to some of our over eleven hundred subscribers. That is a goodly number, brethren, and at the rate we are adding new names to our list it will be but a few weeks ere it amounts to twelve hundred. Your support is most heartily appreciated and we can assure you no effort or expense shall be spared to merit its continuance. But (oh, that but, it will come in) in revising the list for 1904 it is surprising to find that we have not seen or heard anything of some few of you in over twelve months. Of course it is an oversight on your part and no doubt now that your attention is called to the fact you will take the first opportunity to pay that overdue subscription. The banner subscription price is one dollar per year, or, if paid in advance, we accept 75 cents for a full year's subscription, an offer made by no other newspaper in Alabama, we believe. Shall be glad to hear from you.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

SUNDAY LAWS.

Editor Banner—I send you in substance what was said to me by a railroad man but a short while ago, which I ask that you will please publish in your paper. As it is but an appeal of one of a thousand of our citizens and brethren in the fair State of Alabama, it is a piteous cry from an almost helpless class of worthy men as a rule who would be free on the Lord's day to spend a few hours with their families and in worship. These men cannot break the yoke of bondage that is galling their necks, unless the rank and file of God's people come to their rescue. When there is a man in our legislative halls to correct this evil of running freight trains on the Sabbath day, the railroad magnates send their trusted agent along the line with a printed request to the legislature signed by the employees that no law shall be passed prohibiting Sunday work. These employees are given to understand that a refusal to comply with the request may work a forfeiture of their jobs. Now what are the poor fellows to do? To lose their positions means starvation for wife and children, for they know no other trade. I am creditably informed by a responsible railroad man that the pending of this petition to the legislature is true. Now, this being true what must we do as a great religious and political force in Alabama. We should let these Sabbath-breaking tyrants know who suppress every movement that betters the conditions of their employees, that we, as a great religious factor, will come to the relief of the oppressed men who are in the clutches of lawlessness and greed. The candidate for the chairmanship of the railroad commission who advocates a Sunday law will reach the goal. The railroad magnates have their candidate for the railroad commission in the field, and all employees will be required to vote their way or step down and out. Ninety per cent of the railroad men of this State want and pray for a law similar to that of Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina an other states which allow no freight trains to run on Sunday, except perishable freight. Let the ministers of all denominations thunder their anathema from the pulpit against this evil or take down their banners and cease to tell the people to remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy In the name of God and humanity let us, as a religious and God-loving people come to the rescue of these overworked and oppressed men and rescue them from the bloody clutches of the blood-sucking vampires who feed and fatten on human gore.

F. LOYD TATE

CANDIDATE FOR SOLICITOR FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT.

STRONGLY ENDORSED BY THREE COUNTIES

The announcement of the candidacy of Mr. F. Loyd Tate for the office of Solicitor of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit has set his friends to work in earnest, and he is strongly endorsed in Elmore, Chilton and Autauga. In his own home town, Wetumpka, nearly all of the leading citizens have signified their desire to support him, and in Chilton and Autauga his friends of the bar and the county officers with whom he has come in contact are almost a unit in their endorsement of him, as the following testimonials will show:

We, the undersigned citizens and business men of Wetumpka, Elmore County, Alabama, speaking from our personal acquaintance of our fellow townsman, Mr. F. L. Tate, take pleasure in stating that we heartily endorse the manner in which he has filled his appointment of Solicitor of the 15th Judicial Circuit, and recommend him to the people of our County and of the Circuit as being worthy of and, according to established precedent, entitled to the endorsement of the Circuit in the Primary Election of April 11, 1904.

TAFT AND THE PHILIPPINES.

His Latest Utterances Concerning Our Pacific Possessions.

Former Governor Taft, of the Philippines, arrived Saturday on the steamer Korea at San Francisco. With him were Mrs. Taft, their two children, Fred Carpenter, his secretary, and John Wolfley, attorney general of the Philippines, who is traveling with the governor's party on his way home on leave of absence. He left at once for Washington, where he will take up the duties of secretary of war.

Governor Taft said that conditions in the Philippines were better than ever before, and he doubted if greater tranquility ever prevailed even under Spanish administration.

"The census will be published in October next, and on that date," said he, "provided the country is tranquil, the government will authorize the election of an assembly of not less than fifty nor more than 160 members. This assembly will be a legislative body, coordinate with the commission, passing all enactments for the government of the territory. It will be provided, however, that should they fail at any time to pass the necessary appropriations, the governor and treasurer will have power to do so."

In reply to a question whether or not the Philippines were in a condition to govern themselves, Governor Taft said that they certainly were not at present and to make a prediction on the subject would be looking too far in the future.

PLAYED With POWDER.

Two Boys Are Dead and Two More Badly Injured.

Willie Dillard, son of T. F. Dillard; Fred and Eugene Hayslette, sons of Mr. W. G. Hayslette, and a young man named Griffin were playing near the Columbus, Miss., powder house Tuesday afternoon.

A can of oil blasting powder that had been thrown out of storage was found near the house and the boys played with it. They sprinkled the stuff over the dry grass and also put some in their pockets for future experiments.

Before they left the can they struck a match to the ground and the next second the quartet was ablaze. They ran to a ditch near by and jumped in.

Willie Dillard and Fred Hayslette are dead. Eugene Hayslette is still alive, though suffering greatly from face and body burns. Young Griffin fared the best and will recover.

Urgent Appropriations

The urgent deficiency appropriation bill was completed by the house committee on appropriations. The bill carries a total of $11,251,308, based on estimates from the various departments aggregating $12,488,209. Some of the larger items in the bill are:

$2,000,000 for armament and armor for new ships.

$100,000 for Alaskan boundary survey.

$570,000 for construction of a new office building for the house of representatives.

$145,000 for mileage for members and senators.

$300,000 for rural free delivery.

$400,000 for collecting the customs revenues.

The report of the committee contains a statement by Assistant Secretary Armstrong of the treasury on the subject of the deficiency for collecting the revenues embodying as a request the country be redistricted for this purpose. The secretary stated that it was not the intention to abolish collection ports, but that many could be consolidated with economy of administration. He called attention to the fact that there were something like fifty districts in which it costs $600 to collect a single dollar.

Chief Justice Fuller and Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court, registered a protest against the action of Major Charles McCawley, "the social aid to the president," who, at the reception to the judiciary, declined to allow the supreme court officials to meet the president before the diplomatic corps.

Looking to Disfranchisement.

Members of the Kentucky delegation in congress have been caucusing on proposed legislation at Frankfort looking to the disfranchisement of the negro, and all of the democratic members announce that they favor such legislation and they will call on members of the general assembly to enact a law which will remove the negro from politics. Some of them are uncertain as to whether the grandfather clause will stand the test before the supreme court of the United States. The taxation clause would, they say, Tennessee and Georgia have the taxation clause in their laws.

THIRTY-SEVEN DEAD

Moundville Depopulated by a Cyclone.

Moundville, Ala., a small town on the Alabama Great Southern railroad, was totally destroyed by a cyclone Friday morning.

The number of deaths is estimated at thirty-seven.

The dead bodies of six white persons and about twenty negroes have already been found, and a number of others are badly hurt.

The names of the whites killed are:

Miss Farley, a young lady residing there.

E. P. Seymour, night operator, Nashville, Tenn.

One child and two Alabama Great Southern employes, names not yet learned.

J. H. Redmond, superintendent of the pumping station, Nashville, Tenn.

Robert Powers, aged 17, son of Mrs. S. B. Powers, of Tuscaloosa.

A. H. Warren, representing the Alabama Grocery Company, of Birmingham.

The first information of anything like a definite character received here of the storm at Moundville came in a telegram from Conductor Capehart, in charge of Alabama Great Southern limited train No. 2, and was sent from Akron. Mr. Capehart's dispatch reads as follows:

"Akron, Ala., January 22d, 1904, 5:30 a. m.—A. Griggs, Superintendent, Birmingham, Ala.: Storm struck Moundville, destroying whole town north of station. I have backed up to Akron and am getting section and bridge men here and at Eutaw. Send wrecker; main line blocked. Take wrecker three or four hours to clear main line of rubbish after arrival. Nos. 1 and 2 O. K. Think nearly everybody living in town killed.

"CAPEHART."

It is rumored that the storm, in addition to the heavy damage done at Moundville, devastated many farms in the northern part of Hale county, and that there may be considerable loss of life there.

The cyclone struck North Birmingham, going in a northeasterly direction, wrecking negro cottages and utterly demolishing many of them. In all thirty-six houses and stores were either demolished or badly damaged. Most of the damaged cottages were occupied by negroes.

The loss will probably not amount to over $4,000 to the owners of property, but the freaks played by the storm were peculiar. From indications it would seem that the wind swooped down, demolished a cabin, jumped for a hundred feet or so and snatched off a roof of another, rose, then fell on another house and so on.

The greatest damage was done to the store of Posey & Bro., at South Africa, just northeast of the city limits of North Birmingham. The loss will amount to $1,200.

South Alabama points also report severe wind, but no damage done so far as known.

Jim Crow Law Passed.

By a practically unanimous vote the lower house of the Mississippi legislature passed the Collier "Jim Crow law" requiring street railroads operating in Mississippi to provide separate cars or compartments for the white and colored races. The debate on the measure was brief, and only two votes were cast against it, those voting in the negative being Mr. Brown, of Adams, and Mr. Sample, of Holmes. The law is quite stringent, modeled after the one now in force in Louisiana, and provides a punishment of a fine of not more than $25 and a sentence of not more than thirty days in jail for persons refusing to occupy the cars or compartments assigned to them. Heavy punishment is also provided for the companies refusing to arrange separate accommodations.

Carroll D. Wright Will Resign.

Carroll D. Wright, commissioner of labor, authorizes the statement that he intends to resign his office by the end of 1904 and to remove to Worcester, Mass. Mr. Wright was elected president of Clarke college at Worcester some time ago and he expects to live there.

Thanks of the Family.

A statement has been issued by the family of the late General John B. Gordon expressing gratefulness for the many telegrams received during the illness of General Gordon and after his death. Owing to the large number received it is impossible for all to be acknowledged, and the family appreciation is sent through the press.

The Florence, Ala., Herald has been sold by Mr. Bunting to a Mr. Gallimore, a Missouri journalist.

A narrow gauge road is building from Valley Head, Ala., to intersect the Chattanooga Southern railroad at Menlo, Ga., which it is claimed will be completed by early spring.

Magazines Merge.

The Life and Letters Magazine, of Knoxville, Tenn., has bought the Alkahest magazine, printed in Atlanta. The Alkahest, during its eight years' existence, absorbed three other southern publications.

High Official Indicted.

The federal grand jury returned an indictment against Joseph Ralph Burton, United States senator from Kansas, charging him, while a United States senator, on nine counts with accepting five checks of $500 each from the Rialto Grain and Securities company for his alleged services in interceding with the postoffice department to render a favorable decision in matters affecting the permission of the Rialto company to use the mails.

The penalty provided upon conviction of the offense of which Senator Burton is charged is a penitentiary sentence of not more than two years and a fine of not more than $10,000, and one so convicted shall be rendered incapable of holding office of trust, honor or emolument under the government.

United States senators are immune from arrest except for certain specified crimes while the senate is in session. Senator Burton says he will go at once to St. Louis and defend the case and that he will be able to make it perfectly clear that there was no reason for bringing the indictment.

Caused by a Cow.

Illinois Central passenger fast mail train from New Orleans to Chicago was wrecked at Gates, Tenn.

The wreck was caused by the pilot striking a cow which was crossing the track. The animal was thrown against a switch and in some manner opened it, derailing the train and overturning it entirely, with the exception of the engine and mail car. John Harris, the only person killed, was a resident of Gates and was standing beside the track.

Vegetation Injured.

Attorney General Hart, of Georgia, has filed in the United States supreme court on behalf of the state of Georgia a bill for an injunction against the state of Tennessee, the Ducktown Sulphur, Copper and Iron Company and the Pittsburg and Tennessee Copper Company.

The defendant companies are engaged in mining and treating copper ore at Ducktown, Tenn., near the Georgia border, and the bill complains that the fumes from the smelters has had a disastrous effect on vegetation for a radius of thirty miles, covering much territory in Georgia.

It Is Denied.

Edmond Bennett, of Trinity church at Mobile, has telegraphed Senator Pettus saying that Colonel Harvey Jones authorizes the statement that he does not and never did charge that W. H. Armbrecht, recently appointed United States attorney for the Alabama southern district, embezzled church funds.

Armbrecht writes that his father is seriously ill and he can not come to Washington to answer the charges in person. His case will probably be postponed.

Bristow's Guillotine.

Representative Thompson, of Alabama, says that democratic fourth class postmasters in Alabama appointed under the McKinley administration are continuing to be turned out of office by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow on flimsy charges.

It is presumed this is being done to strengthen the Roosevelt fences in Alabama, as republicans are being appointed to the offices.

Mr. Thompson contemplates introducing a resolution in congress asking for a congressional investigation.

New York is to have a real Chinese newspaper of its own. It will be started as a weekly on February 16th, which is the Chinese New Year's day. Seven Chinese compositors are en route to the city, the editor is just out of a Japanese college—the "ad." hunters number four, and they are Americans.

The two-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Sweeny Sibley, of Lawrence county, Miss., toddled to the bed, caught a gun which was lying on it by the muzzle and pulled it to himself. The hammer caught in the cover, was discharged and the little one's brains were scattered in every direction.

What Germany Produced.

Germany's pig iron production for 1903 was 10,085,634 tons, an increase of 1,682,974 tons, thus outstripping Great Britain for the first time in history.

The coal production of Germany for 1903 was 116,664,376 tons, an increase of 9,215,842 tons.

Information is received that the postmaster at Goodwater, Coosa county, will be removed.

In May, in the city of Mobile, Ala., the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian church convenes. About 300 delegates are expected.

A Total Destruction.

Fire totally destroyed the office and work shop of H. Abel, carriage manufacturer, Birmingham, and the ware house of the Birmingham Stove and Hardware company, which adjoins the carriage works. The loss sustained by the burning of the warehouse is $10,000, which is about covered by insurance.

Both buildings and contents were totally destroyed. Paints and oils made the fire so much fiercer.

WEEVIL CAMPAIGN

As Outlined by Department of Agriculture.

The secretary of agriculture has approved the plans for the cotton boll weevil investigation in the southwest, for which a special appropriation of $250,000 has been made available. Secretary Wilson believes that the best methods for meeting the ravages caused by the boll weevil will be to put in actual practice the facts which have been accumulated by the department during the past two years in the matter of improving agricultural conditions, the planting of early maturing varieties of cotton, substitution of other crops, etc. The plans have been approved.

Farmers' Co-operative Work.

This will involve the organization of farmers in such a way as to secure the cultivation of tracts of cotton under specific instructions from the department of agriculture. Thus a definite working plan will be put in force with each farmer, the farmer giving his attention to seed and fertilizers as may be required. Certain areas of cotton will serve as objects and will be planned to show the practicability of growing it notwithstanding the presence of the weevil. Similar work will be carried on in Louisiana, where the weevil has not yet advanced. It is planned to have 8,000 or 10,000 farmers engaged in this work.

Plant Breeding and Selection.

This work will have for its object the improvement of present varieties of cotton with a view to making them more prolific and earlier, so as to prevent the ravages of the weevil.

Cotton Diseases.

The bill making the appropriation directs the secretary to investigate other insects and disease, and one serious malady which will receive attention is the so-called cotton root rot.

Diversification of Crops.

This is considered one of the most important lines of work, and will have for its object demonstration work in the direction of growing crops other than cotton, and of forage crops with cotton. Diversification farms will be secured by co-operation with the farmers themselves. Thirteen of these farms will be located in Texas, five in Louisiana, three in Mississippi and several in other cotton-growing states.

The work will be looked after by the bureau of plant industry. The division of entomology will continue its investigation on experiment farms. The question of the effect of fertilizers on the early maturing of cotton will be considered.

Investigations of parasites in the original home of the weevil will be made, the object being to introduce the parasites into Texas, with hope of securing the destruction through them of the boll weevil.

Inspection of cotton products, their fumigation and general expenses.

Inspecting the certification required by state laws will be another line of work conducted by the entomologist.

Investigations into the life, history and habits of the weevil and testing of poisons and machines.

Investigations of other diseases than the cotton boll weevil, including the destructive cotton worm which is one of the most serious pests in a number of southern cotton growing states.

Cotton in Africa.

John and Selby Neely, cotton experts from Mississippi, sailed from Liverpool for the west coast of Africa under the auspices of the British Cotton Growers' association. The Neelys, who are accompanied by three negroes from the southern cotton belt, will conduct exhaustive experiments in the Sierra Leone district, and also will visit Nigeria and report on the progress there made in cotton cultivation.

Ensley, Ala., people are very much elated over the announcement that the officials of a large trolley car plant have decided to locate in the Steel City. This industry will give employment to about 1,000 men. It is also stated that the company intends doubling the force inside of the next six months.

Robbers Captured.

Two men charged with holding up and dynamiting the Seaboard Air Line passenger train at Sanderson, Fla., on January 17th have been captured. When arrested the men had dynamite in their possession. They have been identified by the engineer in whose cab they rode two miles and by the baggage master of the train. They have been operating in Alabama, but their home is in Folkston, Ga.

United States authorities will charge them with firing into a mail coach and jeopardizing the life of the mail agent. The federal statutes provide a life sentence for this offense.

The Pratt City, Ala., Lumber company is enlarging its yards.

Engineer Killed.

Dan Herron, an engineer on the Louisville and Nashville, was killed late Saturday night at Hartselle, Ala.

It is supposed that Herron was killed by a post on a bridge. He was found lying in the window of his cab. He had a blow on the head which had caused instant death. It is thought that he was leaning out of the cab window looking forward, and that his head struck a pillar on a bridge.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

JANUARY 21ST.

Mr. Platt, of Connecticut, concluded his speech on Panama. He defended the course of the president throughout the Panama revolt. During the morning hour Mr. Morgan spoke in explanation of his bill for the annexation of Panama to the United States, basing his argument on the ground that the pending canal treaty is contemplating that result.

Mr. Morgan made an appeal to the newspapers to use their utmost endeavors to secure information concerning the situation, saying there was no probability that any resolution would elicit new information from the executive department.

He stated that he had inserted in his bill the provision for the payment of $15,000,000 for the pacification of Columbia because he had heard the president had entered into an agreement for the payment of that sum for that purpose. He had inserted this provision as well as the others in the interest of peace and of good will, and of all accrued right. It was intended in the interest of a Panama canal and to meet the emergency, and he hoped it would be so accepted by all persons concerned.

When the house convened a resolution called up by Mr. Gardner, of New Jersey, chairman of the committee on labor, asking the secretary of commerce and labor for a statement showing the number of horses and carriages maintained at the expense of the government for officials in his department and the names of the officials using them, was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Hull, of Iowa, chairman of the committee on military affairs, the house went into committee of the whole to consider the army appropriation bill. Five hours' debate was agreed upon.

Mr. Williams, of Mississippi, discussed for an hour the "stand pat" policy of the majority party and talked at length on his pending bill repealing the duty on coal. He read from the testimony before the house committee on investigation of the last session of congress on the coal question to show that coal was 67 cents less a ton during the year than before the tariff was repealed.

Mr. Payne, of New York, asserted the price of coal was not less to the consumer during this period. Mr. Williams combatted this statement and asked Mr. Payne why his party did not "stand pat" for free coal.

Mr. Lind, of Minnesota, spoke for reciprocity with Canada and pleaded for freer trade relations with that country.

Mr. Baker, of New York, opposed the army bill on the ground that he was opposed to war and would not vote to appropriate money for preparations for war.

JANUARY 22D.

The senate adopted the resolution of inquiry concerning affairs in Panama, introduced on the 5th inst by Mr. Gorman, and in addition listened to a speech on the Panama question by Mr. Dolliver, and another on the subject of the recess appointments to office by Mr. Tillman. Mr. Tillman's address had especial reference to the nomination of Collector Crum, of Charleston, but it bore also upon the nomination of Brigadier General Wood.

The house passed 209 pension bills and also resolutions calling on the secretary of war and the attorney general for information as to the number of horses and carriages maintained at government expense for officers of the respective departments.

A bill permitting the withdrawal duty-free from the St. Louis exposition of articles donated to religious, scientific, educational or literary institutions also passed.

JANUARY 23D.

The house devoted the entire day to consideration of the army appropriation in committee of the whole.

Mr. Robinson, democrat, of Indiana, took occasion to criticise the war department for expenditures made by the bureau of ordnance and fortifications in the Langley airship, declaring that such expenditures were without the sanction of congress, and that the airship was without utility. Only twelve of the forty-one pages of the bill had been read for amendment when the house adjourned. The provision in the bill for the construction of a canal from Sitka to Fort Liscum, Alaska, went out on a point of order.

The paragraph providing for the contingent expenses of the army, on motion of Mr. Hemenway, of Indiana, was amended so as to restrict the sum appropriated for the office of the chief of staff to purely military purposes. Mr. Hemenway precipitated a discussion in which the Dreyfus case and French novels received attention by proposing to limit to $100 the amount available for the purchase of publications and newspapers.

Leslie Tharp, whose father is yardmaster at Jasper, Ala., for the Northern Alabama railway, met with a serious accident Saturday afternoon while playing among some cars in the yards. It seems that the boy was between two cars, standing on the couplings, when an engine, which was switching, struck a row of cars to which these were coupled. The sudden jar caused the boy's foot to slip and his leg was caught between the bumpers and horribly crushed.

JANUARY 25TH.

In the senate Mr. Culberson introduced a resolution drawn by a committee appointed at a recent democratic conference for the purpose of getting additional information concerning the Panama situation. The members of the committee were Senators Gorman, Culberson, Carmack and Cockrell.

When the house convened Mr. Adams of Pennsylvania from the committee on expenditures in the state department reported a privileged resolution requesting the secretary of state for information as to the number of horses, carriages and automobiles maintained at the expense of the government for officials of the state department.

Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska, senior democrat on the committee, moved to amend the resolutions so as to make it read "during the calendar year," saying that the omission of these words would leave a loop hole. Mr. Adams demanded the previous question.

The senate heard further discussion of the questions of appropriations to office made during congressional recess, listened to a speech on the Isthmian canal question by Mr. Morgan and passed a number of bills of a semi-public character. As a result of the debate on the appointment question, a resolution asking for specific information concerning the nomination of D. Crum, as collector of customs for the port of Charleston, S. C., was passed. A resolution asking for similar information concerning the nomination of Brigadier General Wood and other officers went over until tomorrow.

Among the bills passed were:

Authorizing the erection of a monument to the memory of John Paul Jones.

Authorizing the erection of a statue of Commodore John D. Sloat at Monterey, Cal.

Providing for the appropriate marking of the graves of confederate soldiers who died in northern prisons during the civil war and appropriating $20,000 for this purpose.

Appropriating $225,000 for a revenue cutter service at Honolulu.

Authorizing the construction of a lightship off the outer bar at Brunswick, Ga., and appropriating $90,000 for the purpose.

Mr. Tillman read a letter from Secretary of the Treasury Shaw recalling the various appointments of Crum to the Charleston, S. C., collectorship and giving the version that the last appointment was made precisely at 12 o'clock noon on the first Monday in December, when one session ended and the other began.

Mr. Hale said that the matter was not of specific significance, that the appointment is not a new one, and that Crum is still serving on his first appointment.

Mr. Tillman said that Crum is holding office just the same, and said:

"I notice, too, that Leonard Wood is sending out dispatches signing himself major general and he is not a major general."

The house passed the army appropriation bill carrying approximately $75,000,000, after adopting a number of amendments.

Representative Wiley, of Alabama, has introduced a bill providing that the sum of $50,000 be appropriated for the erection in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, of a monument to the memory of Jeremiah O'Brien, upon which shall be inscribed the words:

"Erected to the memory of the heroic Irish-American, Jeremiah O'Brien, who captured and sank in the first sea fight of the revolutionary war the British schooner Margaretta."

Said sum shall be expended under the direction of the secretary of the navy or such officer as he may designate.

From the Mayor Down.

The Iroquois jury, which for three weeks has been listening to evidence as to the fire in the Iroquois theater, has returned a verdict by which 7 persons are held to await the action of a grand jury.

The list includes Mayor Carter Harrison, the building inspector and commissioner, the owner of the theater and the man whose light caused the fire.

The jury uses strong language in reference to the mayor and characterizes his administration as weak.

The six-year-old boy of Dr. and Mrs. John Patton, of Deerbrook, Miss., was found dead in the cistern in the rear of their house. The child had been playing in the yard, and when he was called failed to answer. A search was begun for him and he was found in the cistern dead.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., has given to the Moundville sufferers $1,460.

Held to Grand Jury.

A St. Stephens special says: The preliminary hearing before Judge Brawles of Turner Moseley, a white man, charged with arson and assault to murder, ended Saturday and he was bound over.

It is proposed to erect a factory at Pensacola, Fla., for the manufacture of cassava starch, the plant to have a daily capacity of 100 tons, to cost $100,000 and to employ 100 men.

SERMON FOR SUNDAY

ELOQUENT DISCOURSE ENTITLED "COMMERCIALISM."

Pertinent Talk on a Present-Day Problem, by the Rev. Dr. Reese F. Alsop—Jesus Christ in the Measure of the Stature of the Perfect Man.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Dr. Reese F. Alsop, pastor of St. Ann's Church on the Heights, preached Sunday morning on "Commercialism." He took his text from St. Luke xii: 15: "Man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

Dr. Alsop said:

I heard lately from a brilliant speaker an address on "Commercialism." To the credit of all, it was a panegyric rather than a diatribe. His argument was that commercial, that is, business activity, the material epoch in which we live and the push we feel, engenders certain useful and even moral qualities, such as thrift, involving all accumulations of capital, truth telling, which is essential to successful trading; trust, without which the vast credit system of the day could not exist; a sense of responsibility shown in the honesty of the great army of clerks and trust holders, among whom breaches of trust, defaults and the like are comparatively rare, the percentage of the honest being surprisingly high. At the same time the Civil War and the Boer War have shown that the commercial spirit did not lack heroism and liberality. Witness the gifts of rich men to education and charities.

Now that is all true, and yet there is a bad flavor about the word commercialism. There is another connotation. Is it not a matter of emphasis? Jesus says, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God." He says again, "What will a man give in exchange for his soul?" What are men exchanging their life, with all its possibilities of symmetrical development, for? What are they seeking for? Is it not too largely material success? St. Paul says: "Having food and raiment we have enough." The feeling of to-day scorns such moderation. A modest competence is nowadays nothing accounted of. To make a living is not enough; to have comfort for self and family is a small thing; men aim and toil and struggle for more dazzling prizes—a success that makes a noise and is talked of; that glitters and dazzles the eye.

This is commercialism as I understand it—the measuring of success by the standard of the market place, the sinking of higher aims in the eager rush after gain. There are high things possible for manhood of body, mind, growth in moral and spiritual attainments, expansion in ability and usefulness. There are magnificent careers open to him in science, in art, in literature, in philanthropic service. Over against all these stands the spirit of the age and cries follow me. The ideal is a man who turns everything to gold that he touches; a man who gets and holds and still goes on to get more and hold more.

Two conversations lately overheard illustrate the point. Dr. Rainsford, of St. George's Church, walking down a New York avenue, overheard the talk of three of our university men before him. Looking upon the gleaming equipages and splendid dresses flitting by, one said to another: "Tell you, boys, it is money that goes in this town, is it not?" The belief that it is money that goes—the feeling that it is money that ought to go—are evidences of almost universal sentiment.

"Who is building that magnificent house?" said one to another. "Oh, that is the residence of so and so. He used to be a poor Baptist preacher, but Rockefeller found out that he had business ability, and I tell you he did not leave him a Baptist preacher. He took him into the Standard Oil Company, and now see what a success he has achieved." There is commercialism. There is the voice of the ideal which has almost hypnotized a generation.

Lowell's splendid reply to the lecturer who, "I have no time to make money," sounds like a piece of insanity. Gordon's refusal to accept reward from the Chinese Emperor for his help in the Tai Ping rebellion sounds like a piece of Quixotism. The "simple life," as lived by Thoreau in the woods, as pictured by Wagner, seems an idyllic dream. The pursuit of learning for learning's sake, the service of art with no itch for reward, the quiet, contentatious sacrifice of personal interest to the good of others, these are repudiated as folly. The maddening crowd's ignoble strife is what makes itself heard. It rises like the song of the siren. Like the suction of a vast maelstrom, it seizes men and draws them in. By and by, dizzied by the fierce whirl, they forget the things and are content to be simply money-makers. That is what I understand by commercialism; the thrusting into the first place of merely material success. It is the corruption of the spirit in which life is lived. It is a low, wrong motive. It brings to and holds before the soul a false standard of value. It misconceives what is the real success of life. It subordinates the soul to its possessions. It is a radical perversion of the ideal—an absolute reversal of what our text says. Commercialism declares and persuades that man's life does consist in the abundance of the things which he possesses. Therefore, it urges men to love supremely those things; let them aim at them, follow after them, sink every life in them. Let him get them all, if needs be, mental culture, artistic refinement, moral elevation, spiritual aspiration, and all that goes to make a full development of manhood. Quench, if necessary, these aspirations. Get things, gather things about you, enthrone yourself on and among them. Let atrophy seize every other faculty so your faculty for getting and getting on grows stronger.

Let me give an illustration or two. There is a story of a man who was so eager to make a very precious thing that he took it with him into a closet, set his candle on the floor and then diligently nailed up the door, only to find, as his candle burned out, that he had shut himself in with his treasure. Nailed and encoffined in his own strong box. Here is another: Some time ago of a young man, who, on graduation from college, found himself the possessor of $30,000 a year. He had youth, strength, education, position, the world lay open before him. He might go into political life, for philanthropic service, into college settlement work. He might become a student and a patron of art, of literature. He might throw himself into the real life of his day. In any of a dozen ways he might find his life by losing it in the service of man and of God. But alas! he was dazzled by the ideal of the age. He chose to turn his one million into two, to win the power or notoriety vast wealth can bring, he flung himself into a great business. All the beautiful opportunities that invited him he forewent simply in the hope that he might increase his pile—a pile which was already sufficiently large. He won all the success he coveted, what was the end? A dwarfed man, with his money pile heaped up around him. A man actually sunk and lost in the abundance of the things which he possessed.

Jesus said, then, a moment ago, commercialism is found in a wrong emphasis. Wealth is good fairly won and nobly used. It is not money, but the love of money, that is the root of all evil. Business is good and necessary, influence is good and brings forth a progeny of virtues; zeal, activity, prudence, cleverness in affairs, are all worthy. Material success is desirable. The blessing of the Lord it maketh rich. Yes, but to put these things first, to strive them so eagerly as to forget the higher things, in a word, to sink one's life with its possibilities of love and beauty and usefulness, that is to caught the spirit of the commercial of the day and the age.

Men look abroad without seeing the spirit tends to invade and even to dominate every sphere of human activity. We speak of commercialism in politics, in art, in literature, in education, in the social world, even in religion, and though we may not have a distinct definition ready we have a fairly clear idea of what is meant. The place holder in nation or city or State whose main thought is what he can make and not what he can do; the artist who listens not to the voice of his ideals but to the bids of the market, and paints or carves simply for the money to be got; the author who writes simply what will sell and forgets the truth for which he ought to stand and the service in the way of instruction, or comfort or amusement which he might minister to his fellows, is each one tainted with commercialism. It has crept even into our universities, tempting boards of trustees and faculties to bow too subserviently to those who can furnish endowments, tempting the young man to turn from courses that cultivate the mind to those which prepare for business. Our theatres have felt the influence, and think more of pieces which will draw them of those which will elevate as well as amuse and recreate those who see and hear.

Yes, it is conceivable that even the church may not escape. The ministry that sets gain above usefulness has caught the contagion. "Put me into the priesthood that I may eat a piece of bread!" So cried one of old. The very thought was a desecration. The ministry that is sought for the sake of "the pieces of bread" for a livelihood, whether it be large or small, is a ministry not to God, not to those among whom it is exercised, but to the man that holds it. The clergy who are in orders chiefly for what they can win in the way of comfort, or respectability or income are unfit for their place. They serve not God or their fellows, but themselves. And so the church whose chief aim is a large pew rental and a fashionable congregation—forgetting the while that the Master's boast was that to the poor the gospel was preached, is tarred with the same stick.

Yes, commercialism is in the air. It is the spirit that now works—that stealthily penetrates every department of modern activity, always seeking to make gain the dominant motive. There is no line of work, no business, no profession safe against its insidious influence. It invades law and medicine, even divinity, as we have seen. It is felt in halls of legislation and seats of government. Yes, it pervades even society, making the fine raiment and the gold ring and the large bank account more potent to open doors than gentle birth and fine breeding.

How are we to resist this influence—escape this spirit? Just as we resist the contagion of an epidemic, the depression of a malaria, by fortifying the powers of life. A man in whom the tide of life is full and strong will walk unscathed through the plague laden air. The health that is in him resists the disease that rushes upon him. The bacteria that floats into throat or lung, or stomach finds no nidus and dies. It must be thus, then, that we escape the spiritual danger. Fortify the life within. Remember that life is more than meat; that the kingdom of God and His righteousness are infinitely worthy of our seeking. Do not forget the possibilities of your life, what you can make of it in the way of growth, what you can make of it in the way of usefulness. Keep your eye on the Master. In Him see what you may be—in Him see what you may do. Yea, not only keep your eye on Him, but keep in living touch with Him, that the tides of His life may flow into your soul, and carry you on and up to the measure of the stature of the perfect man in Christ Jesus.

Finally, my brethren, "whatsoever things are honest—whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, think on these things." Turn your thought and your eyes away from the dazzling bait of the age. Escape its snare. Seek first the kingdom of God. Determine to be a man, mentally, morally, spiritually; determine to be a brother to your fellow man, and do for him a brother's part; determine to be a child of the heavenly Father and obey His will, so far as you know it; resolve that in you the splendid possibilities hidden in the gift of life shall be realized, and you shall have learned how to use this world without abusing it. Then commerce, business, success shall minister to you but not enslave you; shall embellish your life but not absorb it; shall bring you, perchance, an abundance of things to possess, but leave the while strong and pure within you the life of God. Then shall you in very deed possess the abundance of the things which are yours. Let them once get the better of you, climb into the throne of your heart and life, and then they possess you and you are their slave and their victim; nailed and incoffined in your own strong box which has, alas, with your treasure, shut in your soul also.

Living in Hope.

The habit of living in the future should make us glad and confident. We should not keep the contemplation of another state of existence to make us sorrowful; nor allow the transiency of this present to shade our joys. Our hope should make us buoyant, and keep us firm. It is an anchor of the soul. All men live by hope, even when it is fixed upon the changing and uncertain things of this world. But the hopes of men who have not their hearts fixed upon God try to grapple themselves on the cloud wrack that rolls along the flanks of the mountains; while our hopes pierce within that veil, and lay hold of the Rock of Ages that towers above the flying vapors. Let us then be strong, for our future is not a dim peradventure, nor a vague dream, nor a fancy of our own, nor a wish turning itself into a vision, but it is made and certified by Him who is the God of all the past and of all the present. It is built upon His word, and the brightest hope of all its brightness is the enjoyment of more of His presence, and the possession of more of His likeness. That hope is certain. Therefore, let us live in it.—The Rev. Alexander MacLaren.

The Poor Man's Day.

In all our towns, and throughout too large a portion of our country districts, the Sabbath rest is violated and the worship which was the consequence and condition of this rest is abandoned. At the same time the soul is deprived of its nourishment and the body of its repose. The poor man and the workingman are delivered up, unprotected, to the every day increasing influence of error and evil. Thus the profanation of the day has become the ruin of the moral and physical health of the people, at the same time that it is the ruin of the family and of religious liberty. The Sabbath is emphatically the poor man's and the working man's day. And there is no surer way to break down the health, as well as the morals and religion of the people, than to break down the Sabbath. To say nothing of the Divine law, on mere worldly grounds it is plain that nothing is more conducive to the health, intelligence, comfort and independence of the working classes and to our prosperity as a people than our Christian American Sabbath.—Count Montalembert.

Past and Future.

The past is dead and has no resurrection, but the future is endowed with such a life that it lives to us even in anticipation. The past is, in many things, the foe of mankind; the future is, in all things, our friend. For the past there is no hope; for the future there is both hope and fruition. The past is the text book of tyrants; the future is the Bible of the free. Those who are solely governed by the past stand like Lot's wife, crystallized in the act of looking backward, and forever incapable of looking forward.—H. Kirk White.

The Year.

Beautiful is the year in its coming and in its going—most beautiful and blessed because it is always "the year of our Lord."—Lucy Larcom.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JANUARY 31.

Subject: Jesus Calls Four Disciples, Luke v., 1-11—Golden Text, John viii., 31—Memory Verses, 4-6—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Jesus teaching the people (vs. 1-3).—1. "The people pressed." Leaving Nazareth our Lord went to Capernaum and perhaps abode in the house of Peter. The power of His preaching drew crowds, which pressed upon Him as He was walking along the white beach which forms the margin of Lake Gennesaret. "To hear." There was a good prospect for a glorious revival of religion. There were times in the life of our Lord when thousands were anxious to hear Him, for the common people heard Him gladly. "Lake of Gennesaret." The most sacred sheet of water which this earth contains. Called also the Sea of Galilee, the Sea of Tiberias, and in the Old Testament the Sea of Chinneroth (Josh. 12:3). It is a clear, sweet lake about twelve miles long and five broad, with the Jordan River flowing through it. Its fish were valuable. In Christ's time it was covered with a fleet of 4000 vessels, from fishing boats to ships of war. This was the region of the early labors of our Lord. Here He performed some of His most wonderful miracles; here He selected His disciples. But at the present time all is desolate around Galilee, and the desolation will increase until the aggressive power of Christ's gospel carries Christianity to that now benighted land.

2. "Two ships." Fishing boats. They must have been small. This is clear from the accounts given of them. A few men could handle one, and a single large draught of fishes endangered them. "Standing by." Anchored, or drawn up upon the beach. "Washing their nets." They had spent the night in fruitless effort and now they were cleaning the filth of the sea from the threads of the nets and mending any defective or broken parts. It is interesting to notice how often Christ appeared to men while they were busy with their temporal affairs, and how their worldly conditions were made the means of giving them a better understanding of Him. 3. "One of the ships." The ship of James and John appeared to be at some distance away. "Prayed Him." Asked Him. Jesus in a familiar manner takes possession of Peter's boat and makes it His pulpit while He speaks to the people. "Sat down." The common posture of Jewish teachers. Compare Matt. 5:1. "Taught." It is probable that this was a small bay on the cove, and that when He was in the boat the people on the shore stood round Him in the form of an amphitheatre. No doubt the lake was still so that His voice was undisturbed. In such a situation He could be easily heard, and no spectacle could be more beautiful than the Son of God speaking to the poor, ignorant and attentive multitudes assembled on the shore.

II. "The draught of fishes (vs. 4-7). 4. "Launch out." Christ forgot His own weariness and only seemed to remember the disappointment of His followers in toiling all night in vain. This verse has often been used to illustrate the fact that Christ would have us leave the shore of selfishness, worldliness and sin and launch out into the depth of His nets for the taking of fish. 5. "Master." This is the first time that the word here translated Master is used in the New Testament, and it is used only by Luke. The other evangelists call Him Rabbi or Lord. Note how familiarly Peter addresses Jesus. "Toiled all night." Peter says this to show how unlikely it was that they would catch anything, and it is no doubt reported by Luke to cause the miracle to appear all the more striking. There were certain kinds of fishing always carried on at night. "At Thy word." No doubt Peter was weary and somewhat discouraged, but he had faith enough in Christ to lead him to go at the direction of his divine Master.

6. "Their net brake." "Their nets were breaking."—R. V. There was such a multitude of fishes that a snap in some weak part of the net warned them that they must have assistance or lose the entire "catch." The miracle was an acted parable, of which the significance is explained in Matthew 13:47. "This breaking net is explained by St. Augustine as the symbol of the church which now is. He compares the unrent net to the church of the future which shall know no schisms." 7. "Beckoned." Made signals. The distance evidently being too great for the voice to reach. "They came." James and John with their ship. "Began to sink." The boats would hardly hold as much as the nets. Trench refers to a shoal of mackerel, at Brighton, in 1808, so great that the net could not be brought in, and fishes and net remained in the sea together. By this vast draught of fishes Christ intended, 1. To show His dominion in the seas as well as on the dry land (Psa. 8:8). 2. To confirm the doctrine He had just preached. 3. To give those who were to be His ambassadors to the world a specimen of the success they might expect.

III. The disciples astonished (vs. 8, 9). 8. "Saw." It seems that it was not till Peter saw the boats beginning to sink that he realized the greatness of the miracle. "Fell down." The common posture of a supplicant. In amazement he fell at the feet of Jesus trembling and afraid. He no doubt had a knowledge of many of the miracles which Christ had performed, but none had so directly touched himself as this one. "Depart from Me." Peter saw that the same knowledge and power that could pervade the depths of the sea could pervade the depths of his human heart and know its secret sins. "A sinful man." Peter saw himself a very sinful creature. When we get near Christ we will see that in our unregenerate state we are without moral beauty or holiness. 9. "Was astonished." Was amazed. Humanity stands "amazed" before the power of God.

IV. Forsaken all for Christ (vs. 10, 11). 10. "Sons of Zebedee." The children and wife of Zebedee are often referred to, but in this transaction only do we meet with Zebedee himself (Matt. 4:21). "Fear not." He calmed their fears and stilled all their troubled feelings. "From henceforth." Hereafter. "Catch men." Literally, thou shalt be catching alive. This seems to imply the contrast between the fish that lay glittering there in dead heaps and men who should be captured not for death, but for life.

11. "Ships to land." They drew them up on the beach for a final abandonment. "Forsook all." Although it was not much which they had to leave, yet it was all they had, even all their living. "Followed Him." They returned again to their occupation as fishermen after the crucifixion, and were again called to abandon it and devote themselves by a second miraculous draught of fishes and by the direct precept of Jesus. After Pentecost they never resumed their former secular calling.

In a recent address Prof. H. F. Dean of Canada said: "In 1895 I had the pleasure of visiting that little country, Holland. It is said to be the wealthiest country according to population of any in the world. Now, how have they made their money? How have they been able to produce the marvellous wealth which has accrued to that very small country? They have made it out of agriculture, and the particular branch of agriculture which they have given special attention to is that of keeping cows and the production of dairy goods."

AGRICULTURAL.

Straight Ditches.

When draining the land, whether with tiles or ditches, better results will be obtained if the ditches or tiles are as straight as it is possible to have them. Every turn made in a drain assists in permitting an accumulation of solid matter, as well as impeding the flow of water to a certain extent.—Baltimore Sun.

Prevention of Egg Eating.

The quickest cure for the habit of egg eating in fowls is decapitation for the table, but oftentimes a fowl is too valuable for this treatment, and it may be worth while to prepare a nest like the one shown in the illustration. The bottom of the nest is in two parts. The larger piece slants to the rear just enough to cause an egg to roll down it. A glass nest egg is made fast to the lower piece to induce the hen to lay on the bare nest. When the hen has laid the egg and turned around to peck it she is much astonished to see it roll out of sight.—Orange Judd Farmer.

The Use of Absorbents.

One of the best methods of keeping manure is to have a pit, with cement bottom and sides, and the solid portions kept wet by pumping on the heap from the drainings, for if the manure is kept damp there will be a great difference in its value. Experiments made show that a heap carefully managed and kept wet lost about thirteen per cent. of its nitrogen, while another heap, not kept wet, lost about twenty-four per cent. of its nitrogen. Manure, even when kept wet, will be more valuable if, in addition to the cut straw and stalks used as absorbents, the manure is first covered with dirt and marl, a layer of manure being followed by a layer of marl and then a layer of absorbents, the whole well trampled. The loss of nitrogen when such a plan has been tested did not exceed two per cent. Marl is perhaps the cheapest and best absorbent material, as it not only serves to prevent loss, but is clean, easily handled and costs but very little. It can be used both in the stalls and in the heap, and applied freely. It really enriches the manure as well as preserving it, for the reason that it contains plant food in an insoluble condition, which becomes available for plants when used with the solid and liquid manures.—Philadelphia Record.

Classification of Food.

In feeding animals, the farmer, by his knowledge of the difference between flesh-forming foods and those that form fat, is enabled to so combine the different foods as to provide for all their wants. Knowing that the "albuminoids," or nitrogenous foods, produce muscle (lean meat) and milk, in order to allow for heat and fat he must "balance" the foods for the purpose of avoiding too much of the one kind and not enough of the other. On an average, the proportion of nitrogenous foods to the carbonaceous is as one to six, or rather, he should add six times as much of the carbonaceous as he does of the nitrogenous. The conditions, however, affect the proportions, for if an animal is highly exercised, as is the case with working horses in summer, the nitrogen may be increased and the carbon diminished; but if the weather is very cold the proportion of carbonaceous matter, on the contrary, should be increased. By a knowledge of the composition of different foods the farmer who feeds for milk will regulate the material allowed to his animals according to circumstances, and not without an object in view as is frequently the case. In fattening his animals he will use the fat-forming foods, allowing only so much nitrogenous matter as may be necessary for the existence of the animal.—Philadelphia Record.

Applying Farmyard Manure.

By an experiment conducted at the Ottawa Experiment Farm, which lasted over a period of years and which is reported in the Farmer's Review, it was proven that an equal weight of fresh stable manure and of well rotted manure applied to all the principal crops of the farm gave practically equal results, a slight difference being in favor of the fresh manure, says James McFadyean. It is a great mistake to believe that manure wastes to any extent when spread upon the land. Unless there is considerable fermentation, there will be very little of the valuable elements escape by evaporation. I do not recommend too heavy an application at one time. We seek to have it divided so that it will cover all the land every second year, if possible. If the manure is reasonably short, so that we may have it incorporated into the surface soil with the disc or spade harrow, cultivator or gang plow in the spring, and to about the same depth as we wish to sow our grain, its indirect value to the growing crop is greatest. Farmyard manure is the most natural and perfect plant food available, and it has indirect results that no commercial fertilizer can give, because it adds to the soil so much vegetable matter, so much humus, by which all clay and sandy soils especially are greatly benefited, though not just yet available as plant food. But whenever there is a decaying of vegetable matter there is always a certain degree of heat formed. We see this very plainly in the manure heap. Then let us have this heat formed in the soil, that the growing plants may derive some benefit from it, and the soil will be made more mellow, crumbly and porous because of the heat and moisture.—Mirror Farmer.

Cure of Colt's Feet.

Among the farm horses throughout the country it is surprising how few there are that are perfectly sound. In looking for the reasons for the existing conditions we shall find several causes. One important cause is the breeding of unsound animals, which transmit the predisposition to unsoundness to their offspring. There is still another cause, and it is in connection with this that we intend to say a few words.

Ringbones, curbs, spavins, etc., are doubtless frequently due to lack of attention to the feet of horses while they are young and to the lack of attention to the feet of older horses which are not shod regularly. We often see the feet of young horses growing badly out of shape, which condition we may attribute to neglect on the part of the owner or to the fact that they do not appreciate the importance of the question. When the hoof grows out of shape the ligaments and joints of the limbs are under a constant strain and liable to sprains which will probably result in a permanent injury.

Just now when the colts are being put in their winter quarters is a suitable time to see that their feet are properly trimmed. This may be done on a solid wooden floor with the use of the chisel and hammer. The hoof should be trimmed to the proper shape and the frog should rest on the ground when the horse is not shod.

The first requisite in a good horse is sound limbs. Whatever other good points he may have, he is of no value if he has not legs to carry him. Then, if anything can be done to ameliorate the liability to unsoundness, we will all admit that it deserves every attention. We therefore trust that our farmers will see to it that colts' feet are attended to.—Indianapolis News.

Homemade Wagon Jack.

While wagon jacks are comparatively low in cost, some of the cheaper ones are not desirable. If one has some leisure during the winter a jack such as is shown in the illustration can be constructed readily and at very little cost. The lumber used should be of some tough growth and the joinings should be well made. Material two by three will be strong enough if of good lumber. The upright piece should be about two and one-half feet long and be mortised into the base, although it may be attached in any other desired way. The base is three feet long

A long mortise should be cut in the upright as shown, and holes made as shown, so that a pin may be used to place the lever higher or lower to fit the height of the various wagons. One end of the chain is stapled to the base as shown, and in the end of the lever is placed a strong hook. After the wheel is raised to the desired height a link of the chain is slipped over the hook in the lever and holds it in position.—Indianapolis News.

Farm Notes.

It is doing what needs to be done at the right time that makes good butter.

With manure and clover the skillful farmer needs to buy little fertility save in bran.

Fast driving makes stiff horses unless extra care is taken after each spurt of speed.

Dairy stock cannot be improved if a mixing of breeds is carelessly permitted to go on.

A bad disposition in an animal is generally the result of bad management and handling.

No animal, no matter how well bred, should be used for breeding unless it has individual merit.

Having the conditions right when the seed is sown is an important item in securing good germination.

The only way the grass crop can be cultivated is by preparing the soil in a fine tilth before sowing the seed.

The horses that are best able to stand hard drains are those which work steadily every day in the week.

The dirt and sweat which accumulate on a horse during the day should not be allowed to remain on over night.

A hog with a short nose, a thick neck, short legs and plenty of heart and lung room is generally a quiet and good grower.

The average farmer finds it best to keep a variety of stock in order to use to the best advantage all of the products of the farm.

In making the best quality of butter it is essential that the cream should have a uniform consistency as well as uniform ripeness.

Ashes, salt and charcoal should be kept where the stock can help themselves. They assist digestion and sharpen the appetite.—Kansas Farmer.

LIFE IN THE LITTLE FLAT.

A life in the little flat,
A home on the seventh floor
Where a man who is fairly fat
Must be careful to weigh no more!
Like an eagle caged, up there
Serene contemplation's mine;
The parlor holds but one chair
And the dining room's five by nine.

When I in the bedroom stand
I can reach from wall to wall;
I have to breathe gently and
Squeeze sideways through the hall.
There is room for my brush and comb
And space for my wife when she
Comments to remain at home
O, life in the flat for me.

He Should Have Known Nero.

In the days when Sir Charles Gavan Duffy was a leading figure in Victorian politics there sat in the Melbourne parliament a wealthy but not well-informed butcher. The chief secretary of the day was deprecating the attitude of the leader of the opposition, whose conduct was, he declared, worse than Nero's.

"Who was Nero?" interjected the knight of the cleaver, with equal scorn and sincerity.

CAPT. Reuben F. Kolb is a candidate for chairman of the railroad commission. If the genial Reuben had the same following now he had ten years ago, he would be chairman surely.

A good road enables the farmer to haul his produce to market the year round, and to haul when it is wet and he can't plow. He thus can get a better price—he can haul twice the usual load in less time. It saves wear and tear on wagons, team and temper, the children can always go to school. A man buying a farm will pay more for it on a good road than on a poor one.

JUDGE JOHN G. WINTER.

With pleasure we call attention to the announcement of Judge John G. Winter who is a candidate for re-election to the office he now so worthily fills as Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit. At the creation of the circuit, when it was announced that Hon. John G. Winter had been appointed Judge, the appointment was hailed on all sides as a good one, and the manner in which he conducted the business of the circuit confirmed the good opinion. His nomination may be taken for granted, it being very improbable he will have any opposition in the primary, and as the circuit could not have a better judge his election will be for the best interests of all the people.

J. R. JOHNSON

This gentleman, whose announcement appears elsewhere, is a candidate for the responsible office of Tax Collector. He is a thoroughbred Chiltonian, having been born and raised in the county, his home at the present time being in Beat 2. He is well qualified to fill the office, and bears an excellent character among his neighbors, and has never held office. A life-long Democrat, always voting the Democratic ticket, he asks his brother Democrats to show their appreciation of his fidelity to the party by voting for him. If nominated and elected the county will secure a competent tax collector in Mr. Johnson.

PRICES AND PRODUCTION.

Cotton was sold in this town on Saturday at 14¼ cents, and sellers even wanted 15 cents. These are remarkable prices in view of the fact down to the last cotton year the staple had not brought 10 cents in twelve years. In 1845 the average price of midling uplands in New York was but 5.63 cents, which stands for low water mark in that market. Present prices were exceeded during the war and in the years immediately following the war, and in 1834 and 1835 prices ran up to 16 and 17 cents. But these were the only years that show better prices than those of the present time.

And yet no war affected the present crop, and it is not an abnormally small crop. It will certainly exceed ten millions of bales. The long and short of it is, there are not enough pickers to clothe a naked world. The world wants an American crop of twelve or thirteen million bales, and it is not certain that American pickers can pick out that much. We can make that number of bales, but it remains to be seen whether we can pick that much cotton. The picking of so much cotton by hand, boll-by boll, is not a light task.

If the present year be favorable the problem of picking out will be before the south, for our farmers are about to plant for a big crop, and all the advice in the world cannot stay their ploughs. Some of them will plant without duly considering the picking problem, trusting to luck as to that, but if prices remain above 10 cents growers can afford to pay pickers good prices, and this will swell the army of pickers, and thus perhaps whatever is grown will be gathered. But some of it will not reach the gineries until the ploughs are started in 1905.—Age Herald.

Clanton High School.

The Clanton High School is progressing nicely under the principalship of Prof. H. T. Wallace, with two assistants, Mrs. Alice Middleton and Miss Alice Strock. This school is now in its third year and has the enrollment of 148 pupils. There are a few boarding pupils attending this school. During the past week several were absent on account of measles. Our school-room has lately been seated with new patent desks, which the pupils greatly appreciate. With strong corps of teachers no boy or girl could do better than to attend school here. Prof. Wallace is a teacher who makes every recitation interesting and impressive to his pupils. A new Latin class will be organized next week of which class the writer is proud to be a member.

We have twenty or twenty-five pupils and they seem to be getting along nicely. We have several rules which we all obey.

Some from our room have already been moved in there I am in the third grade now, and will go in the next room when I get in the fourth grade, but our room is too small for so many. We have a nice, good teacher, and all love her.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. Cross Roads.

Rev. M. J. Parrish filled his regular appointment here on the third Sunday, and what he has done for the people is a plenty if they will only obey the doctrine as he gave it.

Bro. Babe Edwards and wife united with the church at this place to keep house for God, and they mean to keep it with clean hands, and with their robes washed in the blood of the Lamb. I am proud to say they are getting down to their knitting at last in doing business in the right way. Come on, brethren, and be ye not afraid nor ashamed, and let us get the wolf out of the flock. Remember, that he who is ashamed has no promise. Look out, all you who are guilty of violating God's righteous law, for they say they will hew to the line hereafter, and you know that there are some good old brethren who have hewed many a crosstie and they know how to hold the axe to plumb the line, for every tree that bringeth forth not good fruit will be hewed down and cast into the fire. So no more at this time, wishing all of God's children much success.

The new cruiser continues the name of the 3,700-ton vessel wrecked several years ago in the Philippines. There will be but two other vessels in the United States navy of the Charleston class. They are the Milwaukee and the St. Louis, now under construction. While designed primarily for speed, they will be at the same time formidable fighting machines. Fair Nearing Completion.

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition company now stands ready and is waiting for the full and general installation of exhibits. FOR GOOD ROADS.

National Convention in Session in Washington.

A meeting of the National Good Roads Association has been called to meet in Washington January 25th, 26th and 27th. The arrangements for this meeting were left in the hands of Mr. R. W. Richardson, of Iowa, secretary of the association, by the association at its meeting in St. Louis last April. The principal object of the coming meeting will be to attend hearings before the house and senate committees on agriculture and this will be done during the three days of the meeting. A large number of prominent men from all over the country are expected to be in attendance.

There are two bills now pending before congress extending government aid to the construction of good roads. The legislatures of a number of states have indorsed the movement and instructed their senators and members to support whichever bill they consider the best. While the bills differ somewhat in detail, the principle is the same—that where a county or state appropriates money to be expended in improving its roads the government shall allot an equal sum for such improvements on condition that the roads shall be constructed under the supervision of the government, and shall thereafter be maintained by the state or county constructing the same. A number of states already make appropriations to assist the counties and townships in constructing their roads, the cost being variously apportioned. A popular plan is for the states to bear one-half the expense the county one-quarter and the township one-quarter, while in some instances the towns are assessed 10 per cent or more. Thus the burden is distributed.

Alabama's delegates are: Governor William D. Jelks, Montgomery; W. M. Drennen, mayor, Birmingham; Hon. George W. Taylor, Demopolis; Hon. William Richardson, Huntsville; R. R. Poole, commissioner department of agriculture and industries, Montgomery; Captain J. M. Falkner, attorney Louisville and Nashville railway, Montgomery; Charles P. Lane, president Alabama Commercial and Industrial association, Huntsville.

Lambert, proprietor Natchez Democrat, Natchez; J. T. Senter, editor Columbus Commercial, Columbus; K. G. W. Bynum, Corinth; T. W. James, McComb City bank, McComb City; Colonel A. E. Jennings, Water Valley, and Captain W. W. Stone, Greenville.

The move is made to meet the contemplated expenditure of $50,000,000 on the navy, thereby adding twenty-four battleships and fifty other warships to the fleet. The movement for the organization of new banks in Mississippi goes on, and a large percentage of the charters being approved at the governor's office are for institutions of this kind. According to the confessions that have been made by Van Dine, Niedemier, Marx and Roeski, the youthful Chicago bandits, the career of their criminal band began on March 1. They took up murder and theft to increase their incomes and free themselves from the restrictions of commonplace, legitimate employment. Here is a recapitulation of their lawless activities: Successful robberies, nine; murders committed, six; men wounded, four; gross proceeds of robberies, $2540; average monthly income from robberies, $283; monthly income of each bandit from robberies, $71 daily average income of each bandit from robberies, $2.37. From a purely business point of view the bandit business in Chicago is not an attractive one, concludes the New York Sun.

Now that it has been conclusively proved that an electric car can be run at the rate of 125 or 130 miles an hour without trouble, German engineers are asking whether it will pay to do so, muses the New York World. Owing to the destructive effect of such high speeds upon a roadbed, it is alleged that the latter must be built of brick and cement instead of dirt and broken stone. Again, to avoid the consequences of atmospheric disturbance when one train meets another, it may be necessary to allow thirty feet between the two tracks, thus materially adding to the cost of a right of way. Pessimistic views like these deserve careful consideration, but it must not be imagined that the case is already settled.

As much as we should like to think the manuscript of Milton's "Paradise Lost" was to sojourn, for a while at least, in this country, it would be deplorable if England allowed what many feel is a sacred trust to be lost to that nation. And when a little piece of jewelry can be purchased for nearly $40,000 at Christie's, would it not be disgraceful for the Milton manuscript to lack a proper owner? Should the Government, however, refuse to buy it, then all England should have the privilege of subscribing to save it from the auction room, and the United States!

Evidently he has never been in this country. A French journalist claims to be authority as to the status of American men. He says they are inclined to be shy and self-effacin

FOUR-FOOTED OFFENDERS.

The Smuggler Dogs of Gib and Their Cruel Training.

The difference in the price of tobacco, matches, groceries and so on in Gibraltar and the Spanish territory immediately adjoining it is accountable for the continual activity of the contrabandists in these parts. Their poverty is evident from their way of living. The average country man's dwelling is a weatherboarded, straw-built, one-room hut, in a vegetable-producing inclosure, encircled with aloes as a hedge. At the doorway the half starved donkeys feed from a manger, while a few pigs and goats are out on the hills, shepherded by a small boy. Outside, basking in the sun, there are always dogs. Those big, ill bred "lurchers," whose numerous carcasses, in various states of decomposition, are scattered along the shore at high tide, shot in the night by the excisemen, as they swim ashore from some rowboat out in the bay, or as they cross the sands on their way to some neighboring cottage, each one with a load of contraband bound up in a waterproof strapped to its back. The education of these dogs involves a lot of cruelty. In the day they are taken out to sea, thrown in with a minute load on their backs, and on arrival at the shore, unless prompted by instinct to make a beeline for their home, are hounded along thither with sticks, stones, and the discharge of blank ammunition. All this instills into them a wholesome dread of meeting or passing anybody while on these trips.

Carabinero patrols constantly discover on the neutral ground by the Rock buried treasure, in the shape of tobacco and spirits, which has been landed at night and hidden, with a view to its being smuggled by day in driblets into Spain. The men at the Custom House have their work cut out to prevent such things, for at daybreak and sunset six days a week 7,000 work people go into and return from the Rock, working all day at the new docks. One sees them behind the bushes, in the public gardens and openly on the roadside, stuffing their specially prepared stockings and their other clothing with sugar, salt, tobacco and such like.—London Graphic.

Preparing Advertising Copy.

A great many otherwise shrewd business men, says an exchange, buy expensive and valuable space and fill it with the most absurd rot imaginable, misnaming it advertising.

The preparation of copy requires individual thought and research in each particular case. Common sense is the first essential, and this is exercised by employing plain, straightforward statements.

An advertisement that will sell a patent medicene will not sell a silk dress; an advertisement that will sell goods in Washington will not always sell the same goods in Chicago. It stands to reason that a medicine advertisement is made more forcible and convincing by using a local testimonial than a foreign one.

The advertiser should always figure on spending a considerable amount to have his ideas worked out in neat, attractive and forcible shape. It is natural to assume that the judicious advertiser purchases publicity for profit, not for fame. Some advertisers figure on advertising as an expense in their business, instead of what it should be and can be—a paying investment.

Speed of Birds.

Frequently arguments arise as to the speed with which wild birds fly, and many men of science have sought to determine something about it. Naturally it is impossible to fix the record made by such birds as grouse, quail or snipe when they first arise, but it is safe to say they are not going half as fast as the luckless gunner who misses them imagines. With the migratory fowl of known fast flight, such as ducks and geese, something more nearly accurate is known. The green-winged teal is about the speediest of them all. It does something like ninety miles an hour as readily as a sparrow dives into an inviting rainspout. The canvas-back is only a trifle slower, probably eighty-five miles being its limit, while the black duck, mallard and red-head fall below this, being timed at about eighty miles. Still this is plenty fast enough to insure plenty of misses unless the fellow with the gun looks down the rib straight and pulls the trigger at the right time.—Philadelphia Press.

A Battle of Languages.

Three or four languages strove for mastery in ancient Gaul, which is now France. German was spoken by the 12,000 Frank invaders. Popular Latin was spoken by 6,000,000 Gallo-Romans. Literary Latin was the language of the church and of literature. Low Latin was afterward the language of the administration. German was the first to succumb. In four centuries it ceased to be understood by the soldiers, and in seventy years more it had become an object of ridicule. But it survives in more than 900 words, expressing the things of government, law and war, and thus forms no insignificant part of the French language.

Smallest Republic in the World.

The Italian King has ratified the treaty of friendship with the Republic of Tavolara, which reminds the world of the fact that such a State exists. It is situated near the northeast coast of Sardinia, and consists of a single island, defended by nature in the inapproachableness of its coast line and by three old cannons of the type of 1853. The island has 173 inhabitants, a President, Senate and police force, the latter consisting of one constable. Up to 1882 Tavolara was a monarchy, but when King Paola died the people threw off the yoke of kingship and established a republic. Its President rules for ten years, and both men and women vote.

LITTLE THINGS Worth Knowing

The Botallac mine in Cornwall, England, runs for two-thirds of a mile under the sea.

Chinese women never think of taking the hairpins out of their hair when they go to bed.

Yarmouth (England) Corporation forbids smoking on Sundays in its new pier pavilion, as the band plays extra music.

The rain-making hoax, which has run its course in this country, is being worked extensively by "drought-breakers" in Australia.

The Houston Post has come forward with the proverbial meanest man, a gentleman from Georgia, who pawned his wife's false teeth in order to take another "lady" to a picnic.

Rev. E. H. Wallace, pastor of the Montoursville (Pa.) Methodist Church, has discharged the old church choir and substituted four pretty girls. The size of his congregations is growing rapidly.

Speaking of old industries going out of existence one has just died out in Bolton, England, namely, that of the hand mule, which was at one time an extensive form of the spinning industry. It is absolutely unknown now.

A strange bequest, noticeable even among the eccentricities of English wills, has been made by the late Joe Gillott, the pen man, of Birmingham. He gave $250 to his gas man of the $800,000 and more he left.

The Sultan of Turkey employs fifteen secretaries, whose duty it is to translate foreign books for his delectation. If one of them happens to err and translates a book that is distasteful to His Majesty he is simply pitched into the Bosphorus.

In a recent newspaper article a Philippino student at Georgetown University, Ramon Jose Lacson, quotes the record to show that there were universities in the Philippines before institutions of as high a grade were established in the United States.

The expression "baker's dozen," which is in point of fact thirteen, has a history. For a baker in the olden times to give short weight in bread exposed him to considerable penalties, and thus the custom arose of adding an extra loaf to the dozen as compensation for any possible deficiencies in the rest of the batch.

Money For Inventions.

Thousands of inventions are brought out every year that fall flat, and fail simply through a want of ability on the part of inventors to look the matter straight into the face, and find out whether the thing is wanted or not. Among inventions that are wanted, and which are by no means beyond the range of the amateur inventor, we may mention a really good and cheap ironing machine for domestic purposes. There are many improvements in washing machines, mechanical wringing and other apparatus for lightening women's labor in the home, but a really good and cheap ironing machine. It is quite time that some inventor came along to lessen the toil that ironing entails. Besides the heat of the fire, the weight of the iron, burning the hands, and bending the back is quite enough to insure the ready reception of a really good and cheap ironing device for the household.

A good acetylene table lamp is badly wanted, especially in parts of the country where the gas is poor and bad, and where oil lamps and candles are still the prevailing means of artificial illumination. The apparatus must be cheap, able to hold a charge of carbide sufficient for about ten hours, and constructed in such a way that in practice no surplus gas is produced when once the tap is turned off.

Now that photography is so popular among amateurs, there should be no difficulty in making a good, cheap daylight developer for plates. Several have been designed and are on the market for developing films, but a really efficient and cheap plate is still wanted, and will be welcomed by thousands of amateur photographers.—The British Inventor.

Why Other Fellow Wasn't Tried.

The bishop of a diocese in the West, when it was the West, tells of a trial for murder in his episcopal town which came near demoralizing the community.

The principals had been enemies of long standing. For a time they had been successfully kept apart by their friends, but at length the psychological moment arrived, revolvers were brought into play, and one man paid the penalty.

The survivor was brought up for trial and in a crowded courtroom awaited his fate. In the crowd was the good bishop, who had gone to the trial in the hope of being of some service to the accused.

When the opposing counsel had finished their arguments the jury retired to consider the verdict. They returned after a brief deliberation, and their foreman electrified the court and paralyzed the spectators by announcing gravely:

"The verdict of this jury is that this here defendant has shown himself to be the best shot in the Territory. If he hadn't been we'd a been lyin' the other feller."—New York Press.

MEDICAL EXAMINER

Of the United States Treasury Recommends Pe-ru-na.

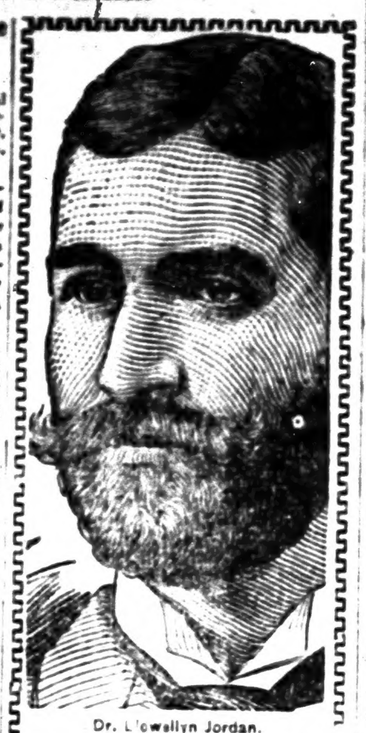
Other Prominent Physicians Use and Endorse Pe-ru-na.

DR. LLEWELLYN JORDAN, Medical Examiner of the U. S. Treasury Department, graduate of Columbia College, and who served three years at West Point, writes the following to say of Peruna:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from your wonderful remedy. One short month has brought forth a great change and I now consider myself a well man after months of suffering. Tell sufferers, Peruna will cure you."

A constantly increasing number of physicians prescribe Peruna in their practice. It has proven its merits so thoroughly that even the doctors have overcome their prejudice against so-called patent medicines and recommend it to their patients.

Peruna occupies a unique position in medical science. It is the only internal systemic catarrh remedy known to the medical profession to-day. Catarrh, as every one will admit, is the cause of one-half the disease which afflicts mankind. Catarrh and catarrhal diseases afflict one-half of the people of United States.



Dr. Llewellyn Jordan.
Medical Examiner United States Treasury.

Robert R. Roberts, M. D., Washington, D. C., writes:

"Through my own experience as well as that of many of my friends and acquaintances who have been cured or relieved of catarrh by the use of Hartman's Peruna, I can confidently recommend it to those suffering from such disorders, and have no hesitation in prescribing it to my patients."—Robert R. Roberts.

Dr. R. Robbins, Muskogee, I. T., writes: "Peruna is the best medicine I know of for coughs and to strengthen a weak stomach and to give appetite. Besides prescribing it for catarrh, I have ordered it for weak and debilitated people, and have not had a patient but said it helped him. It is an excellent medicine and it fits so many cases.

"I have a large practice, and have a chance to prescribe your Peruna. I hope it may live long to do good to the sick and the suffering."

Dr. M. C. Gee writes from 513 Jones St., San Francisco, Cal.: "Peruna has performed so many wonderful cures in San Francisco that I am convinced that it is a valuable remedy. I have frequently advised its use for women, and find it insures regular and painless menstruation, cures leucorrhoea and ovarian troubles, and builds up the entire system. I also consider it one of the finest catarrh remedies I know of."—M. C. Gee, M. D.

Catarrh is a systemic disease curable only by systemic treatment. A remedy that cures catarrh must aim directly at the depressed nerve centres. This is what Peruna does.

Peruna immediately invigorates the nerve centres which give vitality to the mucous membranes. Then catarrh disappears. Then catarrh is permanently cured.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Bird Tries to Feed Its Shadow.

A gentleman whose home is in a grove on the North side relates a remarkable incident which has come under his observation within the past few weeks. A Kentucky cardinal is interfering with his comfort to such an extent that he threatens to shoot it.

Every morning shortly after daylight, for a period of a month, the gentleman has been awakened by a tapping and fluttering at his window, which each time continued for half an hour or longer. After several repetitions of the disturbance he cautiously opened the shutters and investigated. He found the redbird waging a fight with its reflection in the window pane. He frightened it away and hoped that this would break up the practice. However, the next morning the visit was repeated, and despite his efforts to discourage the visitor, every morning since it has broken his rest about 5:30 o'clock. Yesterday morning he was roused by the usual fluttering, and, securing a window stick, he started to enter the fight between Mr. Redbird and its reflection. Peeping out, his heart was softened. The bird had a piece of bread in its mouth and was trying to feed its shadow.—Lexington (Ky.) Herald.

Why Poles Are Not Germanized.

The official mind in Prussia seems to be gradually coming to the recognition that the policy pursued hitherto with regard to the Germanization of the Polish provinces has been as futile as it is costly. What happens in Polish Silesia is seemingly somewhat as follows: With the liberal sums received from the Prussian government as the price of their estates, the Polish proprietors liquidate their debts and devote the balance to founding banking establishments in the towns, in which they carry on a lucrative business by advancing money at reasonable rates of interest to the tradesmen and artisans, who in turn have laid out the loans so advantageously that a large and comparatively prosperous middle class have been created, who have actually been economically strong enough to push the German traders to the wall. Hence the fact that the German population in the Polish provinces is weaker in almost every respect at the present moment than was the case ten years ago.—Speaker.

THE CLEARING-OFF MAN.

Spills Sunshine and Cheer When Clouds Hang Low.

"He is the most encouraging man I ever knew; he always thinks it is going to clear off." That was a remark heard in the crowd on the street as people were hastening to the dock to start for the yacht race. This cheerful person had already cleared the weather so far as the little party who were discussing him were concerned. "Their faces were radiant with smiles at the mere thought of him.

The man who always thinks it is going to clear off is a blessing to any community. He takes a cheerful view of the weather because he takes a cheerful view of everything. He is wise meterologically because, as a matter of fact, it generally does clear off, and he is wise temperamentally and in the world's sense because continued cheerfulness, a habitually hopeful view, is rewarded with the world's affection and confidence—two things which are worth a great deal more than its money.

There are too many good people in the world who make a kind of public calamity of their goodness. We doubt whether a good person who thus makes his goodness a cheerless and critical thing comes off as well in the eternal account as the man who, though he may have his little human weaknesses, makes people smile instead of frown—makes them firmly believe that dark skies are going to clear and instantly brightens into sympathetic radiance a rather weak and hazy quality of sunshine when it comes.

Since beauty is truth, the man who makes us believe in the essential beautifulness of the world must be a good and true man. In any case, with all his faults we love him.—New York Mail and Express.

Love can neither be bought nor sold, but it may be exchanged.

Money Saved is Money Made.

A Strange Custom.

In Denmark there is a strange but wise custom. Parents will exchange their children during the summer holidays. The little ones from the villages go to town and are all the better and brighter for their little knowledge of city life and what the world is doing. The little city folk are sent to be refreshed by the country air and come back with rosy cheeks and robust constitutions. It is dealt with, too, from an educational standpoint. At Zurich an agency has been established for the exchange of children of France, Germany and Switzerland, so that they may learn to speak the different languages.

LASTING RELIEF.

J. W. Walls, Superintendent of Streets of Lebanon, Ky., says:

"My nightly rest was broken, owing to irregular action of the kidneys. I was suffering intensely from severe pains in the small of my back and through the kidneys and annoyed by painful passages of abnormal secretions. No amount of doctoring relieved this condition. I took Doan's Kidney Pills and experienced quick and lasting relief. Doan's Kidney Pills will prove a blessing to all sufferers from kidney disorders who will give them a fair trial."

A curious memorial of the Boer war is recorded from Surrey. At Burstaw, in that county, a drinking trough and fountain have been erected in memory of 4000 horses killed and wounded during the South African war from 1899 to 1902, "in a cause of which they knew nothing."

"Don't you find it tiresome," said Marc Antony, "to devote so much time to literature in addition to your various ways?" "Yes," replied Caesar, "but it pays. There is nothing like being your own military critic."—Washington Star.

WOMEN IN SPORT.

Should Ride Astride for Safety and Comfort.

Where one woman shoots, fishes or sails, a thousand ride on horseback, and these are exposed under present conditions to dangers which should be avoided. A woman should bestride a horse precisely as a man rides.

We have often called attention to the danger of the ordinary side-saddle—to the fact that the woman is wholly dependent upon her saddle girth, and in case of accident is absolutely without control over her own motions. She can cling firmly to the saddle, but that is all she can do. If anything goes wrong with the saddle, if a girth bursts, a strap breaks, a buckle tongue pops out, and so the saddle becomes loose, it is impossible for the woman either to remedy the mischief or jump free and clear of the saddle and take her chance of a fall. On the other hand, the man or the woman who rides astride is free. If the accident to the saddle is slight, the rider is still able to cling to the horse from thigh to ankle, or if the horse cannot be ridden, then the rider is free to roll off or jump off, with an even chance of striking the ground feet first, while the woman who falls from, or with the side-saddle is almost certain to strike the ground on her head.

These arguments have been so frequently insisted on that they have become familiar, and it is well that they have become so, for they have appealed strongly to the hard common sense of many American women. In a certain Western State, an editorial in Forest and Stream on this subject converted all the young women of a county from riders of side-saddles to riders of men's saddles. Two or three young women, standing high in the social life of the community, grasped the force of the reasoning, adopted the cross saddle and were followed in the fashion which they set by practically all the woman riders in the county. Riding in this fashion, they used to chase coyotes with greyhounds and had many fine races.

Within the last few years the practice of riding a man's saddle has been extensively taken up in cities like Boston, New York and Chicago. Some women had the courage to adopt this fashion long ago, and more and more of them are doing it. It is not making a rash prediction to say that the numbers will constantly increase; practically all the little girls now seen riding in New York ride astride as their brothers do, and as they grow up many of them will still cling to this sensible fashion. One of the best women cross-country riders in the United States has adopted it wholly on the ground of its greater safety and comfort. The fashion is especially to be recommended to those who by necessity or by choice ride in rough countries, or fast.—Forest and Stream.

The American woman is threatened with ruin from megalomania, the New York World discovers. Her head has been turned by adulation, and in her worship of self she forgets her duty to husband, family and country. She becomes unpatriotic, bartering her republican birthright for foreign titles. She becomes extravagant, shallow and vain. She is forgetting how to manage a home. She flits frivolously from pleasure to pleasure, and often from husband to husband. Man has placed her upon a pedestal, but such stern yet needful admonition as that of Dr. Dix proves that it is beginning to topple from her own acts.

The Oat Wonder.

The Editor must tell its readers of this marvel. It originated with the largest farm seed growers in the world, the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis. It has stiff straw, stands up like a stone wall, is white, heavy, and has long ears, filled to the tip with fat, plump kernels. It is a great stooler, 50 stocks from one kernel.

IF YOU WILL SEND THIS NOTICE AND 10c. IN STAMPS

Indications of Footsteps.

Tiptoe walking indicates surprise, curiosity, diversion or mystery.

The miser's walk is indicated in short, nervous steps, noiseless and anxious, and with stooped shoulders.

Energy or agitation is indicated in the quick step.

Preoccupied or absent-minded people will be found with toes turned in.

The proud step is slow and measured, the toes conspicuously turned out and legs straightened.

Uncertainty, hesitation and indecision are indicated by the wavering steps which follow every changing impulse of the mind.

Slow steps, whether long or short, suggest a gentle or reflective state of mind.

Obstinate people who, in argument, rely more on muscular power than on intellectual power, rest the feet flatly and firmly on the ground, walking heavily and slowly, and stand with legs firmly planted far apart.—Detroit Tribune.

Miss Alice M. Smith, of Minneapolis, Minn., tells how woman's monthly suffering may be permanently relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have never before given my endorsement for any medicine, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has added so much to my life and happiness that I feel like making an exception in this case. For two years every month I would have two days of severe pain, and could find no relief, but one day when visiting a friend I ran across Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,—she had used it with the best results and advised me to try it. I found that it worked wonders with me; I now experience no pain, and only had to use a few bottles to bring about this wonderful change. I use it occasionally now when I am exceptionally tired or worn out."—MISS ALICE M. SMITH, 806 Third Ave., South Minneapolis, Minn., Chairman Executive Committee, Minneapolis Study Club.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carries women safely through the various natural crises and is the safe-guard of woman's health.

The truth about this great medicine is told in the letters from women being published in this paper constantly.

MR. BICE ON THORSBY ELECTION.

Thorsby, Ala., Jan 25, 1904

Editor Banner, Clanton, Ala.:

Dear Sir—I wish to reply to D. N. Riggins' letter of 18th inst., printed in last weeks Banner. Here are the plain facts in regard to our city election.

City charter, sec. 9. "Be it further enacted, that no elector shall be permitted to vote in any election in said city until he has been a resident citizen of said city for a period of sixty days next preceding the holding of the election, and shall be otherwise a qualified elector under the State laws."

Now, what the State law; one year in the State, three months in county. Under the new constitution, two years in State, one year in county, in precinct or ward three months. G. R. Heaton, G. W. Rawlinson, D. C. Honeycutt, Dr. Stabler and Mr. Hawthorn were all raised in this State, and the first three named had lived in Thorsby for quite awhile, only moved out temporarily, kept their residence in Thorsby; they all voted and their votes were not counted, so you can call it what you please. Mr. Heaton moved out about three miles in the spring, made a crop and moved back in the fall, kept his residence in Thorsby, was he or was he not a legal voter? Same way with Rawlinson and Honeycutt, went away but kept their residence in Thorsby, and they were back in Thorsby sixty days before election day, and the five named gentlemen voted for the anti-license ticket so they say. Messrs. J. W. Franzen and J. L. Foss both voted the other ticket, and the registered list shows them to be under forty five years old, and the tax collector's books show that they have not paid a poll tax in the last two years, and they voted and their votes were counted. Now, if there is an error in the registered list I am not responsible for that. I went by what the records show when I wrote my letter signed "A Voter." Now, as to the anti-license ticket. We had a mass meeting, we advertised it as a meeting to nominate an anti-license ticket against wine selling in Thorsby. We met and elected a chairman and secretary and proceeded to nominate a ticket. Each man that was nominated pledged himself to vote against the wine selling if elected, except one that was not at the meeting when nominated, and he was understood to be against the wine business, and I had circulars printed and distributed them over the town. Now the public can judge for themselves as to whether it was wine or anti-wine.

City charter, sec. 24, latter part, "City council shall have power to license and otherwise regulate the sale of wine." As to the wine law of Chilton county that has nothing to do with the selling of wine in Thorsby, the law or the act of the legislature granting our charter, repealed all laws and parts of laws, local or general, in conflict with this act. See last part of charter.

Now, any man with common sense knows that the city council of Thorsby can stop the sale of wine in Thorsby if they wish. I refer the people to A. Horn, ex-Mayor, as to whether I raised my voice against the selling of wine in Thorsby or not. When Thorsby was first incorporated we were willing for them to sell wine, not less than one quart at a time, and it not to be drank on the premises; but, alas, I am told you can buy wine in any amount you want it, or buy it by the bottle and then put it in glasses and drink it in the house where you buy it. If this is not a saloon somebody else name it. If I understand what a saloon is, it is where you can buy something to drink that will make you drunk, and drink it in the house where you buy it. I call it saloon, you may call it what you please. I am the man that wrote the letter signed "A Voter" in regard to the city election of Thorsby, and I stated facts in that letter as I understand the law. Now, after D. N. Riggins reads this letter, and then writes and has a letter published stating that it is a lie, we will let the law settle it.

As to the school question, I only asked for the public school to be at normal school building, where it had been taught for the last two years; my contention was to divide the school would ruin it, and what I said has come true, and the public knows it. Now, here is the way the city council acted, or a majority of them, they passed a law in regard to the school, and the mayor vetoed it by withholding his signature, and they elected one of their number mayor pro tem, and had him to sign papers as mayor, and the regular mayor present and transacting the business of the meeting. I was one of the aldermen, and the mayor and I protested against what they were doing, but it did no good, they went right ahead with the business of the city in this manner and Mr. D. N. Riggins seemed to be the leader in this unlawful procedure.

Now, the public can judge for themselves. I have stated facts and given nobody the lie. It seems to me that most anybody can state facts just as they are and let the public say who is right, without writing that this or that is a lie. Men of character don't write such language. If I say anything that is wrong I am willing to amend for it.

Publish this letter, and send me bill of costs and I will pay it.

Yours truly,

J. BICE.

TO BE CHRIST LIKE

Dear Reader—Notice the subject and take to mind and heart and consider the meaning of Christ like. Stop one moment and ask yourself the question, am I Christ-like, or am I one of the devil's agents trying to destroy all that may be planted by some who is Christ-like. Well, as the writer said last week, someone would say how can I be so, or how can I find out how Christ was? Read the precious volumes of the blessed Book and there you will find Him from birth to the cross on Calvary. And there you will find one who was always submissive to the Father's will; one with an humble and contrite heart; one with a loving and gentle spirit; one with a helping hand; one ready to teach the poor benighted soul the way to salvation, one always ready to receive them that believe on Him; one always working hard for the Master's cause, one who never spoke an angry, mad word, was always gentle and mild, willing to die for the sins of this world, and there you will find his burial and resurrection the most beautiful of all; a life beyond where there is everything to make us happy there with Christ to dwell for evermore. Turn from the devil and come to Him and ask with an humble heart believing and He will help you to be like Him. Let us all come, young and old, who have made no start to be like Christ; let us who profess to be Christians take to these the gospel story. If we say we can't talk we can prove to them by our daily work. Oh, what a sad thought for our loved ones to go to a beyond of woe and misery. Oh, what a burden on mothers and fathers' hearts for their boys and girls to walk this board road to destruction.

Now, let us wake up out of sleep and be Christ like, seek those who need the gospel story. He has said go teach all nations, baptizing them that believe. Now, boys and girls, step right out on the promise and say I will be like Him, God being my helper I will drink no more, I will keep good company, I will dance no more, I will go to church and Sabbath school. I will tell no lies for the devil, the truth will I always speak, I will hate no one, but love all and watch for the evil spirit and keep him behind and join that glorious home on high.

So I will come to a stopping point, hoping this may be considered by many, and if I have made any mistake search and find me out and tell me where the error is. Hope this may touch some poor benighted soul's heart. Maybe my subject will be better next time I come.

SUPPLEMENT. JANUARY 1904.

CHRISTIAN, PATRIOT, STATESMAN. Charles Winston Thompson, of Macon County, An Alabamian Who Has Made Himself.

SOME OF HIS WORK.

Mr. Thompson Has Established Many Rural Postal Routes.

Colonel Thompson went at once to work with his known iron will and indomitable energy as soon as he took his seat in Congress to give his people the benefit of having the mails delivered daily at their doors that was being enjoyed by so many other portions of the country, and how he has succeeded the many different routes and the enthusiastic endorsement of the people along the way will testify. Speaking of free delivery system before Congress March 18, 1902, the House being in Committee of the Whole and having under consideration the bill (H. R. 11727) to classify the rural free-delivery service and fix the compensation to employees thereof, Mr. Thompson said:

Mr. Chairman—In attempting to discuss this question I feel very much like the young man who was commissioned to write an essay on "The Snakes in Ireland," and who began his essay by saying "There are no snakes in Ireland." I am sorry, sir, to acknowledge that in the district I have the honor to represent, which is perhaps one of the most intelligent districts in my State, there are no rural delivery routes. None have been established. I have earnestly been endeavoring to get routes established in my district since the day I came to Congress, and have requested the Department to send inspectors there, but an inspector has not visited my district. Applications, however, for several routes are now pending.

I [illegible] say this, Mr. Chairman, in justification of the bill now pending before the House, because I am opposed to it. I am opposed to making any change in the experiment the Government is now making of a system which seems to be perfectly satisfactory to the people who are trying it and enjoying its benefits, privileges, and blessings. Because I believe, Mr. Chairman, that this system will prove a great blessing to the whole country. I am not in favor of injecting now into this [illegible] scheme that will cripple it [illegible] will in any way destroy its use [illegible] it has been established or [illegible]. Now, I am [illegible] Postmaster-General should go out and make a few experiments and report back to this House.

Mr. Chairman, that seems to me child's play for a man with his experience to talk to business men about such a proposition as that. I think that the Representatives upon the floor of this House are practical enough, have had business experience enough, to know that the system which we are now enjoying is conducted on a reasonable basis, that we can not inaugurate any plan under which the Government can get its work done and let the people enjoy this benefit for a less rate of compensation than $600 per annum.

Mr. Lacey—How does the gentleman know that without trying it? I propose that the Department should try it. This system of carrying free delivery has never been tried.

Mr. Thompson—I have seen the abomination, curse, and disgrace of the star-route system in my district, and it has been a menace and shame upon this great Government to have such carriers as are imposed upon our people under this star-route system. I am opposed, Mr. Chairman, to this Government bartering its [illegible] (Loud applause.)

The mail carrier is required to travel regularly in all kinds of weather, rain or shine, cold or hot, and take with him a supply of stamps and receive money for money orders, postal notes, etc., and for this responsibility and labor he is entitled to reasonable remuneration, as well as for the use of his horse and wagon which he is required to furnish.

I am as much in favor of retrenchment and reform as any member of this House, but why begin here to use the pruning knife? Let us see. The city carriers are paid from $900 to $1,200 per annum, and yet not one word is said by these economical gentlemen about placing them under the contract system, or putting that service up to the lowest bidder.

Mr. Chairman, I cannot see how or why the bill is here at all. As a rule, when any such sweeping and important new project or change in existing law is brought before Congress there is a large popular demand behind it, or at least the semblance of such a demand. That is the case with the other large measures now before Congress—Chinese exclusion, the isthmian canal, the Cuban question, the Philippine question, the Pacific cable, ship subsidy, oleomargarine, protection of the President, war-revenue-tax repeal, reclamation of arid lands, territorial statehood, and so forth. But this bill appears to have no popular backing whatever. There is no excuse or occasion for it at all.

If the advocates of the bill could prove that the contemplated change would be an improvement on the present system that would justify the bill, even if the country had not asked for it. But they have not proved it. They have not made out their case at all. I have listened to all their arguments in vain. They do not carry conviction. There is nothing in them. All that the champions of the bill can say is that they fear the salary system may become too expensive, and that they hope the contract system may prove more economical. Their opinions, Mr. Chairman, are worth no more than the opinions of those who differ with them. In fact, they are not worth as much, because it can be proven that the present system is a great success, and the presumption is always against a change.

As it is conducted now the rural free mail delivery has the respect and the hearty approval of the whole community. The farmers and others living in and near the small villages and sparsely settled towns are delighted with it. It has ushered in a new era in the rural districts, and has relieved them, in a great measure, of their worst disadvantage and drawback—isolation. For ages past and until the advent of this beneficent system the great trouble with the farmers and their families has been that they could not keep up with the times. They absolutely could not spare the time from their work to go every day to the postoffice, perhaps 2, 3, 4, or 5 miles distant; and, even if there were time, there would be other obstacles—bad roads, storms, sickness, etc. Herein the city people always have had until now the advantage. No matter how busy they might be, or how sick, or how bad the weather, the city people have had their mail delivered regularly once or twice or oftener every day; and now, thanks to this new rural mail delivery, the farmers at last have begun to get theirs, too, with equal regularity.

The farmers are entitled to just as much consideration and just as good service as those who live in cities. They are the bone and sinew of this country. Put a wall around your cities and shut out the country, and grass will soon grow in the middle of the streets. Tear down your cities, and the country will soon build new ones. The country is the pure fountain that sends forth our best men and women. The men who wield the greatest influence upon this floor are the men who come from the humble country homes. Our great men do not come from the gilded palaces where lives of ease, comfort, and elegance are spent, nor from the cities where vice, dissipation, and immorality reign supreme, but from the industrious, Christian, country homes that are uncontaminated by evil influences.

Thus, if a preference is to be shown, we owe it to the country and not to the city. The farmers, the honest tillers of the soil, have been overlooked and neglected, and I can not support a measure that will in any way deprive them of the service they are entitled to.

If let alone, this system will grow and the time will soon come when this great, progressive Government will be sending the mail every day to the door of every farmer in the land. I will not be content until the people whom I represent shall enjoy this blessing. The daily rural free-mail delivery not only disseminates knowledge and enlightens the homes of the people, but it also encourages the movement for better public roads. One of the prerequisites for obtaining a general rural delivery is good roads. To establish and build good roads through the agricultural districts of this country will increase the value of our lands and make our farmers more progressive, more contented, and more happy.

We must encourage our people to live on their farms by making farm life more comfortable by placing daily papers in their homes. The newspaper is perhaps the most potent factor in popular education today. It molds public sentiment; it inspires higher ideas and nobler purposes, and creates in the breast of the country boy an ambition to move out on broader lines. Send the papers, daily and weekly, to the homes of our people; encourage them to read and to keep in touch with our Government in its progress and you will increase the wealth of the nation. The records show that Congress has dealt out its appropriations with a lavish hand to the great railroad corporations to induce them to carry the mails quickly between the great cities.

The last Congress appropriated $175,000 to one railroad for carrying the mails a few hours quicker between New York and New Orleans. No thought of economy was suggested by any member here then. But now the people in the country are to have some benefits, and we hear the cry "Economy, economy!" I can not give my support to any measure tending to destroy, impair, or impede this present rural-delivery system. I hope soon to be able to get it established all over my district and to send the mail to the door of every farmer in it each day. Then will the prophetic words be realized:

> Lo, the winter is past; the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds has come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land.

(Applause).

The rural carriers have been a part and parcel of the communities they have served, men known personally to all the families along their routes, respected and trusted by them all. They have been appointed in the same way and on the same footing as other employes in the mail service, the same as city carriers and railway mail clerks and postoffice clerks. They have been selected on their merits, and have served on their merits. The people whom they serve so well have come to regard them with affection as personal friends. Many instances have been reported where the farmers have voluntarily shown their appreciation by befriending and assisting the carriers in various ways, by giving them coffee and food and feeding their horses, by giving them shelter and warmth in a time of tempest, by breaking the roads ahead of them in snowstorms, etc. Fancy them doing such things for a contractor, especially when that contractor is represented by a stupid hired menial.

Now, without complaints against these carriers, without any popular wish or demand for a change, without any good reason whatever for it, we are suddenly asked to upset this splendid system which has been so satisfactory and beneficial to our rural communities, and to substitute for it the old, discredited, corrupt star route contract system, letting out these rural mail routes to the lowest bidder on contract. For heaven's sake, why? Will the contractors do the work any better? They can not possibly do so. They will probably not do it as well. Will they do it any cheaper? No; it can not be done any cheaper, if done well, than it is done now. If there should be now and then bids for contracts much lower than the salaries now paid, that would simply be presumptive evidence that the bid was not in good faith, or that it meant inferior service.

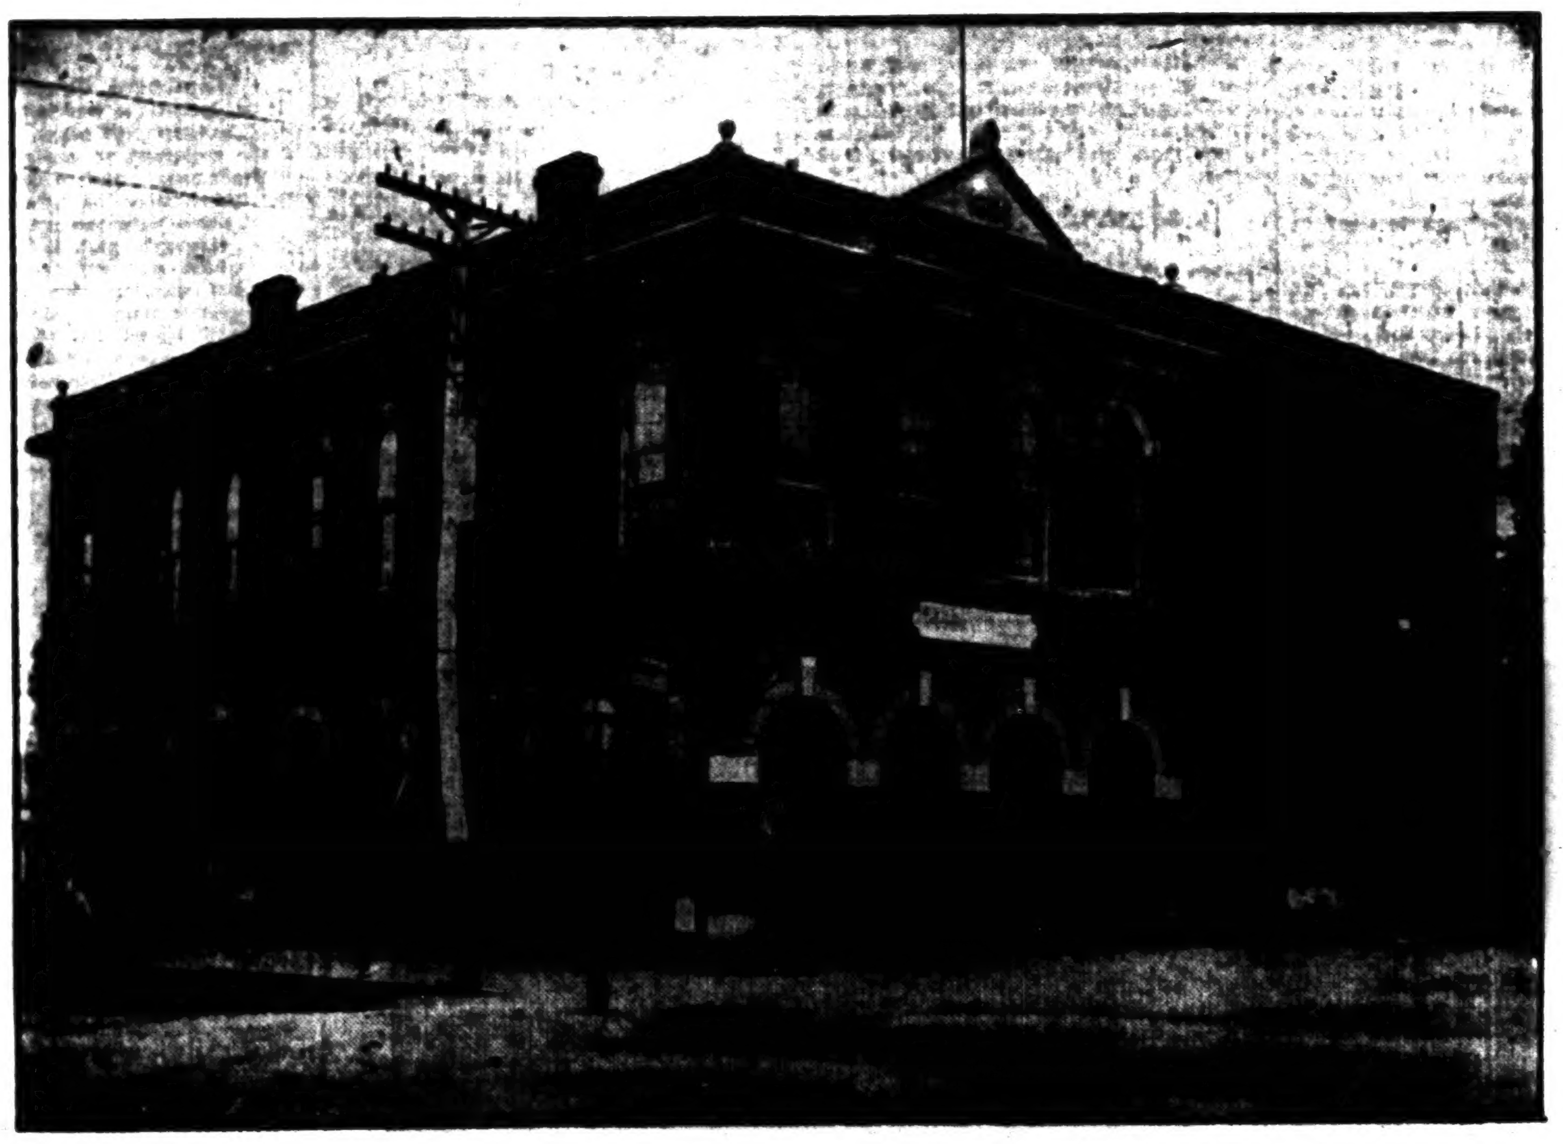
It is true that the bill professes to prevent collusion, straw bids, subletting, and other well known scandals of the contract system; but the scandals would creep in all the same. They always do. They did in the old star-route times as we all know. They do to-day. There is any quantity of subletting in star routes to ignorant, illiterate, irresponsible persons in our Southern States right now, and I have no doubt it is the same way up North and out West. The farmers have no love or sympathy for the star-route contract system. They want the present system continued, and it ought to be continued. It is successful, universally liked, and will soon pay for itself, as the similar system now pays for itself in the cities.

The more this supposed extension of the contract system is contemplated the more repulsive it appears. The records show that it has always been a failure as between the government and individuals. It has uniformly led to inferior work, popular dissatisfaction, dishonesty, and scandal. The government has no right—no moral right, at least—to rely on the contract system for executing the public work, except in cases where no other is possible—as, for example, in the carrying of immense quantities of mail for all distance, by rail and on sea or in barren sections of the country and wildernesses of vast extent where scarcely anybody resides. If the government should put the rural delivery under the contract system, why should it not put the postmasters and the postoffice clerks and the War Department and the Mint and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing under the contract system? Very likely it could find persons willing to bid very low for the privilege of coining the government's gold and silver and printing its currency.

The whole atmosphere surrounding the contract system is one of duplicity, jealousy, and dishonesty. There is a great tendency in it even to the awarding of contracts as well as in the execution thereof. Bribery and collusion are inseparable from it. Inferior and dishonest work is its natural and inevitable offspring.

On the contrary, the whole tendency of the present system is toward better and better public service and steady progress upward morally and socially and intellectually in the whole community. To upset this system just as it has got well started, and to substitute for it the malodorous contract system, which the farmers distrust and do not want, would be, to put it in the mildest possible term, an inequitable folly.

By all means, defeat this proposition. Let well enough alone. (Applause.)



HOME OF THE BANK OF TUSKEGEE.

THAT SOUTHERN TRIP.

An Account of It from an Alabama Editor Who is a Lady.

The Citronelle Times gave the most interesting account of the visit of the Northern congressmen to Tuskegee with Col. Thompson in the spring of 1902.

The occasion and personnel of the Thompson party was, for us, a rare enjoyment. The pleasure was born a twin. To the North we are allied by education and kindred. With grandfather and father in at the founding with Abraham Lincoln in Central Illinois, we were born into the Republican party. These visitors were in very truth our people. The shifting fortunes of life have made for us a home in the South. It is here we earn our daily bread. Perhaps no truer instance in vindication of the magnanimity of the Southern people could be made than in their succour and friendship to us, a Northern woman, publishing a Republican paper in Southern Alabama. We owe to our adopted State a proud devotion and an abiding loyalty.

We know the North and the negro question from the Northern standpoint. We know it from the standpoint of the South and realize that it is only needful for the peoples of the two sections to personally experience each other and the education, training and environment of each to forever banish all misunderstanding and wrong judgment. We would stretch out the one hand to the North and the other to the South, and drawing them together lock the clasped hands in lasting friendship.

"He builded better than he knew," "Charlie Thompson"—he opened the homes of the South and bade his Northern guests step over the sacred thresholds to become one of the household.

More than the negro question caught their attention. The wonderful resources commercially fastened to the interest of these visiting congressmen. It has been their training to utilize everything, waste nothing. The prodigal possibilities of the State of Alabama impressed them—they will carry the news and the end is not yet.

It is interesting to recall the instance of this clever idea of this very clever man, Mr. Thompson, which has cleft as a two-edged sword the prejudgment of both Northern and Southern men. With no deeper or subtler meaning, however so accused, than a vindication of his people and an enlightenment to his friends, Hon. Charles W. Thompson extended the invitation to visit his home. There upon the old plantation to observe the darkey in the lowest type, also in his highest type, as represented in Booker T. Washington's Normal Institute and draw their own conclusions, as to condition, development and treatment of the black man.

A chance courtesy extended to a member of his family drew Mr. Thompson upon his arrival in Washington to the Hamilton Hotel. There he found himself associated almost exclusively with Republican politicians. He admits that he went there imbued with all the prejudices of a radically Southern man against the Yankee. He further acknowledges that to his surprise, he soon found these Yankees were human; later that they were endowed with an intelligence and loyalty like unto his own countrymen. The bias of birth and education straightened, and a friendship grew, which we venture, is today but the more staunch and true for the journey they have just taken together. Naturally the race question, to which Mr. Thompson denies existence, came up for discussion between these fellow boarders of the Hamilton Hotel. To prove his point that the Southern man is not only doing a great work toward the development of the negroes, but that he better understands their nature, and is their fast friend, Mr. Thompson invited these guests to come with him down to the Southland and observing draw their own conclusions.

By the way, the Northern man was not the only one who was to be informed and stripped of his unfairness in this journey into "the enemy's country." The idea did not set well with Mr. Thompson's colleagues in Congress—such a thing had not been done before. Doubt was expressed. It was even questioned if the inborn courtesy of the Southern gentlemen would be quite sufficient to guarantee the welcome for these guests which Mr. Thompson bespoke. More than one threatening letter was received by him respecting this proposed visit of the Yankees. One might say they came, they saw, he conquered, for not in all history is there an incident parallel or a welcome heartier recorded.

Tuskegee.

Tuskegee is stretched at arm's length along a ridge about four miles, which marks the division between the white and the famous "black belt" of Alabama. In this "black belt" is massed the dense negro population of the State. From three to one, aye, even ten to one, is the proportion of their black numbers to the whites. Within this strip of territory which reaches quite across the State, is found the richest soil and the best cotton-producing lands of the State, and naturally here are massed the best producers of this staple—the negroes. The contour of this land is such, lying low and but poorly supplied with water, that only the negroes can safely live within the boundary of the "black belt." Crested above these, upon the ridge, lies Tuskegee, which even to this day retains much of the aristocratic bearing of the ante-bellum days. The suggestion is both colonial and of the plantation. There is no crowding or hustling together of the dwellings, but amply surrounded by fertile acres, they are detached and far separated the one from the other. The Thompson home is one of the purest types of the old colonial remaining in Alabama. Here the mother gathers about her two generations, children and their children, so that when the family proper is seated in their hospitable dining hall, they number just two dozen and one. It was to this home and stately halls, broad and spacious, sheltering galleries supported by Corinthian columns that Mr. Thompson brought his Northern guests.

The Plantation.

The ride to the plantation was delightful; climbing up and down the winding way there was ever just before the occupants of the carriage in which we rode, a picture which might easily have been reproduced from ante bellum days.

As a dwelling place the house at the old plantation has long since been abandoned, but the negro quarters are still occupied. Assembled at the old time barbecue were two thousand people and fully one-third of them were blacks. Here without other restraint than devotion to the owner of the plantation "Marse Charlie," they were free to follow the bent of their own inclination. They were the field hands and their families representing the humblest and simplest of their people. There was nothing boisterous or disorderly noted and their abandonment to song and dance never out ran their good behavior. At the end of the day when the speeches were over and from the farm wagon, which had constituted the platform from which the impromptu speeches had been made, Mr. Thompson rose to speak the closing word, there was enacted for the observing one of the most telling incidents of the entire trip. To the rear of the wagon the negroes had crowded with respectful attention to the speakers, but when "Marse Charlie" rose to address them, they surged forward and lifted to him their burnished faces, beaming with the pride and devotion which only the black man feels for the white man, with the sun's blistering arrows stinging their faces and the sweat streaming from their blackened brows, they were unmindful of everything save that "Marse Charlie" was speaking, and to them, "complimentin' and sayin' as how he wus sure proud of us how we had 'haved mighty well fer de fin' freen's of 'is."

One hundred negroes plowing in the cotton were brought to the edge of the field for the visitors' inspection and the overseer of giant height was not wanting in any particular, save the accused cruelty to complete the interesting chapter from the story of the past. The pits of live coals bridged by huge gridirons of wood whereon were stretched the carcasses of beeves, sheep, goats, pigs and kids, were a novelty to these Northern folk, familiar with the country fair and the clam bake, but never before, the barbecue. Simmering over the coals the juicy meats were basted with the "dip" of vinegar and seasoning, and gave forth odors most savory and appetizing. At the tables where the multitude was fed a spare rib became knife, fork and spoon, and the most savory dish of all was a potpourri made of the various meats—a ladle of this on a hunk of bread—well, you should just taste it! as the darkey said of possum and sweet potato—"It's jes' too good ter talk about." That the charm and tact which only a Southern woman can [illegible] for her guests should not be lacking, Mrs. W. W. Thompson became our attentive hostess and initiated us into these fine points of the barbecue. The negroes sang, danced and the pupils of the little district school joined in [illegible] for the edification of the guests.

No point of vantage or disadvantage on the negro question was left untouched. When in the afternoon the impromptu speeches of the Congressmen were made they straightway acknowledged themselves surprised, somewhat confounded and deeply impressed.

At Dr. Massey's school for girls Tuesday evening a musical of unusual excellence was listened to by the visiting party. The Congressman responded to the call for "a speech" and at 9:30 p. m. the company repaired to the Thompson house where a reception by Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Thompson was well under way. We have made earlier mention of this delightful home. Now was offered an opportunity to present Tuskegee people to the distinguished guests.

With memories of two days crowding pleasure, delightful hospitality, new impressions and revised opinions the Thompson party left Tuskegee Tuesday night, accepting the invitation of the Mayor and Council of Mobile to visit the Alabama Coast City. The special car was a scene of animated friends eager to exchange views and opinions, each willing to vouch that "the half had not been told" of the truly remarkable people and the wonderfully resourceful State of Alabama.

Our Host

Our toast is first to Hon. Charles W. Thompson, our host, a Southern gentleman, brave in peril, constant in tribulation, temperate in wrath, and in all the changes of fortune, loyal and loving. May this clever plan of his prove the entering wedge cleaving to the heart all misunderstanding and prejudice. May his State acknowledging the gratitude bestow upon him yet greater and higher honors.

The Eminent Guests.

Chosen of the people from the eastern rock girth and pine-mast State of Maine to the western and granary State of Iowa, from the dairy lands of Wisconsin and the fertile Mohawk Valley, staunch and true as the sentinel pines, loyal as the rocks are fixed, rich in sentiments as the grain is golden, tender to succor as the milk to nourish, broad in thought as the fields they have tilled—men heroes, brothers! Of differing conditions of birth, education and environment, united in an opposing political creed, you pay your first visit to the Southland. May the interest awakened, the enthusiasm kindled, unlock the treasury of Northern capital. May investments reveal for mutual benefit the Aladin resources of Alabama and may your power and wisdom be united to that of your Southern brothers in lifting the burden of a race once in bondage.

A Northern View.

The Successful American says of the trip:

On Monday, May 19, Colonel Thompson, in company with Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw, a number of leading Republican members of Congress from New England and Western States, and W. J. Hartford, representing Successful American, started from Washington for a week's tour in Alabama. The excursion was "personally conducted" by Colonel Thompson, who, at his own expense, showed "his friends the enemy" just what the negro is doing in Macon County, in order to pave the way for a more general view of the race problem as it presents itself to the Southern people.

"When I came to Washington," said Colonel Thompson, "I was prejudiced against Northerners, because they represented, as I viewed it, policies which were inimical to the interests and aspirations of the South. They were harping always on the old tune, negro oppression and disenfranchisement. It had always seemed to me that the Republican party did not want to understand the relative positions of the whites and negroes, and that the Representatives in Congress from Western and Northern States were unfair in their treatment of Southern questions.

"It happened that I made my domicile at an hotel in which there are twenty other Congressmen—all Republicans. A few months' acquaintance with these men convinced me that they were gentlemen and patriots, men who would not allow their devotion to the whole country to be affected by merely sectional influence."

Colonel Thompson further said to our associate of the Writers' Press Association:

"The time has come, and now is, in the onward march of this great Nation when all sectional strife and prejudice, which can but hinder our growth and progress, should forever be eradicated and forgotten. We are not only a reunited people, but a great people—too great and too triumphant to be influenced by anything except a desire which should be uppermost in the heart of every true American to exert the earnest of our American greatness and manhood. It has been truly said that 'America was only another name for opportunity,' and with united effort, looking honestly to the best interest of all our people, we can continue to lead all the nations of the world.

"General Hancock said 'the tariff question was a local question and not a political question.' There are other local questions, and I believe Alabama, like Massachusetts, has the right to settle and control her own local affairs. If she has violated the Constitution of the United States, the courts is the place to test those questions, and no State or people will bow more cheerfully to the edicts of the courts than Alabama.

"A revival at this time of a bitter discussion of the race question would unsettle, in a large degree, the business interests of the country, and would have a tendency to destroy all the friendly feeling and good-fellowship which has come to us under the glorious American leadership of the almost universally beloved William McKinley, an American of Americans.

"For these reasons, I have cherished the hope that Mr. Crumpacker could be induced by the conservative, thinking men at the head of affairs to let his resolution to investigate the suffrage question slumber and die, and, looking to this end, I have invited a number of the leading and influential members of Congress from the New England and Western States, who have no practical knowledge of the real conditions in the South, to take a trip with me through Alabama, a State which has recently adopted a new Constitution regulating the suffrage, and mix and mingle with a people who have striven and struggled under difficulties and hardships since Lee gave his sword to Grant at Appomattox. There is naturally some prejudice still lurking in the hearts of of the people both North and South of Mason and Dixon's line, and it can only be eradicated by personal and friendly intercourse, and I am constrained to believe that calm, dispassionate and mature reflection will eventually cause all good and patriotic American fellow citizens to adopt the views of those who believe with Lincoln, with Grant, with McKinley and with Roosevelt, that we are in very truth a nation of brothers, and that brotherly love should be the impelling force in all mutual transactions. I do not hesitate to claim that the grandest, most beautiful, most touching event in the world's history since the Gospel story was told, is the reconciliation of the North and the South and the reunion of these United States of America. Hence, I invited the distinguished men, to whom the Nation's welfare and destiny have been largely committed, to go with me to the Land of Dixie and talk with people they met in a friendly and [illegible] way, as man to man and friend to friend. The whole world is akin, and each section of this great country an integral part of the whole."

RESIDENCE OF HON. CHARLES W. THOMPSON.

CHRISTIAN, PATRIOT, STATESMAN.

Charles Winston Thompson, of Macon County, An Alabamian Who Has Made Himself.

(Written for the Christmas Edition of The Montgomery Advertiser by D. W. McIver.)

The people of Macon county are delighted with the appointments of their distinguished son and fellow citizen, Hon. Charles Winston Thompson, to the Banking and Currency Committee of the present Congress. His friends and neighbors in the community where he has spent his busy and successful life are not surprised at his rapid advancement, for they know his real worth and ability. They are pleased to know that his associates in Congress have come at the beginning of his second term to realize his capacity, and to know that he can be of great importance on such an important committee to his State and to his country. He has been a business man all his life, and in late years has made banking and commercial law a study, and he knows it all like the ordinary [illegible] knows his A B C's. His colleagues from Alabama have been kind enough to endorse him and the Democrats and Republicans from other States have long since learned that he is broad and statesman like in his views, and in all that he will do in the House Committee will [illegible] for the sole advancement and best interests of all the country. He is also on the Committee on War Claims, where he has been very active and has helped a great many of his immediate constituents in getting what was their just and honest dues, but have slumbered all these years for the want of proper energy in looking after and reviving them. Macon county is indeed proud of her son who has accomplished so much for himself in so short a time.

A Short Resume of His Life.

Charles Winston Thompson was born in Macon county just before the beginning of the Civil War, and during the four years of that deadly conflict, in which his father, Wm. P. Thompson, was following the flag of the Confederacy as a member of the 45th Alabama Regiment, Charles W., his then only son, lived with his mother on a small farm until after the close of the war, when his father returned home and begun the battle of life anew with nothing but a small farm upon which his wife and son had resided while he was fighting for his country.

His father was a man of indomitable energy, good judgment, and exceptional business qualifications, and was enabled by close application and strict economy to give his son a fair education in the common schools of Macon county, and at the Park High School in Tuskegee.

After the son had completed his course in the Park High School, his desire for business and his early development along business lines placed him at an early age in his father's mercantile business in Tuskegee, where he soon demonstrated his aptness for business.

Begins Business.

At the early age of 18 he was given control of his father's mercantile business in Tuskegee, which he conducted with unusual tact and remarkable success, and which increased from year to year under his sagacious management until it grew to be one of the largest mercantile firms in East Alabama; he having been admitted as a partner under the firm name of W. P. Thompson & Son.

After his father's death in 1891 he closed out the mercantile business, and organized the Bank of Tuskegee. In the organization of this bank he had associated with him Dr. John Massey, president of the Alabama Conference Female College, Dr. Wm. Gautier, Judge W. H. Hurt, T. C. and A. H. Drakeford, who was chosen as cashier. Colonel Thompson was unanimously chosen as president, which position he now occupies. The Bank of Tuskegee under his management has in ten years doubled its original capital stock and paid the stockholders an annual dividend of 8 per cent. from the earnings of the bank, and is considered today one of the most successful banking institutions in East Alabama. Having been raised on the farm, Colonel Thompson has always been interested in farming, and has invested a large portion of the fortune he has accumulated in farm lands in Macon county. He is one of the largest land owners in his county, and owns a large plantation in Montgomery county. During the last ten years he has erected in the town of Tuskegee eight or ten handsome brick buildings including the Bank of Tuskegee, and now has in course of construction a block of brick buildings in Tuskegee, with a large modern hotel above. He has always had great faith in the future of Birmingham and North Alabama, and has large and extensive investments there. His success as a business man has been phenomenal, and almost unparalleled considering his opportunities.

In Politics.

In 1886 while busily engaged in mercantile and farming pursuits, he was appointed county superintendent of education of Macon county, which position he filled with credit and ability. When Governor Johnston was elected Governor of Alabama, he selected Colonel Thompson as a member of his staff, and in 1896 he was unanimously chosen to represent the Twenty-sixth senatorial district, comprised of the counties of Bullock and Macon in the Senate of Alabama. Colonel Thompson rather preferred to devote his whole time to his chosen profession in the financial world, but being a patriotic and ambitious young man yielded to the demands of his State, and consented to serve as a State senator. Notwithstanding the fact that he was inexperienced in legislative matters he at once took a high stand in the Senate of Alabama with some of the leading men of the State, and his work and influence as a wise, safe, aggressive but conservative legislator was felt throughout the whole State of Alabama. Before his term expired as State Senator, and at the suggestion of some of his ardent admirers he entered the race for Congress to represent the Fifth District of Alabama, and the people who read the papers are familiar with the Brewer and Thompson contest, which was one of the most memorable in the history of the whole State. In that campaign Colonel Thompson developed remarkable ability as a stump speaker, notwithstanding the fact he had never made a public speech until he entered that campaign. After having been nominated he was opposed by Mr. Milstead, the Republican candidate, who spent thousands of dollars to defeat him, and yet the strong hold he had upon the people by his campaign in the primary between himself and Colonel Brewer enabled him to defeat Mr. Milstead by nearly ten thousand majority.

In the second campaign he was opposed by Colonel Brewer and won the nomination in a district primary by an overwhelming majority.

Shortly after the Kolb and Jones contest for Governor, when the white people of Alabama were divided, he was chosen as Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of Macon county, and under his wise and successful administration, he succeeded in bringing back into the folds of the Democracy of Macon county those Democrats who had gone off with the Populist party, and today the white people of Macon stand in a solid phalanx under the Democratic banner. In the memorable race between Johnston and Morgan, Colonel Thompson led the fight for Governor Johnston in Macon county; and, notwithstanding Senator Morgan's great popularity and strong hold upon the people of that county, Macon was one of two counties in the whole State that went for Johnston. Colonel Thompson has always been an aggressive, determined and unrelenting fighter in politics, and has never been defeated in any of his political undertakings.

When he went to Congress there was not a single rural free delivery route in operation in the Fifth District, and Colonel Thompson at once decided that he could render the most substantial service to his constituents by devoting his time to the establishment of that splendid system in his district. His first speech in Congress was in favor of the establishment of the rural free delivery on a high and respectable [illegible] and was considered one of the ablest speeches made in Congress on that subject. Through his untiring efforts he has succeeded in having established in the Fifth District during his first term of two years fifty-two routes, which deliver mail to over [illegible] people in his district [illegible] and distribute to the carriers $31,200 annually for carrying the mail. He has revived a great many old southern war claims and has some prospect of securing the payment of some of these claims.

During his first term in Congress he was placed upon the War Claims Committee, which is one of the most important in the House, and recognizing his business ability he has been honored by the newly elected Democratic leader, the Hon. John Sharp Williams, by a worthy promotion in committee assignments, and has been assigned to the Banking and Currency Committee in addition to his place on the War Claims Committee. This is rather unusual for a second term member, but only demonstrates his wonderful ability.

Displays Tact.

During his first term, when Crumpacker of Indiana was agitating his resolution to investigate the election laws of the South with the view of cutting down Southern representation in Congress, and when a very bitter feeling existed between the members of the North and the South, Colonel Thompson, displaying the same tact in politics that he had always shown in business, conceived the unique idea of inviting Mr. Crumpacker and a large number of the leading Northern representatives in Congress to come with him to Alabama as his guests and at his expense, in a special car to investigate and study for themselves the race question and the propriety and wisdom of the elimination from the franchise of Alabama the ignorant negro vote. This plan was at once endorsed by the leading newspapers throughout the United States, including not only the Democratic papers of the South, but the bitter partisan Republican papers of the North. It was conceded by all to have originated in the brain of a statesman, who by his wonderful grasp of affairs could take hold of a great national question and handle it successfully in a plain, practical business manner. The Northern Representatives were cordially and gladly received by every citizen of Alabama, save one or two, and were elegantly and gloriously entertained by the citizens of Tuskegee, Mobile, Montgomery and Birmingham, in Alabama, by the citizens of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Asheville, N. C. Special reporters were sent by the leading papers of the North to telegraph everything that transpired on the trip, and it was published in nearly every paper in the United States. The result was far-reaching, and everyone acknowledged that Charlie Thompson builded better than he knew. The Northern Representatives who came with him, and who visited the negro on his native heath, and who were permitted to see for themselves the liberal treatment by the white people of Alabama of the negro in their school privileges, their church and all other privileges, returned to their respective States in the North with changed ideas of the Southern people; and the praises of Alabama and her splendid citizenship composed of her chivalrous men and her noble women have been sung throughout the North and East by those representatives since their return. Hon. Charles E. Littlefield, from far away Maine, a State which has produced perhaps more bitter Republicans against the South than any other State in the Union, has been proclaiming in his public addresses throughout the North and East the kind treatment and friendly feeling of the white people in Alabama towards the negro, and vindicating the course adopted by the late Constitutional Convention in eliminating from the politics of Alabama the corrupt and corrupting and ignorant voters.

Having begun his early life under the most adverse circumstances and having struggled amid the hardships with which many of the good people of the South were surrounded after the Civil War, Colonel Thompson naturally feels an abiding interest and a tender sympathy for those people in his State who are now struggling like he struggled in his boyhood days. His varied business experiences, having been throughout his entire life in close touch with the farmer, the merchant, the bankers, and in recent years with the leading and representative citizens and law-makers of the United States, he is peculiarly fitted to represent the people of Alabama, the State of his birth, in the national halls of Congress.

Progressive and Charitable.

Colonel Thompson has been liberal, generous, open-hearted, and patriotic. He is enterprising and aggressive, and always takes a leading part in every enterprise with which he is connected. Notwithstanding the fact he has accumulated a great fortune, he never turned a deaf ear to an appeal for charity, has always contributed liberally to the support of the ministry, as well as for the support of education. He contributed a thousand dollars to the endowment fund of the Alabama Conference Female College, which is located at his home town, Tuskegee, and has been liberal on many occasions by handsome contributions to other educational institutions in the State. He was invited last year by the President and faculty of Howard College to deliver the commencement address, and his address on that occasion has been spoken of in the highest terms by everyone who heard it, or who has read it. He is a man of brains, a man of energy, aggressive, public spirited, but wise and conservative, and there is in store for him a great and glorious future.

His Statesmanship.

Since Colonel Thompson has been in Congress he has developed the true metal that was in him. His active and expansive mind has been at work, and by study and thought and close observation he has come up to the full measure of the position and like Cleveland grew upon the country, he has grown upon his State and his own people and they have come to expect even more of him and they will not be disappointed, for who knows but that the wee sma' voice that is now calling out to him may grow larger and larger until it shall reach every hill and valley and hamlet in the State and like an avalanche sweep him into the Governor's chair. Stranger things have happened and it is my honest judgment that the State will be gainer, for he is doing himself an injustice if he remains in Congress, in a financial way, and there will be no more honors for him in being Governor, but it is worthy any man's ambition to want to serve the State and his people in the highest position within their gift and he may yet yield to their importunities. Time alone will tell. I know very well that he is not giving it a thought now, but is giving his whole time and energy as to how he shall best serve and advance the interest of his people first and then of the whole country.

A Recent Utterance.

In the great Howard College speech this summer he said, speaking of a subject near and dear to every mother and father and every citizen of Alabama:

As In Education.

"When we consider that we are just entering upon an era of the great prosperity for the South she has ever enjoyed, and that over a quarter of a century has been spent by the grandest, the bravest, the most patient, the most chivalrous people on the face of the earth in building up and reclaiming what was once the fairest and most prosperous section of our continent, we must acknowledge that the continuation of all development and progress in Alabama lies in the enlargement of our system of education. Education is like water; to fructify it must descend. Pour out floods at the base of society, and only at the base, and it will saturate, stagnate and destroy. Pour it out on the summit and it will quietly and constantly percolate and descend, germinating every seed, feeding every root, until over the whole area, from summit to base, will spring the tender blade and then the ear, and then the full corn in the ear.

"The most important work is our educational system now, in Alabama, the first, the highest, the holiest duty now pressing upon every Alabamian is to build up and endow our universities and colleges. This is our summit. This is the Ararat on which the ark that bears all that is left of our old civilization must rest from the storms and waves of revolution, and send out the life and strength and hope of a better civilization, which shall make our great State bloom and blossom like a rose.

"One of the great lessons learned by the party of Northern Congressmen on their tour through Alabama last year was that God in His infinite wisdom had endowed the white man with those superior qualities which fit him for governing and forever controlling the affairs of our State and Nation.

Mind is a Race Question.

"The question of mind is largely a race question. As the meaning of every idea is its history, so the character of every race is its history, and the same may be said of every man. The mind of the greatest man in any race determines the character of that race. Hampden may, in a sense, be said to have created modern England, and Jefferson, in a similar sense, and with equal propriety, may be said to have created our own nation. The Anglo-Saxon race, of which these two men are probably the highest types, is now the dominant race, not only on this continent, but on all continents. The Anglo-Saxon mind is today the master of all international events.

"When the Anglo-Saxon came to this country he left behind him, so far as he himself was concerned, feudalism and all things pertaining to caste, including what was then known in England, and is still known, as 'Divine right.' When he enunciated his political faith, he placed in the forefront of his declaration, as self-evident truths, that all men are created equal, and that they are endowed with certain inalienable rights. The American mind has been built up on these principles. The freedom of speech and of the press and the freedom of religion are the results of those principles, and all our progress has been the result of that freedom. For, where the mind is free, progress is inevitable.

"America's triumphs have not been triumphs of war so much as triumphs of popular intelligence. Her greatest work, of course, is of her national constitution; but the inevitable genius of her sons, freed from all the fetters of caste and State religions and false religions, and national prejudices, has worked a national revolution in the world, only less important than the political revolution which made her independent of Great Britain.

"Jefferson said: 'Almighty God hath created the mind free.' In speaking of the mind, then, I speak of that which alone of all God's works is free. Perhaps it is on this account that the men who founded this government of ours were also careful to urge upon the people the necessity of general education.

"Madison said: 'A popular government without popular information, or the means of acquiring it, is but a prologue to a farce or a tragedy,' or perhaps both. Knowledge will forever govern ignorance, and people who mean to be their own governors must arm themselves with the power which knowledge gives. These are significant words. To arm ourselves with knowledge then is our first duty, not only to ourselves, but to our families and our country. Yet knowledge is not all which goes to make the mind; will and faith and hope and charity are its indispensable accessories. Without these, power which is born of knowledge may be useless, or it may be used far more to the detriment than to the benefit of mankind.

The Only Education.

"A Christian education is the only education worth having. It is the only safe education. The Christian mind is the only sound mind.

"Oliver Wendell Holmes, on being asked when the education of a child should begin, replied, '200 years before it is born.' I believe the education of every child should begin 1,900 years before it is born. I believe that the education of every Christian child did begin more than 1,900 years ago, for when the wise men were guarding their flocks in the East, they heard a voice from heaven which brought them glad tidings of great joy and announced that a child was born, a Savior of the world, those tidings come to us now and no life or character is complete without faith in that Savior who came to seek and to save.

"For the glory of our State and nation does not consist so much in our mineral wealth, our great cities, our broad acres of agriculture, as it does in the manhood of our men, and the womanhood of our women.

A SPLENDID ADDRESS.

Before the Literary Societies or Howard College.

Last summer, Col. Thompson spoke at the commencement of Howard College to the literary societies. His subject was "The Ark of the Covenant of American Ideas" and should be read by every citizen of the State. He said in addition to the extract quoted above:

Mr. President, Young Gentlemen of Howard College, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I greet you with sincere pleasure on this auspicious occasion and with hearty appreciation of the cordial invitation which has brought me here. I approach this great institution of learning with the reverence which should be shown to age when accompanied with the honor and renown of noble deeds. Established in 1833, Howard College has now reached its "three score years and ten." At this ripe old age, its vigor is quickened, its perspective broadened, its usefulness enlarged. With the mellowness and ripe experience of seventy years, it retains the power and strength of youth, and in its hopeful horizon, looks out upon a future that gladdens the hearts of its loyal devotees everywhere. Looking into the faces of this strong faculty, where gentleness and kindness are blended with courage and progressiveness; receiving the attention of these two literary societies, under whose special auspices I proudly appear before you, and which are composed of you handsome and ambitious young gentlemen of the student body, who inherit all the advantages and culture that have gone before, and are the very embodiment of all that is suggestive of the great and good in a glorious future; cheered by the presence of such a multitude of visitors from far and near—fair women and brave men, patriots all and lovers of learning—I can but thank you for the pleasure and opportunity of addressing so distinguished an assemblage. I approach my task, however, with fear and trembling. To measure fully up to it is more than I can expect and all that I could hope. Paraphrasing the remark of a cynical Frenchman that, "The more I see of men, the better I like dogs," I can truthfully say, the more I see of people from the North, the East, the West, and even other parts of the South—though most worthy is the American citizen from every section, especially Virginia—the better I like the people of Alabama, and the more proud am I to be one of them. I intend no reflection whatever on Virginia, doctor. That is a good State to come from.

Howard's Great Record.

The first thought in my mind today is the great record of this institution. In Mr. Willis G. Clark's History of Education in Alabama, published by the Bureau of Education at Washington, 1889, I find it said that the moral and intellectual impression which this institution has made during its career, commencing in 1842, has not been surpassed by that of any other institution of learning in Alabama; that of all its students not one has proved to be a bad man, but so far as known all of them have had useful and successful careers. An institution with such a record is an honor to the State and the nation [illegible] Anglo-Saxon [illegible] among its former pupils were [illegible] Freeman and J. [illegible] and more [illegible] of South [illegible] refinement and knowledge [illegible] blended with strong [illegible] character which cannot fail to impress itself upon the lives and characters of the young men who are [illegible] to attend this college [illegible] the most natural thing in the world that Howard College should have a [illegible] record in the [illegible] building.

Fame of Dr. Curry.

Dr. Curry's fame is world wide. It is a fame based upon the high qualities of head and heart which make for true patriotism and true manhood; a fame in which is reflected the best thought of the South, which is the best thought of our entire country. Through good business ability and through a happy marriage with a very wealthy lady, Dr. Curry became rich in this world's goods, but instead of devoting his life to pleasure and ease, he devoted it through all of its long years to the same sort of good work that characterized his efforts at Howard College, and that has characterized the efforts of his successors.

As manager of the Peabody and the Slater funds he once wrote an appeal in behalf of the Southern educational institutions, in which his lofty ideals and profound patriotism were unconsciously exhibited in a striking manner.

"The South," said he, "in her past history, from the administration of Washington to that of Harrison, inclusive, has been conservative. Often have her statesmen and her public opinion interposed to preserve the ancient landmarks and prevent departures from the constitution and the precedents of the fathers. She has been as much maligned as misunderstood. If she remains true to herself, she can save representative government and our civil and religious liberties. Her freedom, present and prospective, from heterogenous and foreign elements, and her consciousness of the perils of the race question, should make her again, as often before, the great conservative, controlling, saving section of the country."

Loyalty to the principles of the reformation, the revolution, and the republic was the chief characteristics of Dr. Curry and of all those who succeeded him in the management of the college, and on dissemination and preservation of those high principles, religious and political, our culture no less than our history, as a nation, depend. Would that we had hundreds of colleges like Howard in our land! For here, and wherever we find the spirit of the Baptist dominating as a religious and ethical force, we find men and women thoroughly imbued with the sacred doctrines on which rest our political and religious liberties.

Source of the Topic.

A Baptist minister, Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., native of North Carolina, famous pulpit orator of New York, now the proud possessor of an old-fashioned southern home in Virginia, where he mainly devotes his talents to literature, has written a strong and attractive book upon the reconstruction period and given it the title of "The Leopard's Spots." In it is related an incident of an opulent deacon, representing a wealthy Boston church, who comes to North Carolina and offers to a Baptist preacher, who is there receiving $800 a year, a salary of $8,000 to serve the church in Boston. The tarheel preacher declares that his proper life's work is in North Carolina and declines with thanks. An argument follows in which the relations of the sections are reviewed. The deacon argues that the preacher is throwing his life away; the preacher nobly defends his work and his section. Said he:

"The South has been voiceless in these later years. But when these children we are rearing down here grow, rocked in their cradles of poverty, nurtured in their fierce struggle to save the life of a mighty race, they will find speech, and their songs will fill the world with pathos and power.

"[illegible] exalted your great cities. Against the possible day when a flood of foreign anarchy threatens the foundations of the republic and [illegible] laugh at the faith of your fathers and [illegible] wealth [illegible] we will preserve the South [illegible]

"Believe me, [illegible] American Ideals rests [illegible] on the Appalachian range [illegible] When your metropolitan [illegible] knock at the doors of [illegible] from these poverty stricken [illegible] those old fashioned ideals [illegible] the fierce athletic [illegible] daughters [illegible] will find a new birth." (The Leopard's Spots, p. 24.)

Wonderful, True Thought.

It is indeed a wonderful thought, and yet I believe it to be true that "the ark of the covenant of American ideals rests on the Appalachian range of the South." The association of great conservative moral ideas with the conception of pyramidic strength and industrial possibilities which at once arises in the mind from the contemplation of this section of the South is truly sublime, and the more we dwell upon this thought the more we are impressed with the belief that it is, under divine Providence, the mission of the people who dwell in the region east of the Mississippi river and south of the Ohio and the Potomac to give to the world the highest expression of civilization ever achieved by man. Behold its wonderful adaptability alike to agriculture, to mining, to manufacturing and to commerce. In shape it is a gently sloping pyramid, whose fertile base is washed by wide rolling rivers and the sea, and whose culminating dome rises in the very center of the district. From its swelling crown a thousand rivulets leap forth to meet the sunshine, forming the tangled silvery hair of the Grandfather mountain, and here, too, the Watauga and Kanawha burst out in full panoply, like the goddess from the forehead of Jupiter. Down its verdant sides sweep fountains, streams and floods, whose aggregate mechanical power exceeds that of 10,000,000 horses. Look at your maps. With the exception of the St. John's river, the streams flow from their sources to their mouths throughout the greater part of their courses in nearly straight lines from a common center, radiating like the spokes of a wheel.

These numerous rivers are available, not only as convenient channels of internal navigation, but also to supply mechanical power for manufacturing, to irrigate and fertilize our fields, and to facilitate the construction of railways and common roads.

Rivers are always the friends of the civil engineer, and already the courses of those to which I have referred have to a vast extent been utilized as railway routes, and every year we see new thoroughfares projected along their banks. And I venture the opinion that within the next fifty years the internal navigation system and the railway system of this section marching onward hand in hand, will have made every valley the track of a double highway—one by water, the other by rail, operating as mutual checks upon freight rates and preventing those extortions and adverse discriminations which have so often harassed and hampered our industries in the past. The South will then possess the most perfect transportation in the whole world. The points of competition between railway and water lines will be so numerous and approach so near to the center of the system that the railway companies must necessarily lose the power which they have heretofore possessed of controlling internal commerce. So much may be fairly said respecting our commercial possibilities.

Our Inexhaustible Resources.

Our supply of good raw materials is inexhaustible. Our forests are the wonder of our times, and when these shall have been diminished in extent and value there will still remain the most remarkable resources of coal and iron in the world. There will still remain our limestone, dolomite, phosphate and gypsum beds, our marl and peat beds, our mountains of marble and granite, our great fisheries, and above all our great staples, cotton, sugar, corn, rice and tobacco. We can, moreover, produce nearly every variety of cereals, fruits, edible plants and healing herbs, and can raise cheaply and abundantly all the useful domestic animals. The silkworm thrives upon our coasts, and birds and flowers gladden all our plains and mountain slopes everywhere. We have petroleum, salt, and fountains that supply the place of drugs. Our southern latitude gives us the most equable division of time into hours of daylight and hours of darkness, and renders our labor efficient beyond that of any other country when skillfully applied. Our climate, with a wide extended range, is everywhere salubrious, and our ports all favorably situated for external trade.

Such is our southern pyramid, not like frowning Cheops, built by mortal hands, but fresh from the workshop of the Almighty with the blooming flush of youthful life spread over it all. Here stands immortal beauty, in all her infinite variety. Upon her august head the earliest rays of morning light that greets this Western world are shed, and there, too, the lingering glories of the parting day are gathered, and reflected down upon her teeming bosom far below, where, in contrast with the doleful music of the Sphinx and anthems of new life and hope are wafted back from farm and factory, from forge and mill—steam-fleeting chariot, rushing keel, and lightning-whispered thought.

Such, I say, is our southern pyramid, such is the Appalachian range of the South, on which rests the Ark of the Covenant of American Ideals. Is it not, indeed, a fit abiding place for the spirit of Washington and the fathers of the republic? Why should not the South, if true to her traditions, religious and political, remain the "great conservative, controlling, saving section of the country?"

The Inspiration of Howard.

My dear countrymen, remembering our history and guarding well our future by means of the strictest adherence to those sound principles of which Howard College has furnished, both among its faculty and among its alumni, so many fine exponents, let us move forward to embrace our opportunities. Let us think and act. The right of free inquiry and private judgment, born of the Reformation and secured by the Revolution, is ours by inheritance. Let us, therefore, I say, think and act. The time is propitious. Look around you and behold what great things God hath done among you in these late years. This new temple of learning, richly endowed, and standing in the midst of industrial institutions that have made Alabama famous throughout the world—these form elements of moral and material well-being which bid us hope and strive as never before. [illegible]

A Singula[illegible]

[illegible]

"I hope you will pardon [illegible] just here I want to impress upon every alumnus of this institution [illegible] of endowing it well [illegible] make you this proposition [illegible] as an endowment fund [illegible] year from this date.

Those Visiting Congressmen.

"The manner in which [illegible] may be extended [illegible] incident within my own [illegible] nected with my [illegible] party with a number of [illegible] from other States last [illegible] State we visited Tuskegee, Mobile, Montgomery and Birmingham. My object in inviting these gentlemen to make the tour was to afford them an opportunity of witnessing for themselves the marvelous progress of the South and the general good order and good feeling which prevail here. It was a typical company of northern men, headed by the Secretary of the Treasury and including many other [illegible] members of Congress [illegible] of our affairs. These gentlemen were greatly impressed with what they saw [illegible] all within a few miles of Birmingham, they were amazed at [illegible] must speedily pass from Pennsylvania to Alabama [illegible] who came with me [illegible] turned with new ideas [illegible] especially with new ideas [illegible] half had not been told."

What is the Ark?

"If the Ark of the Covenant of American Ideals is [illegible] what then is that ark?" In what does it [illegible] has partly [illegible] the answer by saying that it consists [illegible] freedom from heterogeneous and foreign elements among our people. But that is [illegible] It consists less in the absence of foreign blood in our veins than in the absence of foreign ideas in our public opinion. It consists in those sentiments, feelings and principles of thought and action which we call our race. Plato well expressed the idea in his great work called the Republic. "It is in the field of education," said he, "that our guardians should erect their guardhouse; for there it is that foreign opinions creep in by stealth, professing to do no mischief. And indeed, they do none except that gradually gaining a lodgement they quietly insinuate themselves into manners and customs, from which they go forward in greater force and make their way into compacts. And from compacts they go on to attack laws and constitutions, displaying the utmost impudence, until they end by overthrowing everything, both in public and in private."

It was in the field of education, indeed, that our guardians who framed the constitution of Alabama did erect their guardhouse. In the convention which met at Huntsville on the 5th of July, 1819, they adopted as a part of the fundamental law of Alabama, this provision:

"Schools, and the means of education, shall forever be encouraged in this State, and the General Assembly shall take measures to preserve from unnecessary waste or damage such lands as are, or hereafter may be, granted by the United States for the use of schools within each township in this State, and apply the funds which may be raised from such grants in strict conformity with such grant."

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

The oldest inhabitant does not remember such a long continued spell of cold weather as we have had this winter. For the last three months it has been cold all the time, nice sunshiny days, but a cold wind always blowing, and every night, or nearly so, a thick white frost. And then comes a fall of snow, from four inches in Clanton to ten inches in the eastern part of the county, and none at all in Elmore and Autauga. It is my belief that a cold winter and a good fall of snow presages a good crop year, and I hope that belief is well founded.

I was up in Thorsby last Friday night, and hearing there was a dance in progress thought I would like to have a look. I found them upstairs in the furniture factory, with three musicians discouraing sweet music, and about a dozen couples tripping the light fantastic toe. Mr. P. E. Phelin was floor manager and right well performed his part, and a Virginia reel was prettily executed under his direction. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves and a pleasant time was passed.

Prof. J. E. Fowler, of Dickson, Tenn., gave a very interesting educational lecture at the academy Tuesday night. He delighted his audience from start to finish. We shall be glad to see the Professor again.

Will Lucas, who was convicted of manslaughter at the Spring Term, 1903, of the Circuit Court, and who appealed to the Supreme Court, the sentence was affirmed and he was taken to Speigners last Saturday.

Died, last Thursday night, Doris, the sweet little girl of Mr. and Mrs W. D. Spigener. The little one was apparently well, but was taken with congestion and in a few hours it passed from earth to heaven. Our sympathies are with the bereaved parents.

NOTICE

I hereby request that a representative from Mars Hill, Centre Hill, Oak Grove, Ocampo, South Calera and Concord schools meet at my house on Feb 16, 1904, at one o'clock, for the purpose of discussing lines for School Districts, as provided for by the last Legislature.

Clanton, Ala., Feb 2, 1904

Editor Banner—Dear Sir: You will please give me space in your columns for a few lines to the public. Gentlemen, I wrote a few lines to the Union of January 21, which I wrote in a hurry. I misspelled some of the words, and he (Edler) misquoted some of them, one at least. He made a perfect game of it. I want to say that I never saw in my life when an editor treated one of his patrons with such contempt. I wrote another one the next week and he refused or failed to publish it. I spoke to Mr. Edler about the way he treated me about my letter, and he said he went to a man for advice, but refused to give the name of his advisor. So I reckon his advisor advised him to not publish my last letter, or he might not have had time, he being so busy calling the Republicans black and tans.

Respectfully,
MOSES A. KILGORE.

THORSBY.

MAIN STREET, THORSBY

Seven years ago, or less, the traveler speeding on his way from Birmingham to Montgomery, soon after leaving Jemison, would occasionally be told by a fellow passenger posted on the topography of the country, "We are now, sir, half way between Alabama's commercial metropolis, Birmingham, and the State capital, Montgomery. This is the highest point on the road between Mobile and Birmingham, some eight hundred feet above sea level." Looking out of the window he would have seen a rather desolate looking stretch of country, considered by the home people too poor for anything. Barren fields covered with weeds, dotted here and there by stunted scrub oak, presenting [illegible] appearance, would probably turn to his companion with the remark "Not a very inviting prospect."

To day, soon after leaving Jemison, the traveler begins to notice well-built, handsome two story residences peeping out between the foliage, or standing in the midst of smiling orchards of peach, plum and other fruit trees, while stretching far on either hand the sight is gladdened by extensive vineyards, and in a few minutes the train comes to a stand at the pretty little depot of the thriving town of Thorsby.

"Yes, sir, this is the noted colony of Thorsby, founded about seven years ago by the Concordia Land & Improvement Association, and settled mostly by select immigrants from the Northwest, seeking a more favorable climate in which to make a living." This town and all these buildings you have been noticing from the car window have been built in the last seven years. On the right hand is the main street of the town and you will find in that business like looking row of storehouses all the necessaries and many of the luxuries of life. Thorsby merchants boast of their well assorted and varied stocks of merchandise. That large two story building with the tower is the school house of the Protestant Methodists, and that large building on the opposite side of the track is the dormitory of the school. Across from there you can catch a glimpse of the town public school.

Just across from the depot is the Cosmopolitan hotel, where you will find excellent accomodation if you are going to make a stop here, and that building opposite is the home of the Thorsby Savings Bank, an institution of which Thorsby is proud. Away up the track is the Thorsby Sash and Door factory, and the big building next to it is a furniture factory. There are two wineries in the community and a very excellent wine is made here.

The town has a good system of water works, and a volunteer fire brigade looks after the safety of the place. There are two places of worship—the Baptist church and the Lutheran church, and you will not find more elegant and comfortable homes anywhere in the State than those that are here.

The vim and energy of the citizens have in six years pushed Thorsby well towards the front rank of Alabama towns, and Chilton county is proud of this, the youngest of her daughters.

London is said to have given up the cakewalk for more stately dances. This is sad news. It must have been enjoyable to see the peers and peeresses of the realm frisking about in that way.

The Cincinnati girl who married a poor young man who thought her poor also and then informed him after marriage that she is worth $500,000 seems to be of the good old American variety of girl who was not in the market for counts of no account.

Official statistics printed in Havana show that in 1902 the death rate was 21.99 per thousand, a fair lower rate than in the days of General Weyler. The methods of cleansing and of sanitation enforced by the Americans after the Spanish war worked wonders for the healthfulness of the city.

One of the most attractive features of Country Life in America is the account given by Mr. Harlan P. Kelsey of how he first introduced the use of galax leaves, which have now displaced the ivy so largely in florists' designs. He first, when a boy, saw the galax at Highlands, N. C., and admired its beauty. In 1890 it occurred to him that these brilliant wax leaves might have a commercial value, and last year there were no less than seventy million of them shipped from the mountains of North and South Carolina.

Writing in the Independent on the law's delay, Justice David J. Brewer says: "It was assured by one in a position to know that in a single state one of the great railroad corporations by appealing every judgment against it to the supreme court of the state—that court having a crowded docket—made enough in compromising the judgments against it in the trial courts to pay the entire cost of its legal department." Justice Brewer has devoted considerable thought to this subject, and while few will, we think, be inclined to agree with him concerning the denial of the right of appeal in criminal cases, it cannot be [illegible] must be made with respect to the delays in all cases.

Most of the preaching and advice current today counselling folk to live a simpler life and banish worry seem to fall on receptive ground—on ground that has been made ready to a considerable extent by the increased cost of living, we may say, comments the Boston Transcript. Because it is a universally accepted fact that it does cost more to live now than it did a few years back and that in many cases incomes have not grown proportionately. Consequently some plan had to be devised for maintaining a balance between expenditures and receipts in order that the mental and moral poise might remain undisturbed. So the not unwholesome doctrine of "going without" and the precepts for living a life after one's own ideas and possibilities rather than according to the pace set by neighbors, are being accepted in places where, five years back, they would not even have got a hearing.

Highland Dress.

Of course kilts were in profusion at the Edinburgh levee, says Onlooker, but no one looked better as a Highland gentleman than Lord Lovat, in a black velvet doublet and red Fraser tartan, while the Mackintosh, always famous for his kilts and the wearing thereof, made a good second. The feature, however, of the levee, was the passing of the Duke of Atholl, the Earl of Dunmore, Sir Robert Moncrieffe and thirteen other gentleman of the famous Highlanders in the picturesque uniform of the clan of dark Murray tartan, with pink and white hose and a badge of green juniper in their bonnets. It was the expres desire of his majesty that these gentlemen should pass simultaneously, and the resulting picture was quite unique.

Misuse of the Flag.

There have been an extraordinary number of bills introduced at the present session of congress to prevent the desecration of the American flag. There is a growing conviction that the flag is cheapened and its influence and inspiration marred by being used to emphasize and ornament an advertisement or a trade mark. It is proposed to make such misuse of the national emblem a penal offense. The flag should be common; it should be in evidence everywhere, but wherever it is seen it should stand only for the national authority and glory.—Philadelphia Press.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

JANUARY 27TH.

The senate proceedings included a speech by Mr. Simmons, of North Carolina in support of the Panama canal treaty and the passage of a number of bills and resolutions. Mr. Simmons was the first democratic senator to speak in favor of the measure.

The senate committee on foreign relations rescinded its former action in proposing amendments to the Panama canal treaty and will recommend that the senate should act on the treaty as it stands without change.

The senate adopted the resolution authorizing the secretary of state to open negotiations with Great Britain for a revision of the joint regulations for protection of the fur seals of Alaska and also the resolution authorizing the committee on privileges and elections to enter upon an investigation into the charges against Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah.

The following bills passed: Extending to the mints at Denver, San Francisco and New Orleans the privilege of coining more coins.

Authorizing the erection of a bronze statue of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow on government land in Washington.

Mr. Hardwick, democrat, Georgia, made an extended address on the race problem.

Mr. Hemenway, Indiana, from the committee on appropriations, reported the resolution requesting the secretary of war for a statement showing the amount of money disbursed by the department in promotion of flying machine experiments, whether under direction of Professor S. P. Langley or otherwise, with a recommendation by the committee that it be laid on the table.

The house went into committee of the whole with Mr. Tawney, of Minnesota, in the chair, and resumed consideration of the urgent deficiency bill.

JANUARY 28TH.

The time of the senate was devoted to debate rather than to set speeches or the attitude of the United States toward the Panama revolution. There was a variation, however, in that the discussion also had reference to the right of the president to withhold such information called for by the senate.

The immediate foundation of the controversy was the democratic caucus resolution calling upon the president to state whether he had yet supplied all the papers in the archives bearing upon the Panama affair.

The joint resolution authorizing the acceptance from citizens of France of a reproduction of D'Angers' bust of Washington was passed.

When Mr. Morgan's resolution calling for Minister Buchanan's letters concerning the amendment to the canal treaty was laid before the senate, Mr. Morgan withdrew it, saying he had been informed that it was the intention of the president to send the document to the senate in executive session.

The house for an hour was entranced by a speech made by Mr. J. Adam Bede, a republican member from Minnesota, who made his maiden go, and won his spurs. His remarks were replete with wit and humor as well as serious thought. Now and then, for purposes of illustration, he would tell a story whose recital greatly amused his audience.

He received the closest attention of republicans and democrats alike, and drew laughter and applause first from one side and then from the other side of the house, and at times both sides of the chamber joined in vigorous applause.

There also was a discussion on finance by Mr. Hill, of Connecticut, and Mr. Williams, of Mississippi, besides references to the Panama canal and the race problem in the south.

When the house convened Mr. Vanduzer, of Nevada, sought to secure consideration of a resolution calling on the secretary of war for information as to what articles manufactured for the department are made by convict labor. Objection to its consideration on the ground that it was not a privileged resolution was sustained. By agreement debate on the urgent deficiency bill was extended.

The house then went into committee of the whole with Mr. Tawney, of Minnesota, in the chair, and resumed consideration of the urgent deficiency bill.

JANUARY 29.

The senate adopted the resolution introduced by Mr. Culberson for the democratic caucus which calls on the president to state all facts bearing on the controversy of Panama.

The vote on the resolution was unanimous, but there was a roll call on the amendments suggested by Mr. Cullom for the republican side of the chamber, calling for the information only in case the president should consider it not incompatible with the public interest to supply it. This amendment was adopted.

Mr. Tillman introduced a resolution asking for more specific information from the secretary of the treasury concerning the nomination of W. D. Crum as collector of customs for the port of Charleston, S. C., than was contained in the letter from the secretary.

The house considered whether members of congress are entitled to be paid mileage a second time. The controversy arose on an item in the urgent deficiency bill providing for two payments of mileage for senators and members of the house on account of the extra session which merged into the regular session.

A point of order was raised by Mr. Maddox, democrat, of Georgia, against the payment of mileage a second time.

The interest manifested in the question was shown by the fact that there were few empty seats on either side of the chamber when the mileage item was reported.

An adjournment was taken before a conclusion was reached.

The house went into committee of the whole with Mr. Tawney, of Minnesota, in the chair, and resumed consideration of the urgent deficiency bill. The reading of the bill under the five-minute rule was begun when Mr. Hill, of Connecticut, made a point of order against the paragraph appropriating $[illegible] for the expenses of the commission on international exchange, appointed to bring about a fixed relationship between gold standard and silver-using countries. He contended that it was new legislation.

The point of order was sustained and the item was struck out.

Bancroft Fired on Colombians.

The United States gunboat Bancroft reports the attitude of the San Blas Indians at Caledonia bay to be not only unfriendly, but decidedly aggressive.

Last Tuesday men from one of the Bancroft's boats purchased a few cocoanuts from the Indians and paid more than full value for them. That night when it was dark twenty canoes were seen approaching the Bancroft.

The gunboat turned her searchlights on the canoes and it was revealed [illegible] Indians as could crowd in, probably 200 in all. All the men were armed with bows and arrows, guns and other weapons. Their faces were besmeared with paint. Their intentions were hostile. They hoped to surprise the ship.

The commander of the Bancroft ordered the gunboat cleared for action. A quick-firing Colt gun was placed and orders were given the gunners of this piece to keep a ceaseless fire all around the canoes. As soon as the Indians heard this rain of bullets, they immediately began to retreat toward shore.

The gunners were given express orders not to fire at the Indians, so the bullets cut the air and churned the water all around them.

Cattle Quarantine.

An epidemic of splenetic, or Texas fever, is raging throughout the cattle herds of the south. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson says, and quarantine lines for beef are drawn across the continent from the Pacific to the Atlantic. The "deadline" begins at the northern boundary of California, and follows the border line of the state to the south and extends eastward along the southern confines of Arizona and New Mexico, north and southern Colorado, and east to the Mississippi river, and north to the northern boundary of Tennessee, and then follows the northern line of Virginia to Maryland and the ocean. After February 1st no cattle will be allowed to cross the line from the south except under stringent conditions, laid down by the bureau of animal industry.

Our Trade With Russia.

Exports from the United States to Russia in the year just ended aggregated practically $20,000,000. This is more than double the amount of our exports to Russia in 1901, the year in which duties were advanced upon merchandise from the United States entering Russia, and is also double the average for many years preceding that date.

The chief growth in our exports to Russia, in the two years in question, has been in cotton, agricultural implements, copper and its manufactures, and naval stores. In iron and steel there has been a slight reduction. Raw cotton has more than tripled.

ILLINOIS MONUMENT

At Vicksburg Will Be a Circular Temple.

The state of Illinois soon will erect a monument in the national military park at Vicksburg, Miss., in honor of the 35,000 Illinois soldiers and sailors who participated in the siege of that city from March 29th to July 4th, 1863. The structure, expected to cost $150,000, will be in the shape of a rotunda or circular temple. It is to be constructed of white marble or granite and ornamented with bronze. Bronze tablets on the exterior of the temple will have bas reliefs representing Richard Yates, the war governor of Illinois, presenting Ulysses S. Grant his commission as colonel of the Twenty-first Illinois, the gunboats running the batteries at Vicksburg on the night of April 16, 1863, and the surrender of Vicksburg by General Pemberton.

Around the exterior of the dome will be engraved the sentiment from Lincoln's second inaugural: "With malice toward none, with charity for all," and the last phrase in General Grant's farewell order to the army:

"Let us have peace."

The circumference of the interior will bear panels of size and number sufficient to contain the names of all the Illinois soldiers who took part in the siege.

A Chicago Minister's Test.

"To prove that large numbers of cartridges are not dangerous in case of fire, I am willing to station myself in a room where one million cartridges are stored in wooden boxes, and let a fire be started and rage there."

The Rev. William K. McKibben, who was superintendent of a cartridge company before he entered the ministry, has made this offer to a committee appointed by the fire department to determine whether magazines of ammunition in stores will endanger firemen while the buildings are burning.

Acquitted.

The jury in the case against Henry Rodgers, at Madison, Miss., returned a verdict of not guilty of the charge of murder after deliberating less than two hours.

This is the culmination of litigation covering nearly three years in which a former trial resulted in a sentence of life imprisonment. The cost of this litigation has almost bankrupted Neshoba county.

Although Governor Vardaman, of Mississippi, is anti-negro, one of his first acts was to pardon one who was unjustly imprisoned. George Brown, the negro referred to, was sent to the penitentiary for six months and fined $250 for "riding off a horse without felonious intent." That seems to be a new crime in the state of Mississippi, and the judge of the court who did the sentencing signed the petition for the pardon.

Hon. W. D. Bullard, member of the Mississippi house, has taken the lead in the movement to induce the legislature to accept the donation of Beauvoir, the old home of Jefferson Davis, made by the Mississippi division of the United Sons of Confederate Veterans. The home was purchased by the organization at a cost of $[illegible],000.

The reception was a stag affair and there were no speeches.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE ENTITLED "VITAL UNION WITH CHRIST."

The Rev. C. D. Case, Ph. D., Tells How the Son of God Within Us Becomes the Source of Divine Companionship, and of Power For Achievement.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The Rev. C. D. Case, Ph. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church, Montclair, N. J., recently preached the following brilliant sermon, which is entitled "Vital Union With Christ." The text was chosen from Galatians ii:20: "I am crucified with Christ and I no longer live, but Christ liveth in me, and the life which I now live I live by faith in the Son of God who loved me and gave Himself to die for me." Dr. Case said:

The highest conception of the Christian life which this generation seems to have accepted is to be found in the words "Follow Me," as uttered by Christ. It is thoroughly Biblical. Jesus says to Philip at the beginning of His ministry, "Follow Me." He tells the four on the seashore, "Come ye after Me." He commands the taxgatherer in his office, "Follow Me." He presents the same standard to the rich young man who loved his money better than life, "Follow Me." Now the resurrection has passed and what shall be the new conception of the disciples of the new life? It is still the same. [illegible] to the same desires [illegible] the same [illegible] "Follow thou Me."

The grand and infinitely sublime way of looking at the Christian life [illegible]. He was the true Christian who believed what the church told him and accepted its appointed means of grace. But now, after these centuries, Christendom has [illegible] the very centre and core of the Christian life. Mr. Henry Richards, on the Congo, [illegible] the natives the words of Christ: "Give to him that asketh of thee, and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again," and then proceeds to practice them, with the result that the natives first beg and then return and then ask for the way of life. Mr. W. T. Stead, while in his London jail, wonders what he shall write to the girl whom he has succeeded in placing in a Christian home, and at last, by a flash of insight, writes her, "Be a Christ." Charles M. Sheldon presents as the ideal of every life, to act as Christ would act if He were here in our place.

What is the trouble with this conception? This, that it represents the statics but not the dynamics of the Christian life. [illegible] but does not tell us how we shall become like our ideal. Kant thought that the same man who of deliberate choice accepted evil could with the same deliberate choice and by simple will accept good when he saw it. This is a fine philosophy, but a poor religion. It does not explain Gough, McAuley, Hadley. It gives us the ideal, but not the power to embody the ideal.

Listen to this statement and see if you can find a better one to express this idea of following Christ: "Religion cannot be said to have made a bad choice in pitching upon this man as the ideal representative and guide of humanity; nor even now would it be easy even for an unbeliever to find a better translation of the rule of virtue from the abstract into the concrete than to endeavor so to live that Christ could approve of our life." And yet it was no less a person than J. S. Mill, an unbeliever, who wrote this.

The text of the morning presents the needed complementary conception. He who is presented as an objective ideal becomes a subjective presence and power. He who said, "As Thou hast sent Me into the world, even so have I sent them into the world," says with the "Go," the "Lo, I am with you all the days."

The Bible represents this union in different ways. Now it is that of the foundation and the superstructure signifying support; now the body and head, meaning direction; now of the husband and wife, representing union; now of the vine and branch, signifying the communication of life; and finally, most tenderly and mysteriously, of the relation between the Father and Son. In whatever way it is spoken of it is evidently an essential phase of the Christian life.

Dr. A. J. Gordon once saw what he called a parable of nature up in a part of New England where he spent his summer holidays. It was an example of natural grafting. Two little saplings grew up side by side. Through the action of the wind the bark of each became wounded, the sap began to mingle and at last on a still day they were firmly compacted. Then the stronger began to absorb the life of the weaker. It grew larger and larger while the other grew smaller and smaller; then began to wither and decline till finally it dropped away and disappeared. Now, there are two trunks at the bottom and only one at the top. Death has taken away the one; life has triumphed in the other. The illustration thus given by Dr. Gordon only fails in not giving sufficient importance to the words "I live" of the text. The religious life is not self-immolation, but self-realization. It is not absorption, but amplification.

Without thinking for the present of the unvarying condition of this life, "crucifixion with Christ," or the motive of such living, "Christ loved us and died for us," or the means of such living, "faith in the Son of God," let us think more at length of the single sublime thought, our union with Christ and its bearings upon the different phases of the Christian life. This we must for the present emphasize if we are to have a pure evangelical Christianity which shall move the world.

First, note that Christ within us is the source of true divine companionship.

The appearance of Christ after the resurrection had two definite purposes. The first was to convince the disciples that Christ was truly alive, or, in other words, to connect the past Christ with the present Christ. The angels had assured them that Jesus would go into Galilee there to meet them. As soon as faith had accepted these words of both Christ and the angels the disciples would leave Jerusalem; but this did not take place until after a week.

The second definite object of Christ's appearances was to teach the disciples the spiritual nature of the kingdom, or, in other words, to connect the present Christ with the future Christ. Among such teachings are the words, "Follow Me," spoken to the seven in Galilee; the promise to all, "Lo, I am with you all the days," and the command that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but "wait for the promise of the Father, which, He said, ye have heard of Me." A glance back into the fourteenth chapter of John shows what this promise was. The sixteenth verse says: "I will pray the Father and He shall give you another comforter, that He may abide with you forever." But of whose presence is the Spirit the embodiment? The eighteenth verse says: "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you." Then the twentieth assures the disciples: "At that day ye shall know that I am in My Father, and ye in Me and I in you." Thus Christ's objective companionship becomes a subjective fellowship.

How closely can two people, heart to heart, be together? There is always the veil of the flesh between. All we can do is to interpret looks, words, and sometimes our judgment is wrong even on those nearest to us. We all walk a solitary way. Few reach that beautiful companionship represented by Browning in "By the Fireside:"

"When, if I but think deep enough,
You are wont to answer, prompt as rhyme;
And you, too, find without rebuff
Response your soul seeks many a time,
Piercing its fine flesh stuff."

Then it is that Christ Himself comes closer than breathing, nearer than hands or feet, comes into the innermost recesses of our nature for sympathy and communion with the human heart.

Christ within us is also the source of power. Christ does not give us power by making mere machines of us. We are the clay in the potter's hands, but we are something more. God does not want us to be slaves, but freemen; not subjects, but sons.

An equally false way of considering the help that we receive from God is that we are to do all that we can with our natures or redeemed nature, and then let God do the rest. [illegible] the longer we live, the stronger we are and the less we need God's cooperation. Every time God helps us, we are [illegible] a man or woman, and the stronger [illegible] the more independent, and [illegible] The end of it all would [illegible] of God. Surely [illegible]

[illegible] looking upon our [illegible] His presence with [illegible] us energy [illegible] but he entre[illegible] [illegible] with Augustine [illegible] but God works the [illegible] work, but God works the [illegible]

Philippians 2:12, 13 has often been misunderstood. It says, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure." This does not mean to work into, otherwise [illegible] expression what God puts within, as it literally means, [illegible] achieve [illegible] salvation is an achievement as well as [illegible] the same time a gift. Nor does it [illegible] that we are to work [illegible] Paul [illegible] the possibility of working out our [illegible] rests upon the fact that God is [illegible] so that we can will and do of His good pleasure. Thus will is not an instrument which we can turn from side to side, [illegible] which when necessary [illegible] ourselves acting. That which God does, [illegible] not our act unless God works through [illegible] wills.

The possibilities of such an empowered life are divine. We need not be perfectionists and still believe as we ought [illegible] Christ's grace is sufficient for us. Many pretend to believe it, and do not live it. They worry, they fret, they give up. [illegible] most of us seem to think that the [illegible] Christian life is to rise and fall like the tides. Yet Paul says: "There hath no temptation befallen you but such as is common to man, but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

Christ within also makes all living sacred. We have made sad divisions among objects. We have divided space into holy and unholy, and declared that God can be found only in certain places, which have been consecrated. We have divided time into holy and secular, declaring that we would serve God on the Sabbath and conduct our business and amusements as [illegible] pleased the rest of the week. We have divided money into two parts. We have [illegible] that the giving of the one-tenth, or one-twentieth to God, justified us in the [illegible] of unlimited freedom in the disposal of the rest. We have divided up persons and put a certain class of people—priests, ministers, missionaries, upon pedestals, declaring that the standard of conduct for them differed from the standard for others, and that their work was especially religious.

All wrong. All space is holy, and the green grass may be the chancel carpet and the trees the massive pillars and the sky the dome, if below there is a heart worshiping in spirit and truth. All time is sacred. The Monday should be as much devoted to God's service as Sunday, and the office and the store should be as much a place of devotion as the closet. All money is sacred, and the money spent upon the necessaries of life, upon business and pleasure should be spent with equal conscientiousness as upon the church. All Christians have Christ within them, and they should seek to objectify His life. There is nothing we need to-day quite as much as the Christianization of the secular life.

Then at last, the Christ within is the source of final holiness. Christ [illegible] is to present us holy and unblamable and irreprovable in His sight.

Sin does two things for us, separates us from God and distorts our nature. When we are forgiven we are restored to the divine fellowship. But what about the effects of sin upon our nature? See the scars upon the tree and what the life of the tree does for it. Listen to what [illegible] says: "I am perplexed until Christ be formed within you." As Christ had His Bethlehem, His Nazareth, His Olivet, so does He again in His reincarnation [illegible] His Bethlehem, His Nazareth, His Olivet. Who knows why one plant grows into a geranium, and the other into the rose? The type is something more than the ideal presented for the imitation of the plant. It is an informing life.

I think it was the last thing that A. S. Gumbart wrote for the Examiner: "Among the Dutch the rose was sometimes cultivated by planting an inferior rose close to a rose of superior variety. The rose of inferior quality was carefully watched and anthers removed to avoid self-pollenization; the object being that it should be pollenized by the superior rose. Gradually the rose thus treated took upon itself the characteristics of the superior life of its companion." So, our lives are pollenized as it were by His righteousness.

Thus Christ within becomes to us the source of divine companionship, of power for achievement, of the exaltation of conduct, of final holiness. He who would seek to plant hope within his own heart of [illegible] prospects, should begin and never cease exercising faith in Him who loved us and gave Himself to die for us.

Overcoming Worry.

I believe a little true philosophy [illegible] reasoning can go a great way in overcoming worry. I do not mean a deep and mysterious philosophy, but a simple application of common facts which appeal to intelligence. These facts are such as the following: "Worry can do no good. [illegible] cannot change things by being anxious. Worry unfits you for hard work, and work is the surest power to make things right. It is foolish to waste time and strength in doing that which leaves one less time and less strength."

But there is also a sweeter philosophy which deals with principles of right and balance. It shows how things go wrong sometimes, that the final result may be more beautiful. It suggests how by wisdom greater than ours wrongs, apparent wrongs, are finally righted. It brings history and personal experience in array against a merely transient view of life, and proves how in the large and long run the man who waits and trusts is the man who succeeds.—Floyd Tomkins.

Each Day's Living.

Our life may be food to us, or [illegible] we have it so, be poison, but one or other it must be. Whichever and whatever it is, beyond all doubt, it is terribly real. So merely as the day and night alternately follow one another, every day when it passes into darkness [illegible] with it its own tale of the results [illegible] it has silently wrought in us each [illegible] for evil or for good. The day of dull duty and devotion leaves it richer [illegible] found us, richer sometimes, and commonly, in our circumstances [illegible] always in ourselves.

A Year of Freedom.

Let the new year be a year of freedom from sin, a year of service, a year of [illegible] in God, and it will be a happy year [illegible] first to last. It may be the hardest [illegible] we have known, but it will be the [illegible] —J. M. Buckley, D. D.

London is said to have given up the sidewalk for more stately dances. This is sad news. It must have been enjoyable to see the peers and peeresses of the realm frisking about in that way.

The Cincinnati girl who married a poor young man who thought her poor also and then informed him after marriage that she is worth $500,000 seems to be of the good old American variety of girl who was not in the market for counts of no account.

Official statistics printed in Havana show that in 1902 the death rate was 21.99 per thousand, a fair lower rate than in the days of General Weyler. The methods of cleansing and of sanitation enforced by the Americans after the Spanish war worked wonders for the healthfulness of the city.

One of the most attractive features of Country Life in America is the account given by Mr. Harlan P. Kelsey of how he first introduced the use of galax leaves, which have now displaced the ivy so largely in florists' designs. He first, when a boy, saw the galax at Highlands, N. C., and admired its beauty. In 1850 it occurred to him that these brilliant wax leaves might have a commercial value, and last year there were no less than seventy million of them shipped from the mountains of North and South Carolina.

Writing in the Independent on the law's delay, Justice David J. Brewer says: "It was assured by one in a position to know that in a single state one of the great railroad corporations by appealing every judgment against it to the supreme court of the state—that court having a crowded docket—made enough in compromising the judgments against it in the trial courts to pay the entire cost of its legal department." Justice Brewer has devoted considerable thought to this subject, and while few will, we think, be inclined to agree with him concerning the denial of the right of appeal in criminal cases, it cannot be must be made with respect to the delays in all cases.

Most of the preaching and advice current today counselling folk to live a simpler life and banish worry seem to fall on receptive ground—on ground that has been made ready to a considerable extent by the increased cost of living, we may say, comments the Boston Transcript. Because it is a universally accepted fact that it does cost more to live now than it did a few years back and that in many cases incomes have not grown proportionately. Consequently some plan had to be devised for maintaining a balance between expenditures and receipts in order that the mental and moral poise might remain undisturbed. So the not unwholesome doctrine of "going without" and the precepts for living a life after one's own ideas and possibilities rather than according to the pace set by neighbors, are being accepted in places where, five years back, they would not even have got a hearing.

Highland Dress.

Of course kilts were in profusion at the Edinburgh levee, says Onlooker, but no one looked better as a Highland gentleman than Lord Lovat, in a black velvet doublet and red Fraser tartan, while the Mackintosh, always famous for his kilts and the wearing thereof, made a good second. The feature, however, of the levee, was the passing of the Duke of Atholl, the Earl of Dunmore, Sir Robert Moncrieffe and thirten other gentleman of the famous Highlanders in the picturesque uniform of the clan of dark Murray tartan, with pink and white hose and a badge of green jupiper in their bonnets. It was the expres desire of his majesty that these gentlemen should pass simultaneously, and the resulting picture was quite unique.

Misuse of the Flag.

There have been an extraordinary number of bills introduced at the present session of congress to prevent the desecration of the American flag. There is a growing conviction that the flag is cheapened and its influence and inspiration marred by being used to emphasize and ornament an advertisement or a trade mark. It is proposed to make such misuse of the national emblem a penal offense. The flag should be common; it should be in evidence everywhere, but wherever it is seen it should stand only for the national authority and glory.—Philadelphia Press.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

JANUARY 27TH.

The senate proceedings included a speech by Mr. Simmons, of North Carolina in support of the Panama canal treaty and the passage of a number of bills and resolutions. Mr. Simmons was the first democratic senator to speak in favor of the measure.

The senate committee on foreign relations rescinded its former action in proposing amendments to the Panama canal treaty and will recommend that the senate should act on the treaty as it stands without change.

The senate adopted the resolution authorizing the secretary of state to open negotiations with Great Britain for a revision of the joint regulations for protection of the fur seals of Alaska and also the resolution authorizing the committee on privileges and elections to enter upon an investigation into the charges against Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah.

The following bills passed: Extending to the mints at Denver, San Francisco and New Orleans the privilege of coining more coins.

Authorizing the purchase of a marble bust of General Lafayette.

Mr. Hardwick, democrat, Georgia, made an extended address on the race problem.

Mr. Hemenway, Indiana, from the committee on appropriations, reported the resolution requesting the secretary of war for a statement showing the amount of money disbursed by the department in promotion of flying machine experiments, whether under direction of Professor S. P. Langley or otherwise, with a recommendation by the committee that it be laid on the table.

The house went into committee of the whole with Mr. Tawney, of Minnesota, in the chair, and resumed consideration of the urgent deficiency bill.

JANUARY 28TH.

The time of the senate was devoted to debate rather than to set speeches on the attitude of the United States toward the Panama revolution. There was a variation, however, in that the discussion also had reference to the right of the president to withhold such information called for by the senate.

The immediate foundation of the controversy was the democratic caucus resolution calling upon the president to state whether he had yet supplied all the papers in the archives bearing upon the Panama affair.

The joint resolution authorizing the acceptance from citizens of France of a reproduction of D'Angers' bust of Washington was passed.

When Mr. Morgan's resolution calling for Minister Buchanan's letters concerning the amendment to the canal treaty was laid before the senate, Mr. Morgan withdrew it, saying he had been informed that it was the intention of the president to send the document to the senate in executive session.

The house for an hour was entranced by a speech made by Mr. J. Adam Bede, a republican member from Minnesota, who made his maiden go, and won his spurs. His remarks were replete with wit and humor as well as serious thought. Now and then, for purposes of illustration, he would tell a story whose recital greatly amused his audience.

He received the closest attention of republicans and democrats alike, and drew laughter and applause first from one side and then from the other side of the house, and at times both sides of the chamber joined in vigorous applause.

There also was a discussion on finance by Mr. Hill, of Connecticut, and Mr. Williams, of Mississippi, besides references to the Panama canal and the race problem in the south.

When the house convened Mr. Vandiver, of Nevada, sought to secure consideration of a resolution calling on the secretary of war for information as to what articles manufactured for the department are made by convict labor. Objection to its consideration on the ground that it was not a privileged resolution was sustained. By agreement debate on the urgent deficiency bill was extended.

The house then went into committee of the whole with Mr. Tawney, of Minnesota, in the chair, and resumed consideration of the urgent deficiency bill.

JANUARY 29.

The senate adopted the resolution introduced by Mr. Culberson for the democratic caucus which calls on the president to state all facts bearing on the controversy of Panama.

The vote on the resolution was unanimous, but there was a roll call on the amendments suggested by Mr. Cullom for the republican side of the chamber, calling for the information only in case the president should consider it not incompatible with the public interest to supply it. This amendment was adopted.

Mr. Tillman introduced a resolution asking for more specific information from the secretary of the treasury concerning the nomination of W. D. Crum as collector of customs for the port of Charleston, S. C., than was contained in the letter from the secretary.

The house considered whether members of congress are entitled to be paid mileage a second time. The controversy arose on an item in the urgent deficiency bill providing for two payments of mileage for senators and members of the house on account of the extra session which merged into the regular session.

A point of order was raised by Mr. Maddox, democrat, of Georgia, against the payment of mileage a second time.

The interest manifested in the question was shown by the fact that there were few empty seats on either side of the chamber when the mileage item was reported.

An adjournment was taken before a conclusion was reached.

The house went into committee of the whole with Mr. Tawney, of Minnesota, in the chair, and resumed consideration of the urgent deficiency bill. The reading of the bill under the five-minute rule was begun when Mr. Hill, of Connecticut, made a point of order against the paragraph appropriating $10,000 for the expenses of the commission on international exchange, appointed to bring about a fixed relationship between gold standard and silver-using countries. He contended that it was new legislation.

The point of order was sustained and the item was struck out.

Bancroft Fired on Colombians.

The United States gunboat Bancroft reports the attitude of the San Blas Indians at Caledonia bay to be not only unfriendly, but decidedly aggressive.

Last Tuesday men from one of the Bancroft's boats purchased a few cocoanuts from the Indians and paid more than full value for them. That night when it was dark twenty canoes were seen approaching the Bancroft.

The gunboat turned her searchlights on the canoes and it was revealed [illegible] Indians as could crowd in, probably 200 in all. All the men were armed with bows and arrows, guns and other weapons. Their faces were besmeared with paint. Their intentions were hostile. They hoped to surprise the ship.

The commander of the Bancroft ordered the gunboat cleared for action. A quick-firing Colt gun was placed and orders were given the gunners of this piece to keep a ceaseless fire all around the canoes. As soon as the Indians heard this rain of bullets, they immediately began to retreat toward shore.

The gunners were given express orders not to fire at the Indians, so the bullets cut the air and churned the water all around them.

Cattle Quarantine.

An epidemic of splenetic, or Texas fever, is raging throughout the cattle herds of the south. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson says, and quarantine lines for beef are drawn across the continent from the Pacific to the Atlantic. The "deadline" begins at the northern boundary of California, and follows the border line of the state to the south and extends eastward along the southern confines of Arizona and New Mexico, north and southern Colorado, and east to the Mississippi river, and north to the northern boundary of Tennessee, and then follows the northern line of Virginia to Maryland and the ocean. After February 1st no cattle will be allowed to cross the line from the south except under stringent conditions, laid down by the bureau of animal industry.

Our Trade With Russia.

Exports from the United States to Russia in the year just ended aggregated practically $20,000,000. This is more than double the amount of our exports to Russia in 1901, the year in which duties were advanced upon merchandise from the United States entering Russia, and is also double the average for many years preceding that date.

The chief growth in our exports to Russia, in the two years in question, has been in cotton, agricultural implements, copper and its manufactures, and naval stores. In iron and steel there has been a slight reduction. Raw cotton has more than tripled.

The camp for consumptives of the navy which was established near the Pensacola, navy yard several weeks ago, has been more successful than was anticipated, and all of their patients who have been under treatment show improvement. So satisfactory has been the progress of the patients at the camp that the navy department has sent nine more from New York for treatment.

ILLINOIS MONUMENT

At Vicksburg Will Be a Circular Temple.

The state of Illinois soon will erect a monument in the national military park at Vicksburg, Miss., in honor of the 35,000 Illinois soldiers and sailors who participated in the siege of that city from March 29th to July 4th, 1863. The structure, expected to cost $150,000, will be in the shape of a rotunda or circular temple. It is to be constructed of white marble or granite and ornamented with bronze. Bronze tablets on the exterior of the temple will have bas reliefs representing Richard Yates, the war governor of Illinois, presenting Ulysses S. Grant his commission as colonel of the Twenty-first Illinois, the gunboats running the batteries at Vicksburg on the night of April 16, 1863, and the surrender of Vicksburg by General Pemberton.

Around the exterior of the dome will be engraved the sentiment from Lincoln's second inaugural: "With malice toward none, with charity for all," and the last phrase in General Grant's farewell order to the army:

"Let us have peace."

The circumference of the interior will bear panels of size and number sufficient to contain the names of all the Illinois soldiers who took part in the siege.

The Rev. William K. McKibben, who was superintendent of a cartridge company before he entered the ministry, has made this offer to a committee appointed by the fire department to determine whether magazines of ammunition in stores will endanger firemen while the buildings are burning.

Acquitted.

The jury in the case against Henry Rodgers, at Madison, Miss., returned a verdict of not guilty of the charge of murder after deliberating less than two hours.

Although Governor Vardaman, of Mississippi, is anti-negro, one of his first acts was to pardon one who was unjustly imprisoned. George Brown, the negro referred to, was sent to the penitentiary for six months and fined $250 for "riding off a horse without felonious intent." That seems to be a new crime in the state of Mississippi, and the judge of the court who did the sentencing signed the petition for the pardon.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE ENTITLED "VITAL UNION WITH CHRIST."

The Rev. C. D. Case, Ph. D., Tells How the Son of God Within Us Becomes the Source of Divine Companionship and of Power For Achievement.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The Rev. C. D. Case, Ph. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church, Montclair, N. J., recently preached the following brilliant sermon, which is entitled "Vital Union With Christ." The text was chosen from Galatians ii. 20: "I am crucified with Christ and I no longer live, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live I live by faith in the Son of God who loved me and gave Himself to die for me." Dr. Case said:

The highest conception of the Christian life which this generation seems to have accepted is to be found in the words, "Follow Me," as uttered by Christ. In the thoroughly Biblical Jesus says to Peter at the beginning of His ministry, "Follow Me." He tells the four of the apostolic twelve, "Come ye after Me." He commands the taxgatherer in his office, "Follow Me." He presents the same standard to the rich young man who loved his money better than life. "Follow Me." Now the resurrection has passed and what else be the new injunction for the Gospel of the new age? It is still the same and Christ has come to the same degrees as the same [illegible] Follow Me.

The grandest ambition ever given to looking at the Christian life is to become like Him. He was the true Christian who perceived what the ancient seers had seen and felt the appointed means of grace. But no one yet has overcome Christianity has succeeded this devout desire of the very heart and core of the Christian life. Mr. Henry B. Harris, on the Congo, reads to the natives the words of Christ, "Love to Him is the rebirth of souls, and of him that loveth Him they goods sins them not again, and then proceeds to preach to them, with the result that the natives first beg and then return and then ask for the way to die. Mr. W. T. Stead, while in his London jail, wonders what he shall write to the girl whom he has succeeded in placing in a Christian home, and at last, by a flash of insight, writes her, "Be a Christ." Charles M. Sheldon presents as the ideal of every one to act as Christ would act if He were here in our place.

What is the trouble with this concept? Why, that it represents the statics but not the dynamics of the Christian life. [illegible] does not tell us how we shall become like our ideal. Many thought that the same man who of deliberate choice accepted evil could with the same deliberate choice and by simple will accept good when he saw it. This is a fine philosophy, but a poor religion. It does not explain Goethe, McAuley, Hadley. It gives us the ideal, but not the power to embody the ideal.

Listen to this statement and see if you can find a better one to express this idea of following Christ: "Religion cannot be send [illegible] have made a bad choice in putting upon this man as the ideal representative and guide of humanity; nor even now would it be easy even for an unbeliever to find a better translation of the rule of virtue from the abstract into the concrete than to endeavor so to live that Christ could approve of our life." And yet it was no less a person than J. S. Mill, an unbeliever, who wrote this.

The text of the morning presents the needed complementary conception: He who is presented as an objective ideal becomes a subjective presence and power. He who said, "As Thou hast sent Me into the world, even so have I sent them into the world," says with the "Go," the "Lo, I am with you all the days."

The Bible represents this union in different ways. Now it is that of the foundation and the superstructure signifying support; now the body and head, meaning direction; now of the husband and wife, representing union; now of the vine and branch, signifying the communication of life; and finally, most tenderly and mysteriously, of the relation between the Father and Son. In whatever way it is spoken of it is evidently an essential phase of the Christian life.

Dr. A. J. Gordon once saw what he called a parable of nature up in a part of New England where he spent his summer holidays. It was an example of natural grafting. Two little saplings grew up side by side. Through the action of the wind the bark of each became wounded, the sap began to mingle and at last on a still day they were firmly compacted. Then the stronger began to absorb the life of the weaker. It grew larger and larger while the other grew smaller and smaller; then began to wither and decline till finally it dropped away and disappeared. Now there are two trunks at the bottom and only one at the top. Death has taken away the one; life has triumphed in the other. The illustration thus given by Dr. Gordon only fails in not giving sufficient importance to the words "I live" of the text. The religious life is not self-immolation, but self-realization. It is not absorption, but amplification.

Without thinking for the present of the unvarying condition of this life, "crucifixion with Christ," or the motive of such living, "Christ loved us and died for us," or the means of such living, "faith in the Son of God," let us think more at length of the single sublime thought, our union with Christ and its bearings upon the different phases of the Christian life. This we must for the present emphasize if we are to have a pure evangelical Christianity which shall move the world.

First, note that Christ within us is the source of true divine companionship.

The appearance of Christ after the resurrection had two definite purposes. The first was to convince the disciples that Christ was truly alive; or, in other words, to connect the past Christ with the present Christ. The angels had assured them that Jesus would go into Galilee there to meet them. As soon as faith had accepted these words of both Christ and the angels the disciples would leave Jerusalem; but this did not take place until after a week.

The second definite object of Christ's appearances was to teach the disciples the spiritual nature of the kingdom, or, in other words, to connect the present Christ with the future Christ. Among such teachings are the words, "Follow Me," spoken to the seven in Galilee; the promise to all, "Lo, I am with you all the days," and the command that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but "wait for the promise of the Father, which, He said, ye have heard of Me." A glance back into the fourteenth chapter of John shows what this promise was. The sixteenth verse says: "I will pray the Father and He shall give you another comforter, that He may abide with you forever." But of whose presence is the Spirit the embodiment? The eighteenth verse says: "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you." Then the twentieth assures the disciples: "At that day ye shall know that I am in My Father, and ye in Me and I in you." Thus Christ's objective companionship becomes a subjective fellowship.

How closely can two people, heart to heart, be together? There is always the veil of the flesh between. All we can do is to interpret looks, words, and sometimes our judgment is wrong even on those nearest to us. We all walk a solitary way. Few reach that beautiful companionship represented by Browning in "By the Fireside:"

"When, if I but think deep enough,
You are wont to answer, prompt as rhyme;
And you, too, find without rebuff
Response your soul seeks many a time,
Piercing its fine flesh stuff.

Then it is that Christ Himself comes closer than breathing, nearer than hands or feet, comes into the innermost recesses of our nature for sympathy and communion with the human heart.

Christ within us is also the source of power. Christ does not give us power by making more machines of us. We are not clay on the potter's hands, but we are something more. God does not want us to be slaves, but freemen; not subjects, but sons. An [illegible] false way of considering the help that we receive from God is that we are to do all that we can with our powers, or neglected powers, and then let God do the rest. As the longer we live, the stronger we are and the less we need God's intervention. Every time God helps us, we are less of a man or woman, and the stronger we grow the more independent and self-sufficient we are. The end of it all would be the independence of God. Such a conception [illegible] upon our relation to Christ is that His presence with us is given us energy, but by enabling it, energizing it, charging it with Augustine or Luther or Paul; but God works in us, God works [illegible] God works in us to will and to do of His good pleasure. Thus, will is not an instrument by which we can turn from side to side, but a power which when necessary God can use to express acting. That when God does [illegible] of our act unless God works through our wills.

The possibilities of such an empowering are divine. We need not be perfectionists and still believe as we ought that Christ's grace is sufficient for us. We pretend to believe it, and do not live it. They worry, they fret, they give up. Most of us seem to think that the normal Christian life is to rise and fall like the tides. Yet Paul says: "There hath no temptation befallen you but such as is common to man, but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

Christ within also makes all living sacred. We have made sad divisions among objects. We have divided space into holy and unholy, and declared that God could be found only in certain places, which have been consecrated. We have divided time into holy and secular, declaring that we would serve God on the Sabbath and conduct our business and amusements as we pleased the rest of the week. We have divided money into two parts. We have said that the giving of the one-tenth, or the twentieth to God, justified us in the use of unlimited freedom in the disposition of the rest. We have divided up persons and put a certain class of people called priests, ministers, missionaries, upon pedestals, declaring that the standard of conduct for them differed from the standard for others, and that their work was especially religious.

All wrong. All space is holy, and the green grass may be the chancel carpet, and the trees the massive pillars and the sky the dome, if below there is a heart worshiping in spirit and truth. All time is sacred. The Monday should be as much given to God's service as Sunday, and the office or the store should be as much a place for devotion as the closet. All money is consecrated, and the money spent upon the necessaries of life, upon business and pleasure, should be spent with equal consciousness of Christ within them, and they should be as much to objectify His life. There is nothing we need to-day quite as much as the Christianization of the secular life.

Then at last, the Christ within is the source of final holiness. Christ not only is to present us holy and unblamable, but irreprovable in His sight.

Sin does two things for us, separates us from God and distorts our nature. When we are forgiven we are restored to the divine fellowship. But what about the effects of sin upon our nature? See the scars upon the tree and what the life of the tree does for it. Listen to what Paul says: "I am perplexed until Christ be formed within you." As Christ had His Bethlehem, His Nazareth, His Gethsemane, does He again in His reincarnation? His Bethlehem, His Nazareth, His Olivet? Who knows why one plant grows into a geranium, and the other into the rose? Each type is something more than the ideal presented for the imitation of the plant. Each is an informing life.

I think it was the last thing that A. S. Gunbert wrote for the Examiner. "Among the Dutch the rose was sometimes cultivated by planting an inferior rose close to a rose of superior variety. The rose of inferior quality was carefully watched and anthers removed to prevent self-pollenization; the object being that it should be pollenized by the superior rose. Gradually the rose thus treated grew upon itself the characteristics of the superior life of its companion." So, our lives are pollenized as it were by His righteousness.

Thus Christ within becomes to us the source of divine companionship, of power for achievement, of the exaltation of duet, of final holiness. He who would to plant hope within his own heart or in the prospects, should begin and never cease exercising faith in Him who loved us and gave Himself to die for us.

Overcoming Worry.

I believe a little true philosophy and reasoning can go a great way in overcoming worry. I do not mean a deep and serious philosophy, but a simple application of common facts which appeal to intelligence. These facts are such as the following: "Worry can do no good. It cannot change things by being sad. Worry unfits you for hard work, and hard work is the surest power to make wrong things right. It is foolish to waste time and strength in doing that which only leaves one less time and less strength to do it. But there is also a sweeter philosophy which deals with principles of right and balance. It shows how things go crooked sometimes, that the final result is more beautiful. It suggests how by a wisdom greater than ours wrongs, even parent wrongs, are finally righted. It brings history and personal experience to array against a merely transient view of life, and proves how in the large sense it will run the man who waits and trusts to the man who succeeds.—Floyd Tompkins.

Each Day's Living.

Our life may be food to us, or not as we have it so, be poison, but one or the other it must be. Whichever and however it is, beyond all doubt, it is constantly real. So never as the day passes into night alternately follow one another, and every day when it passes into darkness with it its own share of the results of it has silently wrought in us, each for evil or for good. The day of duty and devotion leaves it richer than it found us, richer sometimes, and commonly, in our circumstances; always in ourselves.

A Year of Freedom.

Let the new year be a year of freedom from sin, a year of service, a year of joy in God, and it will be a happy year from first to last. It may be the hardest year we have known, but it will be the best year.—J. H. Barkley, D. D.

HARDING CAPTURED

He Wrecked Three Banks in North Alabama.

L. C. Harding, alias Ed Blanco, wrecked banks last year at Fort Payne, Attalla and Collinsville Ala. and disappeared suddenly, leaving three institutions stranded, has been captured at Bronxside, Fla. by [illegible]

The disappearance of Harding caused a sensation a few years ago in Fort Payne, and although detectives were put on the case no trace of him was seen, heard of him at Collinsville or New York, where he went on a reported purpose of securing money for creditors who were pressing him.

One of the most important features of the case was the fact that he had married Miss Mae Hodges, of Attalla, only a short time before his disappearance and left her in Fort Payne penniless and ignorant as to the whereabouts of her husband's future intentions. Harding, during his stay in Alabama, had never allowed a picture of himself to be taken and had successfully succeeded the only miniature which he [illegible] to exist.

After the disappearance she gave birth in response to a telegram which was followed by detectives. In person they confronted her and asked her to give them the portrait to assist in the search for Harding.

She took it from her locket and threw it in the fire before their eyes.

Governor Jelks has drawn his requisition for Harding on Florida's executive and it is expected he will be brought to Port Payne soon.

EDUCATIONAL.

National Association Meets in Atlanta February 23d to 25th.

Superintendent of Education Hill is busy with his campaign of education in Alabama, and during the next few days he will visit several of the counties and hold institutes.

On February 23d to 25th, inclusive, Mr. Hill will be in Atlanta, where he goes to attend the annual gathering of the department of superintendents of the National Educational association. It is expected that many superintendents of states, counties and cities will attend this gathering as many states, and as it is the first time that the meeting has ever been held in the south, it is expected that the south will send an unusually large representation. Alabama has always been first in the point of attendance among the states for two years, and Superintendent Hill is anxious that his record shall again hold the banner.

President Abercrombie, of the University of Alabama, is second vice president of the association, and Alabama has been given two important places on the programme. Mr. Abercrombie has been assigned to discuss the subject of increasing the efficiency of rural schools, and Superintendent H. Phillips, of Birmingham, will discuss the question as to what studies are advisable in the public course of study and what should be the basis for the same.

Boy Dropped Dead.

Charles Laughlin, a boy 12 years old, fell dead while at work at his machine in the Dwight mills at Alabama City, Ala. The boy was at his work and had not complained of even feeling bad, when he fell dead by the side of his machine. About ten days ago a sister died after a few hours' illness. She was about 18 years old and is supposed to have been born with heart trouble.

The Gadsden-Attalla track was covered with snow and ice and two cars met on a curve. The motorman was unable to stop and the cars were locked together with a crash. The entire front of one car was torn out. No one was hurt.

General Joe Wheeler has decided to run again for congress.

EXTENSION GRANTED.

The interstate and foreign commerce commission will favorably report the bill which has passed the senate reviving an act authorizing the Montgomery and Autauga county company to construct a bridge across the Alabama river at Montgomery, which has expired by limitation. The company will have until March 4, 1907, to build the bridge under the terms of the bill.

The senate committee on commerce will formally report the bill which has passed the house authorizing the Mobile and West Alabama railroad to construct a bridge across the Alabama river between the counties of Clark and Choctaw.

Dan Meyer, stokin shovel engine on the Seaboard Air Line, was accidentally killed near Pell City on Saturday. He was cleaning his engine which discharged and the bullet went through his heart.

The Queen and Crescent will spend over $300,000 enlarging its shops at Chattanooga and Ludlow.

The first coal fleet in six years left Cincinnati Saturday for Pittsburg.

Many new banks are being organized throughout the south.

RAN A BLOCK

After Getting Three Stab Wounds in His Heart.

Waller Bennett was stabbed to death at Gurley, Ala., Thursday night by K. Conley, a young man of the town. The tragedy occurred on the main street. The two had trouble during the day and early evening, and Bennett was seen to strike Conley, who pulled a knife and stabbed him three times in the heart, and as he turned to run slashed him in the neck. Bennett ran a block into a saloon and fell dead against the bar. Conley was arrested immediately. The prisoner is 18 years old and his victim was 22. Both are well connected.

Chaffee Wants Land.

Lieutenant General Chaffee, as chief of staff, has made a report to the secretary of war which will be transmitted to congress, urging an appropriation of $2,000,000 for the purchase of four tracts of ground, one in each of the four quarters of the United States, for military maneuvers.

General Chaffee says that experience shows that it is not possible to rent suitable tracts. He says investigation indicates a desirable locality in the Donewagn valley in Pennsylvania, one near West Point, Ky., and one in California. Tracts desired must be from seven to eight miles long and from three to four miles wide.

Insurance Reports.

Fire insurance companies doing business in Alabama last year seem to have made good money. Deputy Commissioner E. R. McDavid has been busy several days receiving reports, and while only about one-fourth of the companies have sent in their statements, the indications are that the percentage of losses for the year will be less than half the amount of receipts. This is considered an exceptionally fine showing. The percentage of losses last year was 63.8 and the ratio of losses to premium receipts during the past six years has been 59.6.

Soil Surveys.

Representative Underwood received notice from the secretary of agriculture that the department, upon his request, had authorized a soil survey for Blount county, Alabama. The survey party will give particular attention to the question of fruit, as from the county's location it expects to find some of the desirable fruit soils that have been encountered in similarly situated areas in adjoining states.

Congressman Bowie has been notified that the department will make a soil survey of Dallas county, Alabama, beginning in October.

Buggy Company Burned Out.

At Talladega, Ala., fire destroyed the three-story building of the Hocks-Kyser Buggy Company with the contents. Loss about $6,000, covered by insurance. The building was owned by R. H. Whatley and is valued at $3,000. The origin is unknown.

Fred Smith, brakeman on the Birmingham Southern, was instantly killed at Ensley, Ala., by striking his head against the trestle on the Frisco line. He is supposed to have been standing up on top of the cars when he was struck. The train was going at a high rate of speed.

H. R. Shivers, formerly a gauger in the employ of the federal government, has been indicted by the grand jury at Montgomery, Ala., for making fraudulent entries in the record book in connection with the affairs of the Kohn Distilling company.

In discussing the indictment of Senator Burton, of Kansas, Senator Morgan, of Alabama, said: "If republican senators continue to be indicted in federal courts, I am of the opinion that they will reduce their own numbers to such an extent that we can defeat the president's Panama canal treaty."

Representative Lamb, of West Virginia, introduced a bill appropriating $1,200,000 to the Negro Development and Exposition Company of the United States of America, incorporated under the laws of Virginia. One million dollars is to enable a creditable exposition to be made by the company at the Jamestown exposition to be held in 1907, and $200,000 is to pay bounties and arrears, pay due estates of deceased negro soldiers of the civil war.

MRS. MAYBRICK OUT?

Report Comes from London that American Woman in English Prison Has Been Pardoned.

Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper (London) says that Mrs. Florence Maybrick, the American woman who was serving a life sentence on the charge of having poisoned her husband, was released from the Aylsbury female convict prison at 6:45 o'clock on the morning of January 25, on special license.

The Daily Mail says that Mrs. Maybrick is now in Liverpool and that the following conditions attach to her release from prison: That she will not appear on the public stage or write a book of her experience and shall in no way endeavor to attract attention to herself.

An Associated Press dispatch says: In spite of the mystery with which officials shroud the action in connection with the reported release of Mrs. Florence Maybrick, it can be definitely said that she has been removed from Aylesbury prison. At the United States embassy it was most emphatically declared that she had not been pardoned, and that she was still a prisoner.

Mrs. Maybrick, the paper concludes, during the last few months in prison, was employed in the lightest work as a reward for good conduct.

Mrs. Florence Elizabeth Chandler Maybrick is a native of Mobile, Ala., where she still enjoys a reputation for beauty and refinement of character.

In 1881 she met James Maybrick, a fashionable Englishman at Liverpool, and after a brief courtship they were married. The first years of their wedded life seemed happy. Two children, a boy and a girl, were born to them. Shadows began to fall over the family in 1889. There were hints of heavy drinking and abuse on the part of the husband. One spring day in that year he attended the Wirral races in a heavy rain and contracted a severe cold. Returning home, after eating and drinking, he took to his bed. Growing worse, he insisted that his wife give him a certain white powder, which she did, following his instructions as where to find it. Thirteen days later Maybrick died and his widow suffered a severe collapse.

Coming out of this, she was confronted with a charge of murder. After a sensational trial, during which evidence in favor of the woman sufficient to have set her free by any American jury, was brought to light, she was convicted and sentenced to death. It was shown that her husband had been a confirmed arsenic eater for years.

Immediately following her conviction, petitions began to pour in from the United States and other civilized countries, protesting against the verdict and praying the release of the prisoner. For years diplomatic correspondence has passed between Washington and London concerning the case. Every administration of recent date has taken up the Maybrick case with resolution.

The first favorable step was the commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment, by Queen Victoria. Then came the reduction to twenty-five years, which was again shortened by allowances for good behavior. The south is tremendously interested in the case, not alone from the fact that Mrs. Maybrick is of the south, and a woman, but because her testimony is necessary in the settlement of a case involving thousands of dollars.

COLOMBIANS ON THE WRONG TACK.

Army Will Not be Allowed to Land on Any Part of Panama.

It is stated at the state department at Washington that General Reyes must have misunderstood the position of the authorities here if he, as representative from Bogota, informed the Colombian government that the United States has limited its objection to the landing of Colombian troops in Panama to the canal zone itself. The department has not in any sense changed its position when it was expressly stated that no troops with hostile intent could be landed in any part of Panama.

WASHINGTON IS IN THE DARK.

Regarding Report of Mrs. Maybrick's Release from English Prison.

Regarding the case of Mrs. Maybrick, interest in which has been revived by reports that she has been released from prison in England, state department officials at Washington say there has been no recent communication between them and the English government in the matter. The last information the department had regarding the case, and this is now some months old, was that Mrs. Maybrick probably would be released late in the coming summer.

The drug store owned by the late Dr. Buchanan at Scottsboro, Ala., was totally destroyed by fire. At one time it was feared that the freight depot of the Southern railway would also be destroyed, but it escaped, owing to the stillness of the wind.

Illicit distillers were caught on Sugar Loaf mountain in Rowan county, Kentucky, and it is now believed that their "moonshine still" accounts for the report of an active volcano which recently alarmed residents of that vicinity.

LARGEST IN THE COUNTRY.

An Immense Steel Plant to be Erected Near Birmingham.

Pittsburg capitalists recently purchased property in the vicinity of Five Mile creek, near Birmingham, Ala. Their representatives have been locating a site for a new steel mill to be superior to anything in the south, the furnaces being constructed on the same identical plan as those at the great plant at Homestead, admitted the most successful steel making plant in the world.

The steel mill will be the largest and most modern in the country, and will be located at Boyles, five miles from Birmingham. In addition to the steel plant furnaces are expected to soon follow the announced determination of the purchasers some time ago being now about to be materialized. Several millions of dollars will probably be expended in developing this property.

Filling the Order.

The Ensley, Ala., steel plant is now working upon an order of 5000 tons of steel rail for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company, being the first consignment of the order for 30,000 tons of rail placed some time ago. The 5,000 tons will make about 200 car loads.

The rail now being turned out is of the heaviest variety, weighing eighty pounds to the yard. It will be sent to various points along the system as completed.

The Cane Crop.

Some cold weather has prevailed during the past week, and in portions of the sugar district a heavy fall of sleet is reported. The general situation concerning the coming crop is favorable, and the outlook is good everywhere.

Shut Down.

The South Chicago steel rail mills, which were scheduled to open this week, will not do so. Instead the plate mill has been shut down, throwing 800 men out of employment.

The shut-down is said to be due to the demand of officers of the Machinists' union for a conference with the officials of the company today relative to the reduction of wages of the machinists. The machinists accepted the cut under protest, and a strike was threatened unless a conference was granted and the wages restored. In answer the company announced the closing of the plate mill.

New Rifle Range.

Plans have been completed for the $1,000 rifle range on the naval reservation at Pensacola, Fla. It is hoped by the authorities to have this 600-yard range sufficiently advanced in construction for use in March of the naval vessels of the north and south Atlantic squadrons and the European squadron when those vessels arrive in Pensacola harbor for target practice.

The fire started in a negro restaurant. A high wind fanned the flames.

Golden & McAlpin, grocers; McGee, general merchandise; Rubenstein, dry goods; Cousinau, groceries and dry goods; Holland & Gay, dry goods and general merchandise; Colum's hotel and livery stable; Tucker & Peters, general merchandise; Crouch, groceries; Masonic lodge building; Pyron, groceries and dry goods; McAlpin hotel; Spivey & McGruder, drugs; McClary, livery stable; Bank of Hollandale, building partially damaged; large brick store of Russell Bros., partially damaged.

William H. Ellis, of Quincy, present state auditor, has been appointed to succeed Judge Whitfield as attorney general.

Ernest Amos, of Milton, has been appointed state auditor to succeed Ellis.

When Cardinal Giuseppi Pecci, brother of the late pope, died, Leo had all the cardinal's heirs renounce thier claims to the inheritance, assuring them that they would be adequately compensated.

Going to Commerce.

The construction of part of the Frisco-Rock Island extension south was announced some time ago under the name of the Memphis and Gulf railroad. Its ultimate destination is just now being generally made known. The work on the extension of the new road from Aberdeen to Columbus, Miss., is to be commenced at once, and from that point the general line of route is to be through Pickens, Greene, Marengo and Monroe counties, in Alabama, crossing the Louisville and Nashville road in the vicinity of Flomaton, and into Florida direct to Pensacola.

The war department has published a book entitled The Military Policy of the United States," by the late Major General Emory Upton. General Upton's military career, according to Secretary Root, who directed the publication, was one of exceptional excellence and brilliance, and no one was more fit than he to undertake such a difficult task as the writing of this book. Although written a quarter of a century ago, this particular work on military policy was never before published by the government. Secretary Root rescued it from the millions of documents in the archives of the war department and has caused it to be published for the reason that General Upton's plans and recommendations were prophetic and are as sound today as they were when written.

Several months ago a drop forge company was organized by Bessemer and Birmingham, Ala., capital, a site selected and work on the foundations begun, but for reasons satisfactory to the officers work was stopped. It has been learned upon good authority that arrangements are being perfected to resume work, and when begun the construction will be pushed to completion. Material amounting to several thousand dollars has been placed on the ground and everything is being gotten ready to go to work.

Expected reaction came in the cotton market Friday morning, and longs went wild in their efforts to liquidate. Their offerings swamped the market for a while and prices went down from 45 to 86 points. The prominent bulls were heavy buyers at the decline and even at the lowest buying orders of a few hundred bales would send the market up 10 points.

The pencil mill at Russellville, Ala., was sold to the Gulf Red Cedar company; consideration $10,000. The new purchaser shut down the plant and is moving the machinery to Paint Rock, Ala. About seventy-five people are thrown out of work by this change.

The Woodenware Manufacturing company, of Bridgeport, Ala., has just had built a new steamboat for the upper river trade. It was launched with impressive ceremonies. The boat will ply between Bridgeport and Chattanooga.

The Gadsden, Ala., pipe plant has temporarily shut down, awaiting the arrival of specifications for a large order booked some time ago and which it is now ready to start filling.

The fund being raised by Anniston, Ala., citizens to establish a glass factory has already reached substantial proportions and it is expected that a sufficient amount will soon be collected.

Reports from the Colorado Fuel and Iron company indicate the early resumption of all departments of the big plant, which closed down two months ago because of the coal strike.

A shipment of 3,600 bales of cotton destined for Jamaica left Houston, Tex., for San Francisco. The shipment is a record so far as oriental trade is concerned.

It is reported that the Woodstock furnaces at Gadsden, Ala., have been sold to a Pittsburg company which contemplates building a small steel plant at Anniston.

The Adams-Nowlin Drug company, at Alabama City, will establish a large bottling works at that place. The machinery has been shipped.

Montgomery, Ala., has a new $50,000 paint company.

Representative Maddox, of Georgia, introduced a bill providing for the per capita distribution of not to exceed $25,000,000 annually of the surplus in the treasury among the states and territories for the construction and manufacture of postroads.

Between 175 and 200 men are employed at the Gadsden, Ala., car shops and the pay roll is over $6,000 each month.

The state of Alabama is holding 200 bales of cotton which was raised on the state farm by convict labor.

The Sheffield Coal and Iron Company's mines have been closed indefinitely.

All the open hearth furnaces of the Ensley steel plant are in operation.

THE DEMOCRATIC EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF CHILTON COUNTY,
by Tipton Mullins, Chairman.
Frank Crichton, Secretary.

SOLICITOR TATE DECLINES TO ACCEPT J. M. HOLLEY'S PROPOSAL TO DISFRANCHISE CHILTON AND AUTAUGA COUNTIES.

Wetumpka, Ala., Jan. 18, 1904
F. Loyd Tate, Esq.
Wetumpka, Ala.

Dear Sir:

As you and I are the only announced candidates in Elmore county for the office of Solicitor of the 15th Judicial Circuit, I propose that we leave it to a vote of the Democratic electors in said county, under such arrangements as the Democratic county committee may provide, as to which of our names shall be presented in the primary for the position.

A reply in writing is respectfully solicited. Very truly yours,

J. M. HOLLEY.

Wetumpka, Ala., Jan. 25, 1904
J. M. Holley, Esq.
Wetumpka, Ala.

Dear Sir:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of yours of the 15th inst., in which you propose that we have a double primary for the nomination of Solicitor of the 15th Judicial Circuit, one of said primaries to be limited to Elmore county.

You probably wrote me under the impression that Autauga or Chilton counties, one or both, would have candidates for the Solicitorship.

You need have no fear on this score, inasmuch as I already have the endorsement of the bar of Autauga and Chilton counties, and there is no necessity whatever for the expense and trouble of a double primary. You are the only lawyer in the circuit running against me, and if I were not a candidate Elmore would have a chance of losing the Solicitorship, but so long as I am in the race, you need have no fear of opposition from any other county.

All the lawyers of the other counties (and you know, that under the law, only lawyers can fill this position,) conceed that I am entitled to an election, and are not opposing me. So much for that.

In the beginning of this campaign I proposed to you to have a joint discussion with you before the people and submit our claims to the office, man to man, and you declined to meet me. I now make the same proposition and again ask that you join me in an open and above board presentation to the people of our claims to this office. Said discussion to be upon the usual terms, towit: You to open and close the debate in one place and I in the next. Thus, the people may see and hear us both and judge between us.

I request an answer to this proposition in writing.

Very respectfully yours,
F. L. TATE.

Wetumpka, Ala., Jan. 25, 1904
F. L. Tase, Esq.
Wetumpka, Ala.

Dear Sir:

I acknowledge receipt of yours of the 25th inst. in reply to my letter of the 18th inst. in which I proposed to leave it to the voters of Elmore county as to which of our names should be presented in the general primary for Solicitor of the 15th Judicial Circuit.

This proposition you decline and state that you have the endorsement of the bar of Autauga and Chilton counties and indicate that because of such endorsement you are the only candidate that will receive the practical recognition of those two counties.

While I know that the endorsement of the bar of any county will coercise a strong influence, yet the people in the assertion of their rights as voters in the primary will have something to say in the choice of candidates, and it is to the people as well as to the bar that I propose to submit my claim.

In your letter you state that there are no candidates for this position outside of the limits of Elmore county, und you further state that in the beginning of this campaign you suggested joint discussion between us as to our respective merits for Solicitor, and in your letter you renewed said proposition.

I now propose that I will accept your offer for a joint discussion to be had in Elmore county with the understanding that in a preliminary primary to be had under the direction of the county executive committee in which yours and my name shall be presented, the name presented in such preliminary primary shall be the only one presented in the general primary for such office, surely if you are correct that the only two candidates in the circuit are you and myself you ought to be willing for the people of Elmore county to make the selection.

I suggest that all our correspondence on the subject be made public in the Wetumpka Herald this week, and unless you consent

THORSBY DEMOCRATIC CLUB.

On Friday night last a public meeting was held at the school house, and despite having to wade through snow there was a good attendance of about fifty citizens.

Mr. E. F. Mead called the meeting to order, stating the object to be the formation of a Democratic club, and announcing that before proceeding there were speakers on hand who would address the audience, and called upon Frank Crichton, who in a brief talk prepared the way for the speakers to follow.

Hon. Tipton Mullins took for his theme "Why should Chilton county be left off of the political map of Alabama." He made an excellent speech of thirty minutes, in which he stated that for some time past practically Chilton was obliterated from the political map of the State. That in its election of county officers when men were chosen who were in opposition to the dominant party, the county had no influence in the counsels of the party and no claim to ask for favors. That as a common-sense business proposition it were far better to elect men to office who were in accord with the party in power. His speech made a good impression on the audience.

Hon. J. Osmond Middleton, mayor-elect of Clanton, who is rapidly making a reputation as an orator, made an eloquent speech on behalf of the Democratic party, giving many reasons why particulary the people of Thorsby should align themselves with the Democrats.

Hon. F. Loyd Tate, solicitor of this judicial circuit, and candidate for re-election to that office, said this was his second visit to Thorsby and on both occasions he had met with a most cordial reception and such unstinted hospitality that he thought a new proverb would have to be created "As generous as the people of Thorsby." He spoke of the advantages to be derived from his audience joining hands with the Democratic party, the party of the people in the Southern States, and illustrated his remarks with some entertaining anecdotes.

After the speaking the meeting passed a resolution to form the Thorsby Democratic club, elected E. F. Mead, temporary chairman, and Frank Crichton, temporary, secretary. The enrollment of members was then proceeded with, and in rapid succession twenty-five came forward and signed their names, each man stating that he would bring another one or two into the fold at their next meeting. The Club then adjourned until Friday night, Feb. 5, 1904, when permanent organization will be perfected. The Thorsby Democratic Club starts out under the most favorable auspices.

History repeats itself. You cannot find the age of a woman in the Bible.

Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Feb. 1, 1904

The State of New Jersey has been looked upon and is one of the pivotal states in the campaign of this year. It is one of the states that the Democracy must carry in order to win the election. The leaders of the party here in the national capital have had their eyes on that state for some time and have been watching developments over there. They realize, as does every man, who has any political knowledge of the situation in that state that the Democratic party of the State of New Jersey has been singularly unfortunate during the past six years from the fact that it has had at its head as executive an assistant Republican in the person of William B Gourley, of Paterson. Gourley willfully and deliberately misrepresented the sentiment of his party at the meeting of the Democratic national committee at this city on January 12, by declaring himself and his state for Cleveland for President, when he knew that New Jersey would have none of Cleveland, or any man or plan in the least tinctured with Clevelandism. And to make his action the more abhorrent to the Democrats of New Jersey, Gourley was the only member of the National Committee who publicly declared himself for Cleveland's candidacy. In an interview published in the Newark News of Janusry 12, Gourley, not content with betraying the party in his own state, paid his respects in characteristic style to the great Democracy of the South, which always has been loyal and true to the priciples of Jefferson and Jackson, in the following terms:

"The Southern States will go Democratic even if the national ticket is headed by a mangy yeller dog."

This malicious villification of his own party in the South was due to the fact that he was well aware that that section of the country despises Democrats of his ilk so thoroughly that if any are permitted to exist they are never heard of beyond the confines of their own political tombs. He knew also that Mr. Cleveland is held at his true value by the loyal and valiant Democracy of the South. Hence his petty slander of that section.

William B. Gourley is the man who has made a laughing stock, a by-word and a reproach of the New Jersey Democracy since 1858 by turning over the machinery of the state to the Republicans and their trust managers, of whom he is said to be, and believed to be, the paid tool.

This is the same man who, in 1902, prevented the Democratic congressional committee from assisting Mr. William Hughes, the Democratic candidate, financially, in order to carry his own district, but despite the fact that Gourley told chairman Griggs of the Democratic congressional committee not to give Hughes a cent, and who on that account did not receive a cent, he nevertheless was triumphantly elected on his own merits. Gourley lives in Paterson, in the same town and district as Congressman Hughes and the semblance of a congressional committee in this district, which he assumes to control, hardly raised its hand to assist in the election of Mr. Hughes: but on the contrary, the committee headquarters were closed practically during the entire campaign.

Gourley is the same man who, during the congressional campaign of 1902, and while posing as chairman of the Democratic state central committee, refused to permit the space in the street cars of Paterson, already paid for by a regular advertiser, to be used for Congressman Hughes' benefit when donated to him by a friend as a campaign contribution.

Gourley has never done anything for the good of the party. The Democracy of New Jersey under his alleged leadership, has become so thoroughly demoralized as almost to lose hope. He has no organization among the party, and such organization as he inhrited from his predecessor has been debaunched into a mere machine to keep real Democrats out of office. He is the hired attorney of the corporations whose chief aim in New Jersey is to control both parties and debaunch the electorate.

An Early Riser.

A strong, healthy, active constitution depends largely on the liver. People around Sardis have had a nice time since the big snow hunting game, rabbits are plentiful.

Our school begins to-day and is taught by Prof Joe Bone, I hope that he will have a good success as our boys need something hard like a Bone to make them get about; the writer himself needs a little help.

People down here are preparing for making 20 cent cotton, and politics are all the go; I think the Democrats will carry the day.

Mr. William Hayes is very sick. There is a great deal of sickness, lagrippe seems to be the great cause.

We had a nice time at Mr. Clint Gobern's.

Mrs. Deason is going to build a new house.

The death angel has visited Mr. John Seymore's family the 15th of January, taking away one of his beloved sons, which leaves father, mother brothers and sisters to mourn his loss. He was a young man 16 years old; he joined the church over seven months ago. May God be with all his people till they meet again in realms beyond. We all know that God said suffer little children to come unto me, for thou should not perish but have everlasting life. So I am in hopes that when he sends his angels down from heaven above that each and every one will be ready to go with them in the right way.

INLAND SEA OF JAPAN

Beauties of Yokohama Charming to Eyes of Foreigners.

Yokohama.—It is a most pleasant sensation to find one's self once again entering the Shimonoseki Straits with the prospect of a trip through the Inland Sea, where nature has been so lavish in her bestowal of beautiful things to be admired. Then, too, there is always this interesting place to look forward to as a chance of final enjoyment before taking the steamer for a transpacific voyage. Yokohama to the average foreigner seems to mean far more than Tokio, although the latter is the capital and a very much larger place.

The entrance to the Inland Sea from the westward is through quite a narrow passage, through which the current at certain times of the year attains a velocity of more than five miles an hour. The waters of the sea, bordered with terrace-ribbed hills, villages nestling in cozy little nooks, and the beautiful and varied coverings of the hills form a picture that baffles the power of an ordinary pen to describe with any degree of justice. The care and attention bestowed on all connected with cultivation of the soil is what impresses one particularly and the rice fields are of greatest interest. It also lends diversity of coloring in its many shades of green.

To a Japanese returning home the contrast of coloring that he finds under the bright sunshine of his own country, when compared with the shows offered by some of the countries that he might call his neighbors, must make him more than ever in love with his native land. Where color is so essential a part of any view that the very name for landscape embodies it there can be no wonder that Japanese globe-trotters miss their lovely land; for their word "keshiki" (scenery) means "landscape color," which seems to fully carry the meaning they intend to convey.

In former years the junks were everywhere in evidence, and one seldom saw any other type of craft, but nowadays this has all undergone a very decided change, for instead of the always picturesque junk with its peculiar sails and marvelous gear one finds that the schooner rig has supplanted all others. In numerous cases the native style of hull is still used, but in the vast majority hulls like those we are accustomed to see are the favorites. With their modern civilization utility is apparently the sentiment of the hour.

The way every approach is commanded by batteries with modern high-powered artillery induces the belief that an enemy would have a difficult task to force a passage. On every hand it looks as though Japan had concluded that war was bound to come eventually, and that the way to make it short and decisive was to be prepared. Chimneys smoking along the shores tell the tale of mines being worked and foundries in full blast. New harbors appear in advantageous localities, and the stone breakwaters are evidence of large sums spent in the interest of the maritime portion of the community.

This city was the first treaty port opened to foreign commerce, and at present owes its importance entirely to foreign trade. One recognizes several familiar names given to places about the bay through which vessels pass before reaching the anchorage. Mississippi Bay was one that seemed to require a bit of explanation. It was simple, enough, however, as the Mississippi was one of our famous side-wheel frigates, and she came over here with Commodore Matthew C. Perry when he made his famous cruise.

Yokohama was merely a fishing village in the middle of the last century, but now a fine esplanade of houses in the more modern European style faces the sea and forms a pleasing contrast with those of native architecture. Behind all a bold eminence known as the Bluff is covered with handsome villas, gardens, and winding drives. These are all easily seen from the comfortable seat of a jinrikisha, the universal wheeled vehicle of Japan. This conveyance is a "baby chaise." The latest wrinkle is bicycle wheels, rubber tires included, with long shafts, and a coolie between them who moves on the trot.

When a few years ago the first wheeled vehicle was introduced by an Englishman the natives called it simply a "wheel." The invention has proved a great success throughout the Far East, the Chinese calling it the man-power car. One finds it as far from where it was first introduced as Singapore, where fate has somewhat funnily decreed that it should be drawn by the lazy though mercenary Chinaman, and although so heavily handicapped, it competes successfully with horse and carriage and prevents the introduction of the tram car.

Of course there are horses in Japan that are used for draught purposes, for driving, and for riding. The races next month, for example, are a very important feature of the season, and all hands turn out to see them. They have a very sensible way here of breaking their colts for draught purposes. The colts always run alongside their dams on transport journeys, and thus begin their apprenticeship by learning the roads. As they get a little bigger a wisp of straw is tied to their backs to simulate a burden, and give them the feeling of additional weight without the fatigue. Then, as their strength increases, a real load, proportioned to what they can do, is put upon them, and this increased gradually until they are able to stand a full measure.

The object of a visit to this portion of Japan at the present time is to try and catch the beatings of the public pulse on the subject of war. Rumors of what people thought was about to happen were so very conflicting in Korea and Manchuria that but little satisfaction could be gained by repeated interviewing. Here was the place for news, but instead of finding those having the ability to form well-digested opinions and the willingness to express them, it is almost impossible to get them to talk.

The difference of opinions between the two factions are so very bitter that silence seems the golden mean that must be cultivated. If one starts war topics the forefinger of the party addressed almost at once goes to his lips, to signify that the taboo has been placed on that subject.

Surprise was, without doubt, caused here by Russia's action in presenting a new set of demands in Peking while the Manchurian question was under discussion between St. Petersburg and the representatives from Tokio, although it is quite in the running that these discussions could scarcely be said to have entered a serious phase. The Japanese have not been idling their time, but it is thought highly possible that they have not been very welcome to the Russian statesmen. But as the Japanese demands had been formulated and were really quite generally known, it was thought to be a very unusual proceeding on Russia's part to approach China without making some statement regarding Japan.

Cattle Dipping in Texas.

About 3000 head of cattle were dipped in oil in Colorado, Texas, under the personal supervision of J. B. Goodlett, of Quanah, for C. A. O'Keefe. The cattle are not to be moved from the O'Keefe ranch, but were dipped, believing that it would be a benefit to them. Mr. O'Keefe has a large stone dipping vat constructed on his ranch, and is a firm believer in the efficiency of the dip. Mr. Goodlett, who is the State agent for the official dip adopted by the State Live Stock Sanitary Commission, says that an investigation into the situation has convinced him that there is practically no movement of cattle across the line this winter. He thinks there will be a fair movement in the spring, however, when dipping will be generally practiced. Speaking of the recent dipping in crude Texas oil that was done in his home town under federal direction, he says it is a conceded fact that oil will kill the fever ticks, but he does not believe that dipping in oil will ever become general. He says that while the oil may not injure the cattle, yet for the period of about two weeks it transforms them into the most disreputable looking beasts that ever walked the face of the earth. In a fortnight the oil has had time to wear off.—Galveston News.

Queen Victoria's Fad.

Among the many peculiarities of Queen Victoria which I have not seen mentioned by any of her biographers, not even by Mrs. Emily Crawford, was her predilection for organ grinders and for strolling players in general, in whom she used to take a deep interest. When out driving she would frequently stop her carriage and have itinerant musicians whom she saw playing brought to her, and would converse with them and liberally remunerate them, while if their stories seemed out of the usual, she would employ the Palace police and detectives to look after them. In fact, the Queen was a perfect benefactress to the itinerant musician and organ grinder, and as they were allowed to approach her carriage by the police in response to her summons without any special precautions being taken, and were, as a rule, recruited from the lowest classes of the Italians, it must be regarded as singularly fortunate that no advantage was ever taken by the anarchists of this peculiar fad of the aged sovereign to do her an injury.

The Benefit of Horseback Riding.

The great good derived from horseback riding is due to the beneficial effect it has upon the circulation. Many people are chronic invalids because of poor circulation, producing congestion of various vital organs. Horseback riding in the open air when the weather permits, in a well ventilated arena at other times, is an exercise that cannot be surpassed as a health giving and health maintaining treatment. I have had sufficient observation in this direction to convince me of the wonderful efficacy of the horseback riding treatment in many conditions, so that I often prescribe it in preference to many of the other so-called physical culture promotors. Often I have seen weak, delicate anaemic girls develop a robust, healthy constitution the result of properly conducted equestrianism.—New York Medical Journal.

Differences in Hand Writing.

A curious investigation by Alfred Binet, of the Laboratory of the Sorbonne, has revealed differences in the handwriting of the sexes. Numerous characteristics are traced—such as carelessness in the writing of women and firmness and simplicity in that of men—and an expert graphologist has been able to give the sex of the writers of 141 addresses out of 180. The writing of old men resembles that of women.

A Trick of the Snake Charmers.

In a recent volume on the snakes of Egypt, Hippolyte Boussac states that the device referred to in the Scriptures of changing a snake into a rod is still practiced by the snake charmers. They touch the snake at a certain place in the neck, when it falls into a cataleptic condition and becomes straight and stiff. It is then restored to its former condition by taking its tail between the hands and firmly rolling.

An agitation has been commenced in New York for a more uniform system of tea inspection.

CUCUJO: A STRANGE INSECT.

A Firefly That Does Away With the Need of Gaslight.

Have you ever heard of the cucujo? If you are one of those unfortunates who are in the habit of grumbling at gas bills you will wish that the place was swarming with cucujos, so that the gas companies might be circumvented. The cucujo is the firefly of the tropics, and is the most brilliant of the whole tribe of light-giving insects or animals, says the Philadelphia Record. Thirty-eight of them yield one candle power.

Photographs have been printed by two-minute exposure of bromide plates to their illumination. People in Cuba confine them in paper lanterns for going about the country at night or for indoor lighting. Sometimes they attach one of the insects to each foot for traveling in the dark to serve as a guide to the path; also they use them as ornaments for the dress and hair. Cucujos are beetles, beginning life as grubs. Skipjacks, or springtails, they are sometimes called, because when placed on their backs they jump over with a clicking sound.

A small species of the same family is found in Florida and Texas. They have two luminous spots on the thorax and another on the abdomen. Damp evenings are most favorable to the light-giving, the object of which is presumably to attract a mate. The young larvae feed largely on snails, to which their bite is poisonous. The luminous organs are developed before the insects leave the eggs.

Now, a theory formerly held was that these fireflies stored up light in the daytime for emission at night, as is done by the so-called luminous paint of calcium sulphide. But it was found that they shone as brightly as ever after being confined for ten days in darkness. Some that were carried from Cuba to Havre in the pitch-black hold of a vessel were brilliant on their arrival.

A more striking disproof, however, was afforded by a batch of larvae hatched in the dark from eggs laid in the dark in a piece of rotten wood, the young insects being kept in darkness for the first six months of their lives. They shone as brilliantly as any of the other fireflies.

Legend of the Strasburg Clock.

Who knows the queer old legend of the first clock in the famous cathedral at Strasburg, Germany? Here it is.

A canon (please notice it is spelled with only one n and is not a weapon of war) of Strasburg wished very much for a clock that should be worthy of the magnificent cathedral in which he would place it. So he invited the most learned astronomers and the wisest and cleverest mechanics to enter into a competition with each other to produce a clock that would astonish the world. Finally a man came forward who guaranteed to make the most marvelous clock in all the world, and he was permitted to set to work upon his task.

After much delay he pronounced the clock finished. Great crowds gathered to see this wonderful piece of mechanism, and it was indeed a marvel.

A cock perched at the top of a tower flapped his wings a few minutes before the striking of every hour, to warn the faithful to guard against evil spirits. Then a muffled figure intended to represent death came and struck upon a bell as many strokes as the hour required; and an equal number of apostles passed in humble attitude before the figure of the Lord, who placed His hand upon them in blessing. Finally the chariot of the sun showed by its course around the dial the months and the seasons, and the hands pointed out the different parts of the day, the days of the week, the days of the month, the age of the world and the years.

When this wonderful clock met the eyes of the crowd they were filled with amazement and delight. But although it pleased the canons of the church, they were afraid that the inventor might make another one some time for some other church, and then theirs would not be the only one in the world. Consequently they decided upon a hideous plan. They seized the innocent man and put out his eyes, not telling him their motive until the deed was done. When he heard it, he exclaimed, "Oh, you foolish men, what have you done? The clock is not finished; one piece is still wanting which I alone can furnish, and without which it is useless." The man was instantly led to his work, when he seized the main wheel, broke it, and thus stopped the clock forever.

The Conscientious Citizens.

"This conscience doth make cowards of us all," said the thoughtful and sanctimonious citizen as he stepped off a Druid Hill car.

"Yes?" said his friend.

"Now if there's one thing I'm conscientious about, it's extravagance."

"Yes, I noticed that," murmured the friend.

"This morning I started down town id plenty of time to have walked to the office. A car came by me, and, largely through force of habit, but more through man's natural laziness, I hopped it."

"Yes?" said the friend.

"I hadn't any more than got on that car than my conscience began to upbraid me for the unnecessary extravagance in little things. It kept worrying me so much that I was impelled to atone for the reckless step by beating the conductor, and thus saving my nickel after all. Since which time my conscience has been perfectly clear."—Baltimore American.

The annual report of the Western Union Telegraph Company, just issued, shows 80,000 messages transmitted, $29,000,000 earned; net revenue, $8,000,000, and a surplus of $13,000,000.

AGRICULTURAL.

The Pig With a Sore Mouth.

A very troublesome thing the busy farmer has to contend with is sore mouth in little pigs. The only way to prevent this is to take out their little tusks when they are about one day old. It is fighting for the teat that causes this and is very much worse in wet weather than in dry on account of the mud that forms a sore, followed by inflammation and swelling. A very good remedy is to wash off with carbolic acid and warm water, use only a very little carbolic acid.

Pigs For Profit.

A writer in the Tribune Farmer thinks it a waste of feed to keep pigs beyond about seven months of age, when they should weigh 200 or more pounds. It sounds too much like old times to feed pigs to fourteen or fifteen months old, he says. After 200 pounds weight, with the modern pig, the expense to make a pound of pork gradually gets too great to give a desirable profit to the feeder. The greatest profit ends with 175 to 200 pounds weight as they should be grown on the farm.

Catching Sheep.

A sheep should never be caught by its wool. This method not only causes the animal unnecessary pain, but in the case of fat sheep, that are to be killed, it does much harm to the joint of mutton that lies underneath where the wool was pulled. It causes a dark bruise just in the same manner as our bodies become discolored from being bruised. A California sheepman advises that the proper way to catch a sheep is to take it either by the hind leg just above the gambrel joint, or by putting the hand underneath its jaw or neck. In using a crook it is important that the sheep are not caught below the gambrel joint, as injury to the leg is liable to result from this.

Drinking Fountain.

I send you a diagram of a drinking fountain which any tinner can make. Take a gallon syrup can (square); make a small hole about one inch and a half from the bottom, and have a piece of tin soldered on the shape of a half circle, bowed outwards, like the spout of a strainer pail, and the water will come down as fast as the water is used out, keeping the water always clean.—M. Quackenbush, in the Eptomist.

Profits of a Pasture.

Does it pay to use a pasture; that is, will a larger profit be derived from cows that are given exclusively the use of a pasture, or will the same land pay more if used for producing hay? It has been found, after repeated tests, that about four times as much food could be obtained from a meadow by allowing it to produce hay than by pasturing it, which means that four cows can be kept on the land where only one can be kept by pasturing it. One of the drawbacks against using the land for hay, however, is that considerable labor is required in mowing, curing and storing the hay, while the cows on the pasture perform the labor. Also the cows given green food as pasturage produce more milk in the summer season than if kept on hay, and must be given green food in some manner to be profitable.

Decomposition of Manure.

The decomposition of manure depends largely upon the amount of moisture in the heap. When manure is dry the chemical changes occur slowly, but more rapidly when the heap is wet. When manure is mixed with a liberal supply of absorbent materials, and stored under shelter, it will undergo but little change, but when wanted for use it may be decomposed in a short time if saturated with urine. If the bedding used in the stalls is cut fine it will serve the purpose desired fully as well as when uncut, but the main advantage is that the fine material may be more intimately mixed with manure, and will then better absorb the liquids, to say nothing of the easier handling, loading and distribution of the manure on the fields when the season arrives for spreading it.—Philadelphia Record.

Contamination of Well Water.

Manure heaps are responsible for many diseases that appear on farms. Even the well water may become contaminated, though the heap may be some distance from it. Typhoid fever and diphtheria have appeared in families living a mile or more from neighbors, and where it was apparently impossible for the families to be attacked. A French scientist, who investigated diseases on farms in France, found that there was some relation between manure heaps and epidemics of diphtheria. Statistics in Scotland and Prussia show that the rate of mortality from diphtheria is higher in rural districts. It is suggested that all manure should be kept in closed locations, with cement sides and bottoms. If manure is treated with a solution of sulphuric acid before being added to the heap, the bulk of the manure will be reduced and the plant food rendered more soluble, while disease will be prevented to a certain extent. One point to observe is to have the well or water as far from the sources of contamination as possible, the grading being such that no surface water can flow in the direction of the well.

Treatment of Orchards.

Objections have frequently been raised to the use of Bordeaux mixture and other insecticides on orchards because "farmers have not the time to give to the work." The only reply one can make to this objection is that the farmer who can not find the time properly to care for his trees would better cut them down and use the land they occupy for crops which he can find time to cultivate. In objections similar to that given lies the cause for many of the failures in farming and fruit growing.

The best orchardists in the country—those who feed and cultivate the soil in which their trees are standing—recognize the fact that even this good care will not ward off the attacks of insects, and they use the spray as a part of the requisite culture. The man who can not find the time to do all of his farm work properly would find it a good plan to cut off portions of it until the work is well within his capabilities, for he will make more profit than by his present method of working. It is the man who "can not find time" whose fowls roost in the trees and feed around the kitchen door, and who complains that poultry keeping (?) does not pay.

Value of Shredded Fodder.

Ask men who have made a practice of feeding shredded fodder why they do it, and they will tell you that they feed it because their cattle, horses and sheep like it so well, and thrive so well upon it, and because they cannot afford to let it go to waste and feed hay which could be sold for two or three times as much as the prepared fodder costs. When the farmer computes the cost of cutting and shredding his fodder it looks high, but he must remember that, although it does cost him from $2.50 to $3.50 per ton, it takes the place of hay which has a market value of from two to three times that amount. Men who have made a practice of feeding shredded fodder state that it costs from $3 to $5 an acre to prepare it, and that an acre of average corn will yield from one and one-half to two and one-half tons of dry fodder. They say further that a ton of fodder has as much or perhaps more feed value than a ton of average hay. Corn used for shredding is bound and shocked when the grains are well dented and glazed over, but before the stalk has shown much signs of ripening. When thoroughly dry it is run through the husker and shredded and stowed away in the mow.—Iowa Agriculturist.

Colony House.

These houses are six by nine feet in size, five and one-half feet in front, four and one-half feet in the rear, with a shingled roof. They are designed to hold fifteen pullets. They are built of a single thickness of inch pine boards, with two by three inch material for sills, posts and rafters. They weigh about 700 pounds and can be easily moved about the farm. They will be set out in the fields during the summer and moved up close together late in the fall. The houses are placed about fifteen feet apart, and space between roofed and sided at the back. These are so constructed as to utilize for chicken shelters in the summer. A good carpenter will build one house in a day, and including the material and carpenter wages, the houses cost $11 each. The houses are well painted and will last for years. They are also used to put in a brooder in spring. This house is used by G. L. Clemence, of Massachusetts.

Poultry Notes.

Lime well floors and damp places in the poultry runs.

Fowls should be well supplied with fresh, clean water.

Young chickens should be fed many times through the day.

Fowls confined to narrow limits are apt to get too fat if well fed, and they will not lay.

Charcoal is highly recommended for fowls. Put it where they can get it, and they will do the rest.

One breed is enough for the farmer. If more than one is kept they will mix and lose their individuality.

Fowls kept in yards of moderate size suffer less from disease, and lay more eggs than those on free range.

Since the price of beef and pork has gone so high more poultry is being eaten; but the quality must be good.

In raising fowls for market those that are the best layers, the best setters, and mature early, are the best.

Milk is one of the best possible feeds for laying hens, and it would pay to divide it between the pigs and the hens.

While usually a hen becomes less valuable after she is two years old, many will continue laying until four years old.

Sometimes pullets will do more than hens in the way of laying. These should be watched and not sold or killed. They will probably become valuable layers.

Miss Rose Hennessy, well known as a poetess and elocutionist, of Lexington, Ky., tells how she was cured of uterine inflammation and ovaritis by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MISS. PINKHAM:—I have been so blessedly helped through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it but just to acknowledge it, hoping that it may help some other woman suffering as I did.

"For years I enjoyed the best of health and thought that I would always do so. I attended parties and receptions thinly clad, and would be suddenly chilled, but I did not think of the results. I caught a bad cold eighteen months ago while menstruating, and this caused inflammation of the womb and congested ovaries. I suffered excruciating pains and kept getting worse. My attention was called to your Vegetable Compound and the wonderful cures it had performed, and I made up my mind to try it for two months and see what it would do for me. Within one month I felt much better, and at the close of the second I was entirely well.

"I have advised a number of my lady friends to use it, and all express themselves as well satisfied with the results as I was."—Miss ROSE NORA HENNESSY, 410 S. Broadway, Lexington, Ky.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove beyond a question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble and at once, by removing the cause, and restoring the organs to a normal and healthy condition.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—About two years ago I consulted a physician about my health which had become so wretched that I was no longer able to be about. I had severe backache, bearing-down pains, pains across the abdomen, was very nervous and irritable, and this trouble grew worse each month. The physician prescribed for me, but I soon discovered that he was unable to help me, and I then decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and soon found that it was doing me good. My appetite was returning, the pains disappearing, and the general benefits were well marked.

"You cannot realize how pleased I was, and after taking the medicine for only three months, I found that I was completely cured of my trouble, and have been well and hearty ever since, and no more fear the monthly period, as it now passes without pain to me. Yours very truly, Miss PEARL ACKERS, 327 North Summer St., Nashville, Tenn."

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say without trying it "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, do not hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Her advice is free and helpful. Write to-day. Delay may be fatal.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Flowers out of the natural season are usually obtained by keeping the young plants in cold, dry houses, and forcing them later by heat and moisture.

Why do mosquitoes bite human beings? According to Dr. Santos Fernandez, of Cuba, it is because the females cannot form their eggs without sucking some warm blood. If they fail to get it they lay no eggs.

The dog grows for two years and lives for ten or twelve. The cat grows only for about eighteen months and may also live for ten years, in very exceptional cases for twice as long.

The atom of hydrogen is the smallest of the "ultimate atoms" of the chemists, but it is 1780 times as large as the corpuscles which have recently been demonstrated as the elements of the atoms.

A sand worm of the northern and western coasts of France seems to have a sense of time. It is known as "convoluta," and M. Bohn states that it makes green spots on the sand at low tide and disappears as the tide rises, and continued this course during the fourteen days in an aquarium.

Great Britain is to have an habitual criminal law resembling those of some of our states. According to the Daily Mail the plan now under consideration is that of an industrial penal settlement for the special benefit of such "habituals," where special efforts would be made to reform them and opportunity given them of regaining their liberty by industry and good conduct, but only on probation.

A curious investigation by Alfred Binet of the Laboratory of the Sorbonne has revealed differences in the handwriting of the sexes. Numerous characteristics are traced—such as carelessness in the writing of women and firmness and simplicity in that of men—and an expert graphologist has been able to give the sex of the writers of 141 addresses out of 180. The writing of old men resembles that of women.

CINEMATOGRAPH IN SURGERY.

The Machine Improved So as to Seem to Throw Moving Objects in Relief.

The cinematograph, in addition to its many other uses, is now adapted to the clinic. The machine commonly displayed has, however, been improved upon for the surgeon by the addition of an ingenious appliance by which photographic projections seem to be thrown upon the screen with the relief that accompanies the same scene in nature.

This has been done in Paris. To look at the picture of a surgeon performing an operation as it is thrown upon the screen it exhibits no special peculiarity.

But when the same picture is examined through a small apparatus consisting of two aluminum plates with some mechanism between apertures for the eyes, there are seen plainly as in life all the details of the operation. The illusion is so perfect that the man looking at it might almost imagine himself present at the operation.

The value of the apparatus, which is the invention of Dr. Doyen, a French surgeon, is that it is possible with its aid to display before the eyes of almost any number of students typical surgical operations in their minutest details and in the most life-like aspect.

Later it is expected to be able to affix the apparatus to opera glasses so that it may be used in the same manner with ordinary cinematograph pictures. The invention has received warm praise from several learned societies in London before which it has been exhibited.—New York Sun.

British Birds for Canada.

An attempt on a large scale to introduce English song birds into British Columbia is at present being made. The Victoria (B. C.) Natural History society is taking out from England about 500 birds, consisting of 100 pairs of goldfinches, 100 pairs of larks, and 50 pairs of robins. They go by way of New York to Victoria. In accordance with the arrangements that have been made, half of the consignment will be placed in Vancouver and taken care of there until next spring when they will be distributed throughout the woodlands of the lower mainland. The remainder will be placed in Beacon Hill Park aviary and kept until spring when they will be given their liberty at various points on Vancouver island. It will be very interesting to hear if this extensive scheme of acclimatization proves a success.

Submarine Hotel in France.

A submarine hotel near Perdun, on the south coast of France, is proving a great attraction. Quite a number of guests are entertained there during the summer months. The building is of steel on a rock foundation, and has been fitted with large plate glass windows, from which the guests may look out on the peculiar form of life under the water at a depth of 36 feet. Machinery at the surface pumps air into the rooms for those visiting below, and at the same time drives away the impure air through draft tubes. It was in this hotel that the famous novelist Richebourg wrote some of his best stories when taking his annual vacation.

WOMEN ARE ESPECIALLY LIABLE TO COLDS

Colds Invariably Result in Catarrh, Which Sets Up a Host of Distressing Diseases.

PE-RU-NA Both Protects and Cures a Cold---Read Proof.

Miss Rose Gordon, 2102 Oakland av., Oakland Heights, Madison, Wis., writes:

"A few years ago I caught a severe cold, which resulted in chronic bronchitis and catarrh. Our family physician prescribed medicines which gave temporary relief only. I began taking Peruna and improved at once. Two bottles cured me. I recommend Peruna to all sufferers, and am most grateful to you for your valuable medicine."—Miss Rose Gordon.

Washington, D.C., 609 H street, N.W. Dear Dr. Hartman: "I used to think that the doctors knew all about our aches and pains and were the proper ones to consult when sick, but since I have been sick myself I certainly had good reason to change my mind. During the winter I caught a heavy cold, which developed into catarrh of the bronchial tubes and an inflamed condition of the respiratory organs. The doctors were afraid that pneumonia would set in and prescribed pills, powders and packs until I sickened of the whole thing, as I did not improve. One of the ladies in the Home had a bottle of Peruna and she advised me to try that. Shortly after I began using it I felt that I had found the right medicine. I used two bottles and they restored me easily and pleasantly to perfect health. While my stomach was very delicate, Peruna did not nauseate me in the least, but gave me a good appetite, and I wish to express my gratitude to you for restored health."—Miss Rosalie Von Struensing.

CATCHING COLD

There is no fact of medical science better established than that a teaspoonful of Peruna before each meal during the winter season will absolutely protect a person from catching cold. Now, if this is true (and there is no doubt of it), thousands of lives would be saved, and tens of thousands of cases of chronic catarrh prevented, by this simple precaution within reach of every one.

After a cold has been contracted a teaspoonful of Peruna every hour will shortly cure it, leaving no trace of it behind. After chronic catarrh has become established, or the first stages of chronic bronchitis or consumption have been reached, it will take much longer to effect a cure.

It seems strange that these well known and well established facts are any one should neglect to profit by them, and yet no doubt there are many who pay little or no attention to them and go on catching cold, acquiring chronic catarrh, bronchitis and consumption.

Catarrh May Permeate the Whole System.

Mrs. Mary E. Sampson, West Derry, Rockingham County, N. H., writes:

I had terrible headaches, both ears run and I was nervous all the time, so as to trouble each month. I had in one ear for thirty years. I took six bottles of Peruna and one of Manalin, and am happy to say that it is the best medicine that I ever used. I am not so nervous, my appetite is good, everything I eat agrees with me, and I am feeling better in every way. I think Peruna as a godsend to women and a blessing to suffering humanity."—Mary E. Sampson.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE OPINION OF JOHN IN THE BACKWOODS.

Clanton, Ala., Jan. 29, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me to say two or three words in your valuable paper. I don't know that what I say will be worth anything to the people, but I want to say it. I am out in the woods, and the only reason I am not wild is because the rural free delivery mail carrier comes around each day except Sunday and tells me that we live in a civilized country, and when I get the Banner once a week, and the children read and I listen, and I feel more and more like a citizen, taxpayer and a voter. But why should I vote, and how should I vote, are questions that bothers me and the old 'oman more than all our money, with its interest, and the old 'oman axed me a question that knocked me sideways. She said John, you may think I am taking a step out of my place, but am gwine to tell you that you ain't got no sense about voting. I said, look here, old gal, who are you talking to? and she said I am talking to a fool, and I said explain yourself, and she said I will, and here's what I've got to say, John. Away back yonder, ten or twelve years ago, the white people, all Democrats, fell out, and in the election that followed one side counted the other out, and you and your crowd were counted out, and you fought that method. I say you did right then, for (t e) you showed some resentment and I commend you for that. But the trouble with you and your crowd is you haven't got sense enough to know when to quit, you don't seem to understand that the cause of the trouble is over, and you do not seem to know that you and your crowd are out of business. I know that your crowd can no more elect a State officer or a congressman than a whiskey seller can be elected president of a temperance society, and I know, and I am nothing but an old 'oman, that you are making it hard for your county, for the State authorities are all against you, both judicial and legislative, all are against you, and here is our boy John, he wants to be a public man and to be a useful citizen and have influence for good in the State, and your course in politics will lead him wrong; and when we married, John, I thought you had sense, and could see an inch or two ahead. And I said old 'oman, I am still opposed to ballot box stuffin'. Yes, I just now told you I was talking to a fool. Who is trying or professing to stuff baloit boxes? That question is settled, and not a man or a newspaper in all the land advocates ballot box stuffing, so everybody is with you on that subject, and why do you insist on keeping alive the dead past. Jefferson Davis was President of the Southern States, but when the Confederacy fell he admitted it, he did not keep on fighting and rebelling after the question was settled, and every Confederate soldier, and every General quit when the flag went down, and they all went back into the Union. And don't you see that they would have been the biggest fools on the world if they had fought on after the war was over, but they had sense enough to know that the jig was up and there would have been just as much sense in these men fighting the Union army after the war, as there is in you fellows fighting the Democratic party. And besides this, John, you always claimed to be a Democrat, and you said that you were supporting Kolb when he was running for governor as a Jefferson Democrat, in fact, that is what your crowd called themselves, and now why don't you fellows come back? I say come back because I never was anything but a Democrat. I am a white woman, Southern born, and I can never be anything but a Democrat. Why, John, every time I look into a school house and see that the children are all white, I am glad I am a Democrat, and when I ride on the railroad, I have no fears that I will sit down by a negro, for a Democratic legislature made the law that puts them in a separate car. And, John, when I married you I never thought that you would help either directly or indirectly a crowd that would, if they could, enact such laws as would mix our schools, the people on the railroad trains, and churches. And John you need not tell me that there is no danger, for they have mixed schools in Kansas and other states where the Republicans are in charge and they ride together in the cars, and sit side by side in theatres, and no Democrat told me this. I saw it myself when I was out there to see our gal. Now, John, if you've got any sense and want to keep your promise that you made when we married you will quit your foolishness, and come into the Democratic primary and vote and work for your own people, and let the Yankees and the negro stay on their own side. How a woman can be anything but a Democrat is a mystery to an old 'oman in the back woods. I am going hereafter with the old 'oman and the white folks.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical science have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

SOLICITOR TATE DECLINES

thereto, I shall exercise my right to publish the same.

Yours truly,
J. M. HOLLEY.

Wetumpka, Ala., Jan. 26, 1904

J. M. Holley, Esq., City.

Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of yours of the 25th inst., in which you refuse to meet me in a joint discussion of our respective claims for the nomination as Solicitor of the 15th Circuit. I am sorry that you still refuse.

As to my stating that I had the endorsement of the bar of Autauga and Chilton, this was done merely to inform you that the bar of these two counties, recognizing the justice of my claim, had not put forward a candidate.

I recognize the fact that the voters in the primary will have not only "something to say," but ALL TO SAY in the choice of a candidate; and it is to the people that both your claims and mine must be submitted. I have believed this so strongly, that I have been making every effort in my power, since the campaign began, to get you on the stump with me so that the people might see and hear us both, but you have continuously refused to meet me, and you still refuse.

I note your suggestion that you would meet me in joint discussion, if we could get up another and different primary from the one fixed by the State Democratic Executive Committee, in which primary Autauga and Chilton counties should have no voice. This is only another way you have of refusing a joint discussion with me, because you know that there is no way of doing the thing you suggest, except by a special election for the purpose.

There is no reason for supposing that our county committee would call any such special election, as it would entail a vast lot of trouble and expense, with no purpose in view, that concerned the welfare of the county, the circuit, or the Democratic party.

Personally, I am satisfied with the primary which the State Executive Committee has fixed. Besides this, your proposition embodies what I consider a gross discourtesy, and injustice to Autauga and Chilton counties.

These two counties are generous enough to put forward no candidate of their own, and yet you propose to hold a "snap" primary and not permit the voters of Autauga and Chilton counties to even join Elmore in nominating an Elmore county man.

I have no fear as to the result of a primary in Elmore county, but I will not consent to repay the generosity of Autauga and Chilton in not putting forward a candidate, by any such discourtesy and injustice as I conceive your suggestion to be.

You are the only candidate opposing me; we are both Elmore county men. I think it fair to the people that we should present our claims face to face. Surely if you think you are stronger with the people of Elmore county than I, that your cause is more just, you should not hesitate to face the people of Elmore county with me. We are lawyers and accustomed to public speaking and we owe it to the people.

I am not only willing to put our correspondence, but glad to do so for the information of the people of Elmore and the entire circuit.

My proposition to you, to a joint debate in every precinct in Elmore county and of the, either or both, remains open until the 1st of March, at which time I must assume my official duties.

I hope you will reconsider your refusal to meet me.

Very respectfully,
F. L. TATE.

VOL. XII | CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1904 | NO. 17

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Where, oh where is mine leetle dog gone.
Oh where, oh where can he be,
With his tail cut off and his ears cut long
Oh where, oh where, is he?

This is a tale of a dog, and a dog'on tale it is. There have been many cases of mistaken identity of persons, but the latest cause celebre is a doggy one, with the end of the dog cut off. Dr. V. O. Campbelle of China Grove was the proud owner of a pointer dog named Frank. That's pointer No. 1. Doc Robinson, who lives near Jemison, is, or was, the proud possessor of a pointer dog named Hank. That's pointer No 2. Doc Robinson says that Dr. Campbelle has got his dog, and Campbelle says it ain't so, therefore they carry themselves and the case before Justice Deason, and hang with them they also carry about thirty witnesses, all more or less experts on the dog question. Some swore positively the dog was Dr. Campbelle's and others swore with equal positiveness that the dog belonged to Doc Robinson. Hugh Foshee, who is an expert zoologist, declares the dog is Campbelle's, and Mr. Averytt of Selby, who is an out-and out dog-man, says he knows the dog is Doc Robinson's. Such a dog'on mixing up of dogs and evidence the world has seldom seen, and Justice Deason, who we all know is not much of a dog man himself, is nearly driven crazy with the dog'on question, and asked for time in which to arrive at a verdict. All I know about this, if the dog ain't Frank he's [illegible], and if he ain't Frank and he ain't Hank then it stands to reason there must be another dog altogether.

The Japs and the Russians have gone to fighting, and the Japs drew first blood. Two Russian battleships and one cruiser rendered helpless at the first blow is a good score for the little brown men.

1146 is the number of those who have paid poll tax in Chilton county. This is well up to the average in the State, and gives Chilton something over 2000 qualified voters.

With a show and merry-go-rouud in town the amusement bill has been well filled.

PRIVILEGE TAX NOTICE

I again call attention of the people having mortgages recorded to the privilege tax. I can't file the papers under the new revenue law until tax is paid. China Grove, Ala., Jan. 30, 1904
Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words. I have arrived on my work and have made one round. I have one church in Bullock county, one in Pike and one in Crenshaw. But bless the Lord we have, I believe, some of the best people in the world on Charter Oak. I am living in Pike county, near China Grove. The people are kind, of course Christian people are always kind. We held our first quarterly conference at Brooks Chaple Saturday before the third Sunday in January. To my surprise, as I was on my way to Brooks, a good Brother Williford overtook me and told me to go back to my home, although I had not moved, and I found a nice dinner prepared, had a pleasant day with the good people. Dear Editor, let me express my love to the brethren of Chilton and the dear old Banner. I am taking the Banner, wherever I may go I will be compelled to take the Banner. We have three good churches. The good brothers are helping us in every way they can. But one thing we are having is a nice time killing bats down here. After preaching in the afternoon the third Sunday we went to hear our good Bro. M. E. preacher, and heard a fine short sermon. I will have to close, hoping Bro. Lynch success in Chilton.

Yours truly,
J. W. GIBSON, Pastor.

Riderville, Feb. 8, 1904
Editor Banner—Please give me space in your paper for a few words. We are glad to hear the announcement of Mr. E. B. Deason for Probate Judge. While Chilton county has never had any right to complain at that office, we have every reason to believe that Mr. Deason will fill the office, if elected, with as much honor as any man could, he is an honest hearted Christian gentleman, well worthy of the title of Judge. Besides this he is one of Chilton's brightest and best boys of whom we are justly proud. We do not think he will have any opposition in Beat 8. But, of course, we do not know it all. There are a few kicking Pops. yet that do not know that the war of the two parties is over. So they are still fighting under the influence of a few chronic office seekers. Well, boys, the flag is down, the flag bearers are about all dead, the big guns are stacked until next war breaks out. So we beg you to come back into the union, as nobody is agitating ballot box stuffing now, and there was never anything else to fight.

Measles are thick in this neck of the woods and some cases of smallpox have been reported.

The people were excited last Monday eve, the town was not on fire, no one had been killed, no one even hurt. Uncle Richard Gaines and aunt Puss Hughes was the cause of it, with the aid of Revd I. Windsor they were quietly married at the hotel. The bride is an estimable old lady, loved by all who know her. Uncle Richard is an honest upright man, well known throughout this section of the State and is at present one of the registrars for this county. We wish them much happiness.

Had a curfew law been in effect in this town prior to last Saturday night the mayor court would not have been crowded last Monday morning. Quite a number of our young bloods (four in No.) returned from Thorsby overloaded with wine. The consequences were one dollar and costs for the four young men in the mayors court Monday. A curfew law prohibits all under the age of eighteen from roaming our streets after 8 o'clock would to some extent remedy the above.

A Springfield man has invented a machine for weaving cloth from wire, announces the Boston Advertiser. Does this mean that at last the small boy is to have clothing that he cannot wear out?

As a result of litigation 7236 acres of land may be transferred from Texas to Oklahoma. A little patch of ground like this would hardly seem worth bothering with in that region of magnificent areas.

Unselfish friends of the St. Louis World's Fair hope there is no truth in current reports that there will be lack of comfortable hotel hospitality there at reasonable prices. Missouri ought to do her utmost to improve her magnificent opportunities; but the time is brief, and much remains to be accomplished.

Every man, woman and child in the United States took, on an average, sixty-three rides on the street cars last year, according to a recent repog of the census bureau. That was thirty-one rides more than they had taken in 1899.

The people of New York spent over $4,000,000 in the last season to see whether one horse could run faster than another, and the state was enriched by more than $200,000 paid in taxes on the receipts of the tracks. All of which would be accepted by the Turks and the Chinese as conclusive evidence of the Caucasion's insanity.

Writing on the subject of duck-hunting, Mr. Cleveland observes: "If it be said that the gratification of bringing down ducks pays for all the suffering of their pursuit, the question obtrudes itself: How is this compensation forth-coming in the stress of bad luck or no luck, and how is it that the duck-hunting propensity survives all conditions and fortunes."

The cities and towns of Nebraska are said to be fast filling up with farmers and their families, who have retired from agricultural pursuits this year in order to take life easy and educate their children. Prosperity has prevailed on the farms for five or six years, and the farmers of the west are showing their philosophical view of life by retiring before they are too old to enjoy the fruits of their toil.

Examination of the French archives shows that Great Britain could have had Louisiana territory from Louis XV. if she had wanted it, but it will probably never be known whether it was shrewd foresight or mere good luck that saved her the additional trouble and expense of letting go of it when we should conclude it was necessary to us in our governmental business.

The contests of the collegians even a quarter of a century ago brought together multitudes of gratified and enthusiastic spectotors, says the New York Tribune. But 1903 in many fields of endeavor has excelled records to an extent that has caused a general rubbing of eyes and countless gasps of amazement. It is a striking feature of this memorable year that the attendance at several of the competitions in which our best known universities took part surpassed all preceding figures. The financial managers of football are especially jubilant, and have so much cash on hand that the calls for subscriptions to meet expenses may be comparatively easy in 1904.

The proclivity of the oyster to make its home on anything that comes handy is very well shown in photographs of oyster curios in the possession of the United States fish commission at Washington, comments the Scientific American. Undoubtedly the most curious instance of oyster lodgment is that showing a bivalve reposing on a set of false teeth. This particular set of teeth, which was dredged up from the bottom of Chesapeake bay, has had several claimants since it was put on exhibition. The facility with which oysters attach themselves to leather is shown by the pictures of a child's shoe and an old boot, both very well covered; while the colony of these mollusks established upon an old lantern, shows how useful such objects may still be below the surface when their mission above it has been accomplished.

BURNED AT THE STAKE.

Negro and His Wife Meet Terrible Fate in Mississippi.

A special from Doddville, Miss., says:

Luther Holbert and his wife, negroes, were burned at the stake Sunday by a mob of over 1,000 persons for the killing of James Eastland, a prominent white planter, and John Carr, a negro, on Wednesday morning at the Eastland plantation.

The burning of Holbert and his wife closes a tragedy which has cost eight lives, has engaged two hundred men and two packs of bloodhounds in a four days' chase across four counties.

The dead are:

Luther Holbert and wife, negroes, burned at the stake by mob; James Eastland, white planter, killed by Holbert; John Carr, negro, killed by Holbert; John Winters, negro, killed by Eastland; three unknown negroes killed by possea.

The killing of Eastland, Carr and Winters occurred Wednesday morning at Eastland's plantation. Holbert and Winters were in Carr's cabin when Eastland entered and ordered Holbert to leave the plantation. A difficulty ensued, in which it is alleged that Holbert opened fire on Eastland, fatally wounding him and killing Carr. Eastland returned the fire and killed Winters.

When news of the tragedy reached Doddsville, a posse was formed and left immediately for Eastland's plantation. Arriving there, further shooting occurred, and an unknown negro was killed. Holbert and his wife, who had donned men's clothing, both heavily armed, had fled.

The 16-year-old son of Holbert, who was held on suspicion of complicity in the killing of Eastland, was given his freedom, his innocence being established.

It is reported that the sight of the pope is failing.

Sunday will be St. Valentine's day.

GROUND BROKEN

For New Street Car Manufacturing Plant at Ensley.

Near Ensley, Ala., ground was broken Saturday for the plant of the Southern Street Car Manufacturing Company's plant. The site of the proposed industry is between Ensley and Pratt City. The main structure of the plant will be two stories, 300 by 300 feet, and will be used as the shops proper. The management of the company has decided not to erect a commissary building. The cost of the original plant is estimated at $100,000.

The company was organized with a capital of $50,000, but it is soon to be increased to $500,000. The product will be street cars. The plant will give employment to 300 skilled workmen to begin with. Later on the number will be increased to 1,000, and after everything gets in full running order it is the intention of the management to employ 2,000 men.

The senate has passed a bill authorizing Robert A. Chapman, of Alabama, his associates and assigns, to use the waters of the Coosa river, in Alabama, for the purpose of generating electricity. It is provided that Chapman and his associates are authorized to construct a dam across the Coosa river at Lock No. 25, 26, 27 or 28, and that the plans for the same be submitted to the secretary of war for his approval. The act is to be void if the work on the dam shall not be commenced within two years from its approval.

BALTIMORE BURNING

Three Square Miles a Waste Loss $50,000,000.

Fire which broke out before noon Sunday morning in the business district of Baltimore has raged with unrestrained fury ever since, and at midnight was still unchecked and steadily eating its way, after having destroyed almost all of the large stores and ware houses in the wholesale district, including a total of about twenty blocks of the most modern and substantial buildings in the city, involving a loss which can not now be estimated, but which has certainly already reached $30,000,000 or $40,000,000.

Ever since darkness came the fire department, although aided by engines from Washington, Philadelphia, Wilmington and the surrounding suburbs, has been utterly powerless to make any effective resistance, though for hours as many as 400 streams of water were thrown into the flames.

Indeed, so terrible was the heat and so dense and suffocating the volume of flying sparks and burning cinders, that it was difficult for the firemen to stand along within fighting distance of the flames, while early in the afternoon several trucks and engines were hopelessly disabled by timbers, and at night the dynamiting of buildings in the path of the fire was resorted to to stop the spread of the flames.

Militia is patroling the streets. No casualties are reported as yet. All the newspaper offices are burned out and wires are nearly all cut.

A dispatch received at 2 a. m. says the fire is still raging fiercely. The postoffice building is burning, also the $4,000,000 court house. The Holliday theater has been blown up with dynamite and the United States express offices and central offices of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad are burned.

LABORERS CLASH

And Four Are Dead and Three Wounded—Troops Called Out.

A bloody tragedy was enacted Sunday in the little mining town of Coal Creek, Tenn., forty miles northwest of Knoxville, as the result of which four lives were snuffed out and three persons wounded, one perhaps fatally. The clash was the culmination of trouble between union and non-union labor.

Three of the dead men were killed by guards employed by the Coal Creek Coal company, while the fourth victim, a deputy sheriff, was killed by a guard he had gone to arrest.

The dead are: Monroe Black, W. W. Taylor, Jacob Sharp and Deputy Sheriff Robert Harmon.

The wounded are: A. R. Watts, merchant at Coal Creek, a bystander; Mote Cox and Jeff Hopkins.

The guards claim that they were forced to shoot and had sufficient provocation. Sheriff Moore has asked for troops, in view of resultant excitement, and Governor Frazier has wired Lieutenant Colonel Spence, of the Second battalion of the Third regiment, Knoxville, to have his men in readiness to go to the scene.

Death Sentence Imposed.

The jury in the case of George B. Warner, on trial for the murder of Pulaski Leeds, superintendent of machinery for the Louisville and Nashville railroad, returned a verdict of guilty and fixed the penalty at death. The defense was insanity. An appeal will be taken.

Two New Stations.

In Mississippi the establishment of two new agricultural experiment stations is assured by the action of the house in passing the two senate bills providing for a station in the red clay soil region of the state and another in some part of the Yazoo-Mississippi delta.

Reyes is President.

A dispatch from Buena Ventura announces that General Reyes was elected president of Colombia on February 2d. Gonzales-Velencia was elected vice president.

E. R. L. Gould has been appointed receiver for Baxter & Co. and his bond fixed at $50,000.

According to the report of Assistant Examiner Wilkinson, the lands of Choctaw county are assessed at the lowest rate for taxation of the lands in any county of Alabama. Mr. Wilkinson says that the lands of the county are assessed at an average value of $2 per acre, which is an increase in four years from $1.56 per acre. The assessed valuation is declared to be 40 per cent less than it should be. The report shows the county to be well officered, no mistakes of consequence having been discovered.

Madison county, Alabama, has asked for a United States government agricultural experiment station.

Stove Factory.

Selma, Ala., is to have a $20,000 stove factory. The stock has all been taken and a meeting called for the purpose of perfecting the organization. The factory will be established at once and stoves will be made ready for the fall trade.

The city engineer of Ensley, Ala., is arranging the lines for the new sewer.

THIS WILL BRING HIM

Uncle Sam Gets After Harding on Mail Charges.

Leroy C. Harding, alias Ed Blazer, alias C. D. Ray, now under arrest in Florida and for whom Governor Jennings refuses to give up the proper requisition papers, will be brought to Gadsden by the United States authorities.

A warrant was sworn out before United States Commissioner Pickard for the arrest of Harding on the charge of using the mails for the purpose of defrauding.

The warrant was properly drawn and has been sent to United States officers at Brooksville, Fla., who have authority to arrest Harding.

Governor Jennings, of Florida, will have a supplementary report on the case of L. C. Harding, the DeKalb county bank embezzler. While the governor of Alabama has not been officially notified that the governor of Florida has refused to honor the requisition papers for Harding, it has been indicated by the Alabama agent that such action was taken, and presumably upon the ground that the indictment against Harding was not properly drawn.

The indictment, however, is drawn in accordance with the statutes of Alabama, and to make this point stronger with the Florida executive, Governor Jelks caused to be forwarded to Governor Jennings an affidavit from Solicitor Hunt, of the seventh circuit, to the effect that the indictment is properly drawn.

It is claimed and admitted that Ray bore the name of Harding in Fort Payne, Ala., where he was president of the People's Bank and Trust Company; that the firm of Zorn & Co., of Louisville, Ky., sent to the bank an account with bill of lading attached for grain bought by a company of which Harding was a member; that the bill of lading was detached and the grain delivered and never paid for, the bank having failed. Harding admits the indebtedness and says he was only technically responsible. He swore that he never received a cent of the money, either directly or indirectly.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT

Suspected by a Man Upon Residence of His Divorced Wife.

H. L. Scott, a white man, is charged with assault with intent to murder by placing an explosive bomb under the residence of his divorced wife, Mrs. Lula Scott, in Birmingham.

In the house at the time were Mrs. Scott, Tom Spitzer and his wife and little daughter, Lillie May. All were shocked more or less by the explosion, and Mr. and Mrs. Spitzer were rendered unconscious for a few minutes.

Matthew Christian, a negro, was arrested as he was running from the house. He was unable to give a satisfactory account of himself and was locked up.

Navy Enlargement.

Admiral Dewey's suggestion in favor of heavy fighting ships for the navy prevailed with the house committee on naval affairs over the recommendation of the general board submitted by Secretary Moody. The naval appropriation bill was completed by the committee carries an aggregate appropriation of $95,000,000. The appropriation of $500,000 made last year for two submarine boats was reappropriated.

Provision was made for an armor plate factory to cost $4,000,000, which the secretary of the navy is authorized to construct in case he can not secure armor satisfactory from private bidders at a reasonable price.

The United States steamer Leota has been thoroughly overhauled and fitted out with a battery of new boilers at Gadsden, Ala., and will return to the government works below Greensport next week.

Governor Jennings, of Florida, has refused to honor the requisition of Governor Jelks, of Alabama, for the extradition of L. C. Harding, the bank wrecker.

Alabama Pig Iron North.

The Philadelphia Ledger says:

An industrial war is on between the southern and southern manufacturers of pig iron, and unless it shall be soon settled, iron merchants say, its effects will be felt here.

In the region of the Schuylkill valley furnaces, where great quantities of pig iron are produced, loads of the product from Alabama are being dumped on the market and sold at figures far below those asked by the western Pennsylvania manufacturers. This, too, in face of the fact that the southern product must be hauled more than 1,500 miles from the Alabama furnaces at a freight rate of about $4.35 per ton. Schuylkill valley manufacturers are marveling at the cheapness with which the southern pig iron can be produced. They are utterly powerless to reduce the prices of their own product. The result is that the southern producers have the field practically to themselves, and with no fear of competition from the Pennsylvania manufacturers, they are selling their product for what they can get right under the noses of the northern producers.

LOSS OF MILLIONS

Sunday Blaze Starts in Heart of Maryland's Metropolis and Cuts a Wide Swath of Destruction.

The most dest[ructive] in the history of [Baltimore] Sunday and Sunday night [was] fully unchecked during many hours, completely destroying scores of large business houses in the wholesale district, involving losses which cannot be accurately estimated.

The fire broke out shortly before 12 o'clock Sunday morning in the wholesale dry goods store of John E. Hurst & Co., on Hopkins place, in the heart of the business district, with a series of loud explosions, which were heard in remote parts of the city and spread with fearful rapidity.

In a half hour there were a dozen large warehouses in the wholesale dry goods and notions district burning fiercely.

The entire city fire department was called out, but was utterly powerless to check the spread of the flames, which were aided by high winds, and by noon there were roaring fires in at least thirty big warehouses and the conflagration was steadily eating its way into successive blocks east, north, west and south.

Building after building fell a prey to the flames, and apparently there was no check to the frightful sweep of destruction.

On Baltimore street, the block east to Hanover, and after that the block on the south side to Charles street broke out in flames, the Consolidated Gas Company's building and Odhm hall burning fiercely.

Meanwhile there were stores north of Baltimore street being similarly consumed. Mullin's hotel caught and other buildings near it. West of Liberty street, on the south side of Baltimore, the block was doomed, and the big Baltimore Bargain House [illegible] caught. Down in Hopkins place where the conflagration started Hurst's building and other wholesale houses on both sides of the street crumbled and fell.

Spectacle of Ruin Appalling.

The big dry goods house of Daniel Miller & Sons and R. M. Sutton & Co. were seen aflame and along Germain street, east and west from the Hurst building, there were a dozen buildings burning and scores more threatened. The spectacle of ruin and destruction from any point in these doomed blocks were something appalling.

Mass & Kemper's big wholesale store, on Baltimore stret, quickly succumbed to the flames and the wall fell with a crash that was heard for squares. The Hurst building was utterly destroyed.

On Hopkins place the Hopkins Savings bank and the National Exchange bank were gutted by flames, while across the street were the ruins of John E. Hurst & Co., and next to J. Hecht, Jr., & Sons, in flames. Adjoining was the large building owned by the William Hoch Importing Company, which was also destroyed.

Across the street the Stanley Brown Drug Company was quickly in flames, while fronting on the Baltimore street side of this block were the Rock Rye Distilling Company,

GREAT FIRE IN BALTIMORE!

Wholesale District of City is Wiped Out in Mammoth Conflagration.

A LOSS OF MILLIONS

Sunday Blaze Starts in Heart of Maryland's Metropolis and Cuts a Wide Swath of Destruction.

The most destructive conflagration in the history of Baltimore occurred Saturday and Sunday night, raging practically unchecked during many hours, completely destroying scores of the largest houses in the wholesale district, involving losses which cannot yet be accurately estimated.

The fire broke out shortly before 11 o'clock Sunday morning in the wholesale dry goods store of John E. Hurst & Co., on Hopkins place, in the heart of the business district, with a series of loud explosions, which were heard in remote parts of the city and spread with fearful rapidity.

In a half hour there were a dozen big warehouses in the wholesale dry goods and notions district burning fiercely.

The entire city fire department was called out, but was utterly powerless to check the spread of the flames, which were aided by high winds, and by noon there were roaring fires in at least thirty big warehouses and the conflagration was steadily eating its way into successive blocks east, north, west and south.

Building after building fell a prey to the flames, and apparently there was no check to the frightful sweep of destruction.

On Baltimore street, the block east to Hanover, and after that the block on the south side to Charles street, broke out in flames, the Consolidated Gas Company's building and Oehm's Acme hall burning fiercely.

Meanwhile there were stores north of Baltimore street being similarly consumed. Mullin's hotel caught and other buildings near it. West of Liberty street, on the south side of Baltimore, the block was doomed, and the big Baltimore Bargain House also caught. Down in Hopkins place, where the conflagration started, Hurst's building and other wholesale houses on both sides of the street, crumbled and fell.

Spectacle of Ruin Appalling.

The big dry goods house of Daniel Miller & Sons and R. M. Sutton & Co. were seen aflame and along German street, east and west from the Hurst building, there were a dozen buildings burning and scores more threatened. The spectacle of ruin and destruction from any point in these doomed blocks were something appalling.

Mass & Kemper's big wholesale store, on Baltimore stret, quickly succumbed to the flames and the walls fell with a crash that was heard for squares. The Hurst building was utterly destroyed.

On Hopkins place the Hopkins Savings bank and the National Exchange bank were gutted by flames, while across the street were the ruins of John E. Hurst & Co., and next to it S. Hecht, Jr., & Sons, in flames. Adjoining was the large building owned by the William Hoch Importing Company, which was also destroyed.

Across the street the Stanley & Brown Drug Company was quickly in ruins, while fronting on the Baltimore street side of this block were the Roxbury Rye Distilling Company, the building occupied by Silberman & Todes, the house of Allen Sons & Co., which had hardly been completed, while next to it was the establishment of M. Moses & Co. On the corner was the building occupied by the Messrs. Sugar & Shear, and several other smaller concerns. All of these were swallowed up in the flames, and, in fact, the whole block was nothing but a cauldron of fire.

At 1:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon Mullens' hotel, a seven-story structure, was in flames from garret to cellar and its great height and narrowness, which acted as a sort of flue, converted the doomed building into a huge and dreadful torch.

Other Cities Send Aid.

Though every bit of fire fighting apparatuus in the city was called into requisition as the flames continued to spread the firemen realized that they had a task before them which was too great for them to combat. Telegrams for fire engines were sent to Washington and Philadelphia and about 1 o'clock six engines arrived from Washington and four from Philadelphia and joined in the battle with the flames.

Engines from stations in Baltimore, Howard, Anne, Arundel and Hartford counties arrived as soon as possible. Water plugs in every section within a radius of half a mile from the fire were in use, and it is roughly estimated that there were 350 hose lines all playing at one time upon different parts of the conflagration.

Owing to the great congestion of fire apparatus, the crowds of people and the general confusion, many engines from out of town were unable to find a place where they would be of any service.

At 7 o'clock Sunday night the situation was so desperate that Chief Hoston decided that the only thing left to do was to dynamite buildings at threatened points and thus prevent, as far as possible, a further spread of the flames.

At 3 o'clock Monday morning the fire still raged. So far as known no serious casualties were reported. Telegraph, telephone and electric wires of all kinds were prostrated.

The fire covered an area of three-quarters of a mile in length by nearly a quarter of a mile in width, taking in many of the most important buildings in the city. The loss, it is believed, will reach $100,000,000.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

FEBRUARY 3RD.

After almost allowing the amendment to the urgency deficiency appropriation bill providing for a loan of $4,600,000 to the St. Louis exposition to get through without any discussion whatever, the senate changed its tactics just as the vote was about to be taken, and began a debate on the loan provision which continued for about four hours, and was still in progress when the senate adjourned for the day.

The debate was precipitated by a point of order made against the amendment by Mr. Bailey, who maintained that the national government was not, as such, concerned with the success or failure of any exposition.

Indiana and Kentucky locked horns in the house. The debate, which involved nearly every member of both state delegations, was fast and furious. Kentucky demanded of Indiana the return of W. S. Taylor, that he might be tried for the assassination of William Goebel.

The attack was made by Mr. James, of Kentucky, and the defense was led by Mr. Crumpacker, of Indiana. The diplomatic appropriation bill was under consideration at the time, with Mr. Lacey, of Iowa, in the chair.

FEBRUARY 4TH.

The senate chamber again was the arena of political debate with the provision in the urgent deficiency bill for a loan of $4,600,000 for the St. Louis exposition the basis for the discussion.

The resolutions introduced by Mr. Tillman making inquiry of the secretary of the treasury concerning the appointment of W. D. Crum as collector of the port of Charleston, and directing the senate committee on judiciary to make an inquiry as to what constitutes a recess appointment to office, were taken up.

Mr. Tillman claimed that in the Crum case the statute had been violated and in the case of General Wood the constitution had been opposed.

He further said that Crum was not a fit man for the position and that the community had made many protests against his selection.

The judiciary committee will report to the senate what constitutes a recess and what recess appointments are.

The principal feature in the house was the rivalry between republican leaders for the honor of moving an adjournment. It fell to Mr. Grosvenor.

The diplomatic bill, carrying $1,993,600, was passed.

FEBRUARY 5TH.

The political debate in the senate on the proposed loan of $4,600,000 to the St. Louis exposition which has been in progress on a point of order for the past three days came to a close through a vote which left the provision in the urgent deficiency appropriation bill, which was passed.

After the vote on the deficiency bill, speeches in support of the Panama canal treaty were made by Mr. Mallory, of Florida, and Mr. Heyburn, of Idaho.

Mr. Mitchell, from the committee on postoffices, made a favorable report on the resolution ordering the postmaster general to send to the senate the reports made on the irregularities in the postoffice department for consideration. The resolution was adopted without debate.

A bill was passed providing for the transportation of six hundred teachers from Porto Rico to and from the United States next summer for purposes of study.

Adjourned till Monday.

Mr. Sheppard, democrat, of Texas, one of the youngest members of the house, made a determined effort to bring about a reform in the matter of distribution of seeds by the government. He contended that the present system was bad.

Mr. Sheppard's first move was to have struck from the agricultural appropriation bill certain sections providing the machinery for the distribution of the seeds authorized to be purchased under the bill. In this he was successful, his point of order being sustained by the chair, but by an overwhelming vote the house promptly added the sections to the bill by way of amendments.

Mr. Lucking, of Michigan, calling attention to the manufacture and distribution of black-leg vaccine by the agricultural department, said he would offer an amendment restricting the number of doses that may be given away by the government. He contended that the amount now given away is detrimental to private enterprise.

The agricultural appropriation bill was passed, and the house adjourned until Monday.

A new issue of stamps for the Louisiana Purchase exposition will be on sale May 1st.

The senate committee on commerce gave a hearing Wednesday to a delegation appointed by the levee convention held in New Orleans last October to present a series of resolutions looking to the perfection of a Mississippi river levee system from the mouth of that river to the mouth of the Ohio.

THE COOSA'S POWER

To Be Utilized This Summer by New Company.

Arrangements have been made to organize a company to be known as the Coosa Water Power Development company with a capital of $250,000. It is said that northern men of prominence in financial circles will be interested.

The lands and water power privileges in Calhoun county have been purchased, and the right to build the dam across the abandoned portion of the river secured from the secretary of war, and the probate judge has had a jury make report and assessment of damages, all of which are of record in Calhoun county.

The company will build the dam this summer, and erect power plant and lay off manufacturing sites. Negotiations are being made with eastern parties to build a cotton duck mill, and with western parties for a large reduction plant.

The large lake formed by the dam will be used for boating and fishing, and a park will be arranged there.

West End Progress.

The city council and citizens of West End, Ala., are contemplating the institution of municipal ownership, and their first move in this direction will be the erection of an electric light plant and installing of a water works system. It is proposed that these two moves will be made by the city alone, and that no company will be given stock in the enterprises. If the plans that the council of the city have on foot are realized, in the near future bonds amounting to $100,000 will be floated and work on the proposi...ons will be immediately undertaken.

The Cane Crop.

Correspondents record in their letters the successful prosecution of field work and spring planting, and in a number of instances the work of putting down the seed for the coming crop has been completed, this being in strong contrast to the situation at this time last year, when in a number of cases not a stalk of spring plant cane was yet in the ground, the extremely wet and disagreeable weather having prevented the inauguration of this work.

Oldest Mason Dead.

Judge Green D. Campbell died at his residence in Scottsboro, Ala., Friday morning. He had been an invalid for a year, being totally blind. Judge Campbell was one of the most prominent citizens in the county. He filled some of the highest offices and represented Jackson county in the legislature.

Judge Campbell was the oldest living Mason in Alabama.

Fatal Wreck.

While running at the rate of fifty miles an hour and twenty minutes late, a Southern passenger train from Demopolis, Ala., collided, head on, with an extra freight train from Meridian, Miss., near York, Ala., Monday. The engineer and fireman on the passenger train were instantly killed, the express messenger and postal clerks, Eastman and Watson, and several passengers were seriously injured. The engineer's head was completely severed from his body.

Hand Mangled.

Lawrence Ezell, an employe of the Gulf Red Cedar mills at Paint Rock, Ala., had the misfortune to get his hand caught by a belt and drawn into some machinery, which mangled it to such an extent that amputation was necessary.

W. Cameron Forbes, of Boston, has been offered the place on Philippine commission made vacant by the promotion of Governor Taft.

At Lakeland, Fla., an entire block was burned Monday morning. The loss is estimated at $75,600 with insurance of about one-third. The cause of the fire is unknown. The entire burned district will at once be rebuilt.

One person has purchased $12,000 worth of property in Pensacola, Fla., which he proposes to sub-divide.

Tore House Down Over Their Heads.

The entire family of A. A. Willbanks, of Pinckney City, had a narrow escape from death Sunday at noon.

While the family were seated at the dinner table lightning struck the house and tore out the whole front side, destroying one chimney and doing other slight damage. The lightning skirted the entire house, but the damage was confined to the front side. Fortunately no one was hurt.

Despondency over poor health caused Reese McCurdy, son of Captain W. D. McCurdy, of Lowndesboro, Ala., to shoot himself through the head Monday morning.

Burned to Death.

Ross Beard, who lives with his parents near Attalla, Ala., while standing beside the fire, ignited his clothing and he was burned to death. The flames were inhaled, causing death in a few hours.

Mrs. Maybrick is serving out the last few months of her life sentence for the killing of her husband in the quiet country home of the Sisters of the Epiphany at Truro Cornwall under an assumed name.

ON THE STATE LINE.

Old Controversy Between Alabama and Florida.

Special Agent G. W. Lee has filed in the office of the secretary of state the field notes of the strip of land on the Florida border, and they become a matter of record.

The filing of these notes recalls an old struggle between Alabama and Florida for a strip of several thousand acres of valuable timber lands. Many years ago two surveyors named Coffee and Whitney ran border lines between Alabama and Florida, and each of these lines has since taken the name of the surveyor. The Coffee line runs parallel to the Whitney line from the Chattahoochee river, about two miles north for a distance of about seventy miles. Florida claimed the Coffee line to be correct, but when the dispute was finally settled Alabama was victorious and the Whitney line declared the proper one.

While the dispute over the wedge was being waged, the Alabama field notes were compiled and filed according to the Coffee line, and consequently since the settlement of the dispute persons desiring the use of the field notes of the "wedge" have been forced to go to Florida for them.

Attention was directed to this matter by former Secretary of State McDavid, which resulted in the last legislature making an appropriation of $200 to have the field notes made.

NOT YET APPREHENDED.

Assault and Arson at Phoenix City, Ala.

The person or persons who burglarized the house of Sam Waller, west of Phoenix City, Ala., Friday night, set fire to the residence and then shot repeatedly at various members of the family, are still at large.

It is now believed that one burglar was responsible for the reign of terror. Mr. Waller is an old man and went to town for help. After his departure the two ladies there, his wife and a Mrs. McCroan, had a perilous experience. As they left the house a man met them in the yard and cursed them. They finally took refuge in a servant's house, turning out the lights. The burglar broke the door down and entering, set fire to a bed there. Mrs. McCroan was badly cut and Mrs. Waller thought her husband dead until his return at the head of the rescuing party.

FORGOT THE DYNAMITE.

Both Hands Blown Off and One Eye Gone.

D. C. Wolf, a miner employed at the Bradford mines in Jefferson county, Ala., is in the hospital in a critical condition, the result of an accident. It appears that Wolf was preparing a "shot" in the coal, and after putting in his explosive lighted a stick of dynamite. Forgetting that he had lighted the dynamite, so it is stated, he started to get out of his room in the mine to escape injury from the "shot" in the coal. The dynamite which he carried in his hands exploded. Wolf was knocked down and rendered unconscious. When men in the mines heard the two explosions, one from the "shot" and the other from the dynamite, they ran to the place and found Wolf in a horrible condition. Both of his hands were blown off, one of his eyes entirely destroyed and the other seriously injured. In addition to this he was horribly bruised. The man's condition is such that there is not much hope for his final recovery.

On Friday, February 19, the property of the defunct Bessemer, Ala., Savings bank will be sold at public auction. As early as practicable the first dividend will be paid to the late institution's creditors, which, it is expected, will be between 30 and 35 per cent of the total claims filed. The receiver has on hand $32,000 and $4,500 of county script.

Mrs. Betsy Allen, who lives in Paint Rock, Ala., celebrated her 104th birthday last week. Those who know her say that she is really that old.

Jackson county, Alabama, farmers are preparing to plant most of their land in cotton.

In 1903 there were 116 miles of new railroad track built in Alabama.

A One-Legged Marshal.

Thomas Crow was elected marshal of Courtland, Ala. Crow has been marshal of the town for a number of years and held the office up to October last, when in an attempt to arrest a negro he was shot so seriously in the leg that amputation was necessary.

While Mr. Crow now has only one leg, he insists that he can discharge all of the duties of marshal, and a majority of the people of the town seem to agree with him, as he was elected by a handsome majority. Courtland now, so far as known, has the only one-legged marshal in the state.

Rear Admiral Wise, in command of the training squadron now at Guantanamo, Cuba, has been ordered to San Domingo to protect American interests.

Bessemer, Ala., rolling mills are experimenting in rail conversion. The re-rolling of heated 50-pound rails into 16-pound rails is the work in hand.

A jail delivery at Gadsden, Ala., was prevented Sunday. A diamond saw was discovered after a bar was almost entirely severed.

FRIENDLY TIES ARE SEVERED

Diplomatic Relations Between Japan and Russia are Broken Off.

INITIAL STEP TO WAR

Japanese Minister and Staff Leaves St. Petersburg and Russia's Representative at Tokio is Called Home.

A special from St. Petersburg, under Sunday's date, says: It is officially announced that Count Lamsdorff, the Russian foreign minister has informed Russian representatives abroad that Japan has decided to break off negotiations with Russia and to withdraw her minister and the entire legation staff from St. Petersburg and that upon the receipt of a note to this effect from the Japanese minister Russia had ordered her minister, Baron de Rosen, and the legation staff to leave Tokio.

In notifying Russia's representatives abroad of Japan's action in breaking off negotiations Count Lamsdorff says, in concluding his telegram:

"Such attitude on the part of the Tokio government, which has not even awaited the arrival of the answer of the imperial government, which was sent off during the last few days, throws the whole responsibility for the consequences which may arise from a rupture of diplomatic negotiations between the two empires on Japan."

In a general way the Russian position is understood to be that Russia, while making concessions, declined to yield on the four following points:

First—Japan's right to ask for a treaty covering the sovereignty of Manchuria.

Second—She insisted upon mutual recognition of the independence of Korea.

Third—That there should be no fortification of southern Korea which might threaten Russian communications with Port Arthur and Vladivostock; and Fourth—She declined to meet Japan's wishes with regard to neutral zone on both sides of the Yalu river.

The news of the breaking off of diplomatic relations between Russia and Japan was spread far and wide throughout the capital by extra bulletins of the papers. Much excitement was created, and this resulted in patriotic demonstrations.

A Step Toward War.

A special from Tokio, Japan, says: The severance of diplomatic relations between Russia and Japan appears to be only a step toward war, although when the ministers of Russia and Japan withdraw from their respective posts quick and decisive action is expected.

When Minister of Foreign Affairs Komura, on Saturday notified Baron De Rosen, the Russian minister, of Japan's determination to sever diplomatic relations, he is reported to have declared to him that "Japan is tired of Russia's delays, evasions and insincerity, and has decided to take independent action for the conservation of Japan's Oriental interests."

Members of Colony Make House to House Visits Proclaiming "Peace" to Inmates.

The Dowie hosts are very active in Chattanooga and the various representatives have visited hundreds of homes and greeted the residents with the salvo: "Peace be to this house."

STATE AID WANTED FOR SCHOOLS.

Longer Term Sought for Children of Many North Carolina Counties.

A special from Raleigh, N. C., says: Fifty-eight counties have asked the state for aid in order to keep their public schools open four months in the year. The amounts allowed these range all the way from three hundred to four thousand dollars.

Negroes on Jury.

The jury commission of Dallas county, Alabama, having put the names of some thirty negroes in the jury box in violation of a custom that has prevailed for nearly a quarter of a century are coming in for considerable criticism. The commission acted on advice from those high in authority and learned in the law, the recent decision of the supreme court in the Rogers case having led up to the action.

The apple is the most democratic of all fruits. The pomegranate is priestly; the grape is royal; the orange is luxurious; the peach and pear are plutocratic, but the apple belongs to the populace. It is symbolic of the country store and the corner grocery. It breathes the free spirit of the American township and village, says the Albany Journal. It has a flavor of old New England, and yet a pungency as of the south and middle west. It is mild, palatable, nourishing and promotive of good-fellowship and long life.

WE understand that Judge Adams is being urged by some strong men, both Democrats and Populists, to enter the race for Judge of Probate, and he is seriously considering the matter. His announcement may be looked for in next week's Banner.

W. T. CALLEN.

Few names are better known, or held in higher respect, than that at the head of this article, and the announcement that W. T. Callen is a candidate for Treasurer of Chilton county will be welcomed with pleasure by many voters. Born and raised in this county, his whole life an open book before the people, Mr. Callen's qualifications for this important office cannot be questioned, while his connection with the bank at Clanton gives him exceptional facilities for the conduct of the Treasurer's office. An upright, honorable business man, possessing the full confidence of the people Mr. Callen, if nominated and elected, will make an excellent official.

B. W. GARNER.

This gentleman is announced as a candidate for the office of Tax Assessor. He is well known throughout the the county, having been the first registrar appointed under the Sayre law, which office he filled to the general satisfaction of the people. An old Confederate soldier, he appeals to his brothers in arms to come forward and help to elect him Tax Assessor of the county, a position he is well qualified to fill. Mr. Garner has for many years resided on his place near Lily, is an energetic gentleman and one well posted on property values in this county. If nominated and elected he will make a good Tax Assessor.

The approximate value of the cotton crop of the world is between seven hundred and fifty and eight hundred million dollars. Of the world's cotton, the United States produces about 80 per cent., and this enormous proportion in the production of one of the great raw products of the world's consumption is a prominent factor in placing the United States in her present position in relation to the trade balance of the world. Of the enormous amount of cotton grown in the United States, the State of Texas, has for yearr produced, approximately, one-third. Cotton alone brings to the State of Texas over one hundred millions of dollars annually, and when the price of the staple reaches the high figure of fourteen cents per pound, which it has reached within the past few weeks, the value of a good cotton crop to the State would surpass two hundred millions. With a good crop however, the price is naturally much lower; but even in the depressed times of a few years back, when five cents per pound was all that that the grower could get, cotton still remained the great crop of the State, and the great crop of many of the other Southern States.

One of the prime reasons for the present high price of cotton, aside from the clever manipulations of the market, has been not an unprecedently small crop so much as a rather well-founded fear of enormous damage by an insect which for the past few years has caused an annual loss to the State of Texas exceeding ten millions of dollars in actual cotton destroyed, and an annual loss of possibly one hundred millions in the effect of this destruction upon industries depending upon or connected with the cotton crop.—From "The Mexican Cotton-Boll Weevil," by L. O. Howard, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for February.

Wadsworth.

The measles are all the go in this settlement.

We are glad to learn that W. G. Johnson of Lightwood is improving. He has had a bad case of measles.

Well, the farmers in this part of the country are going ahead expecting to make some more 14¢ cotton, and my advice to the farmers is to make more corn than they ever made. From what I can find out they are going to plant more cotton than ever before in this county, and if it is that way all over the cotton states it will go for 6 and 7¢ this fall. So now, brother farmer, this is the year for you to put two thirds of your crop in corn and ground peas and stuff to feed your stock on, and raise more hogs and stop this 12½ and 13¢ meat buying. But just as long as you put two-thirds of your crop in cotton you will continue to pay it. My friend, J. L. Johnson has made a business trip to Prattville this week. Good luck to the Banner and its readers. DICK.

The weather is very fine this week and farmers are very busy getting ready to sow oats.

The health of this community is very good at present.

Mr. Ab Martin who is attending school at Macedonia visited his home folks here last week.

Miss Cora Roebuck's school is progressing nicely, having the attendance of about 25 or 30 students.

There will be preaching at this place next Sunday by Rev. J. P. Gentry.

Miss Ester Shaw has been visiting her sister Mrs. Anis Cobb.

A SCHOOL GIRL.

Lockhart

We had a right nice little rain last night.

We are sorry to say that our planer mill foreman will leave us next week. We wish him much success in his journey.

Miss Irene Rye is going to St. Louis real soon to get her spring millinery.

There is much sympathy with the Sinquefield families, for they are all down with the measles.

We are awful glad to see Mr. Adderson out again.

Bro. Gable filled his regular appointment here Sunday.

Mr, Calvin Sinquefield visited his sisters and brothers in this community Sunday.

Mr. G. E. Perry, our engineer, moved the logging camp near Lockhart today, and we are awful glad to hear the camp bell ringing.

TWO LITTLE BLACK EYES.

Better Than Gold.

"I was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H. "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by Clanton Drug co., Hopkins Drug co.

Maplesville.

Since our snow of four inches that lay on the earth four days in some spots, a remarkably cold spell for the locality, we are now having some delightful spring like days.

Our hustling farmers are getting in good work.

Master Hinkle Graham has lately visited his alma mater here, and made a most eloquent speech in her honor to the school.

We are pleased to state that Mr. Rice has recovered from his sprained ankle, which misfortune prevented his attendance to a most delightful entertainment given by Mrs. Ricketts.

Dr. Walker of Plantersville has found much work to do here in his profession. We regret his misfortune to get tangled in some loose wire that had most carleasly been thrown in the stfeet that caused him to fall and break his glasses.

Mr. Scott came home quite sick with cold and has now gone to Selma to Dr. King's infirmary for treatment and has greatly improved.

Many have suffered with cold lately, caused by our variable weather. There has been only one case fatal, a dear little girl of Mr. and Mrs. Jones was called to heaven from where she was called two years ago. Deepest sympathy is extended the bereaved parents.

Our new preacher, Rev. Nelson, filled his appointment to a most appreciative congregation.

Miss Florence Adair has been called to Uniontown by the serious illness of her little nephew.

We feel that our town has sustained a heavy loss when Miss Watkins left here for Texas, where she was offered a good position with her uncle. Many friends accompanied her to the train, all regretting to see her leave.

The accomplished and beautiful Miss Myrtle Lawrence of Birmingham is visiting her cousin here, Mrs. Plant.

Mr. Denson has returned from Montevallo, where he was called by the death of a relation.

Miss Mattie May DuBose has returned home a few days from school.

We had a very quiet wedding, when Miss Eva Bearden and Mr. Cochran were lately married.

Mrs. Zach Holdrich is visiting her brother in law here, and has had a very sick child.

Master Henry Damsky had the gallantry to hire a team and bring his teacher home after a heavy rain. SUBSCRIBER.

Waddy.

The farmers around here are getting along verry slowly with their plowing. We had a very nice little snow here last week; and the boys had a big rabbit hunt; some caught rabbits, some caught coons, and some caught a bad cold.

Mr. Willie Martin and family visited relatives here Sunday.

PROFIT

The matter of feed is of tremendous importance to the farmer. Wrong feeding is loss. Right feeding is profit.

The up-to-date farmer knows what to feed his cows to get the most milk, his pigs to get the most pork, his hens to get the most eggs. Science.

But how about the children? Are they fed according to science, a bone food if bones are soft and undeveloped, a flesh and muscle food if they are thin and weak and a blood food if there is anemia?

Scott's Emulsion is a mixed food; the Cod Liver Oil in it makes flesh, blood and muscle, the Lime and Soda make bone and brain. It is the standard scientific food for delicate children.

Send for free sample.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Feb. 8, 1904

The principal subject of political discussion in the national capital at the present time is the so called Foraker bill, which aims to relieve the trusts and the mergers of any control or limitation by the government, and is everywhere regarded as the administration's bid for the support of the great corporations in the coming presidential election. This bill shows the lack of sincerity on the part of the Republican party in their alleged fight against the trusts as does nothing else that has come to the surface lately. The administration has been actice in getting before the people of the country and touting itself as an anti trust administration, telling in flaring headlines in the good Republican papers how the Attorney General was going to smash the trusts to smithereens. It would like to get the people to believe that it intended to do something for them in the way of trust busting, but so far it has only worked with its mouth and has done nothing in the courts of the country, notwithstanding the fact that an appropriation of half a million dollars has been made for the special purpose of prosecuting the trusts. The fund has not been used and will not be, for that purpose. More similies, drawn from the national game of poker, that fits the political situation, have lately been coined, most of them by the redoutable Mark Hanna, than at any period in the political history of the country. The one that fits the present situation in the politics of the nation is that the present play of the Republican party is a huge "bluff," so far as it intends to wipe out the criminal trusts of the country.

Senator Foraker, besides being the Ohio manager of the President's campaign for election to succeed himself, is, with the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, his spokesman in the Senate of the United States, and no man who knows how things are done in Washington considers that there would be the remotest possibility of Senator Foraker offering such a bill without the President's direction.

Following, as it did, the visit to Washington of the trust magnates, whose mergers and combines are menanced under the Sherman law, the Northern Securities merger, now fighting for life in the Supreme Court, and the coal trust, brought to bay by the suit started by Willim Randolph Hearst before the Interstate Commerce Commission—the signifance of Senator Foraker's effort becomes manifest.

Not in years has anything happened to bring J. Pierpont Morgan, H. C. Frick, J. W. Gates, President Cassatt, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and President Stillman, of the National City Bank, all to Washington together. The presence of Cassatt and Stillman at the White House dinner emphasized the view of the situation that the Foraker Bill was the administration's tender in exchange for the help of the trusts in the next election. Not in a generation has a bill introduced in congress provoked such a feeling of alarm and indignation as this has done. Coming at a time when the people are marshalling all that is left to them of power to check the power of the rapacious combinations, and when the worst of these are under fire, the proposition to undo all that has been done for the protection of the country against these predatory organizations, the Foraker Bill is doubly alarming, and the fact that it is presented by the spokesman of the President intensifies the feeling of dismay.

The comments of the Democrats in the Senate and House of Representatives indicate how clearly the danger is realized and how unanimous is the condemnation of the measure among those on whom will fall the burden of the fight to prevent the enactment of this measure into a law. The Foraker proposition is regarded as a throwing aside, on the part of the Republicans, any pretense of opposing the trusts and the notification that prospective contributions of Wall Street to the Republican campaign fund are deemed of more importance than the sympathy of the people. CHAS. A. EDWARDS.

West Chilton

Well, Mr. Editor, in regard to Mr. Albert Gore's banner bale of cotton, I will say that West Chilton takes the persimmon. Mr. William Barnes, residing seven miles west of Stanton, sold a bale of cotton on the 28th day of January to I. B. Howard in Selma for $117 50 in spot cash. The bale was unusually heavy and he got 15½ cents a pound for it.

Indications all point to the ruling of high prices for cotton for years to come, due to actual supply and demand. This means an indefinite era of prosperity for the Southern cotton planter if he will only be sure to raise an ample supply of all kinds of food products on his farm for home consumption for both man and beast. Don't let this high price for cotton cause you to neglect planting a heap of corn, peas and potatoes.

Well, Mr. Editor, politics seems to be very cold over this way, you cannot get a man to talk politics, but just mention 15 cent cotton and he will rattle it off.

I am very sorry to say there is still an abundance of sickness in West Chilton at this time, such as measles, smallpox and that fatal pneumonia.

Mr. Frank Young's wife died at 12 o'clock noon, the 2d, with pneumonia, and his two little boys have the measles and the oldest one, about five years old, has pneumonia and is very low at this writing. Mrs. Sallie Young was a noble true Christian hearted woman and she was loved by all who knew her. She was a member of New Hope church and was a shining light in that church. She leaves a dear husband and two sweet little boys to mourn her loss, and many other relatives with sad hearts.

We regret very much to know that Mr. Duffey O'Neal's wife and little boy are very sick.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE BY THE REV. DR. ROBERT COLLYER.

He Took For His Subject "Light on a Hidden Way"—Every Life Should Be an Open, Self-Contained Providence—Lose Not Heart and Hope.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Dr. Robert Collyer, who recently passed his eightieth birthday, preached Sunday morning in the Second Unitarian Church. The audience filled the church and listened with great attention to the eloquent words of the famous preacher. Dr. Collyer took for his subject "Light on a Hidden Way." His text was Job iii:23: "Why is light given to a man whose way is hid?" He said:

"The Book of Job," says Thomas Carlyle, "is one of the grandest things ever written with a pen; our first statement, in books, of the problem of the destiny of man and the way God [illegible] with him on this earth; grand in its sincerity [illegible] and epic [illegible] as the heart of man [illegible] as the summer midnight [illegible] with its seas and stars. There is no other thing in the Bible [illegible] literary merit." I am [illegible] to tell whether the story is a [illegible] or a sort of Oriental [illegible]. The question is one that will [illegible] keen [illegible] at work as long as we are rational, and what ought [illegible] to be called not rational [illegible]. My own idea [illegible] the story was floating about the desert, as the story of [illegible] about in later times [illegible] own forefathers and that, like the great dramas, it was taken into the heart of some man [illegible] and came out again endowed with this wondrous quality of inspiration and life, that won its onward through all time. But whatever the truth may be in this direction this is clear, that when Job put the question I have taken for a text he was as far down in the world as a man can be who is not [illegible] by sin.

Job had been the richest man in the countryside, honored by all who knew him for his wisdom, his goodness or his money. He was now so poor that, he says, men derided him whose fathers he would not have set with the dogs of his flock. He had been a sound, healthy man, full of human impulses and activities; he had been sight to the blind, feet to the lame, a father to the poor and a defender of the oppressed. He was now a diseased and broken man, sitting in the ashes of a ruined home, his fires all gone out, his household goods all shattered, his children all dead, and his wife, the mother of his ten children, lost to the mighty love which will take ever so sweet and true hearted a woman at such a time and make her a tower of strength to the man. His wife, who should have stood, as the angels stand, at once by his side and above him, turned on him in his uttermost sorrow, and said, "Curse God, and die."

Two things, in this sad time, seem to have smitten Job with unconquerable pain. First, he could not make his condition chord with his conviction of what ought to have happened. He had been trained to believe in the axiom we put up in our Sunday schools, that to be good is to be happy. Now he had been good and yet here he was, as miserable as it was possible for a man to be. And the worst of all was, he could not deaden down to the level of his misery. The light given him on the divine justice would not let him rest. His subtle spirit, pierced, restless, dissatisfied, tried him every moment. Questions like these came up in his mind: "Why have I lost my money?—I made it honestly, and made good use of it. Why is my home ruined? I never brought upon it one shadow of disgrace. Why am I bereaven of my children, and worse than bereaven of my wife? If this is the result of goodness, where is cause and effect? What is there to hold on by, if all this misery and mildew can come of upright, downright truth and purity?"

Questions like these forced themselves upon him and would not be silenced. If these spirits that troubled him could have whispered, "Now, Job, what is the use of your whining? You know that you have got just what you deserve; that you are a poor, old pewter Pecksniff, with not one grain of real silver about you. Your whole life has been a sham."

The second element in Job's misery seems to be in the fact that there appeared to be light everywhere except on his own life. If life would only strike a fair average; if other good men had suffered, too, or even bad men—then he could bear it better. But the world went on just the same. The sun shone with as much splendor as on his wedding day. The moon poured out her tides of molten gold, night fretted the blue vault with fires, trees blossomed, birds sang, and young men and maidens danced under the palms. Other homes were full of gladness. This man had sold his clip for a great price; the lightning had slain Job's sheep. That man had done well in dates; the tornado had twisted Job's trees down. Nay, worst of all, here were wicked men, mighty in wealth; their houses in peace, without fear; their children established in their sight, sending forth little ones like a flock, spending their days in prosperity and yet saying, "Who is the Almighty that we should fear Him?" While here he was, a poor wretch, stranded on a desolate shore; a broken man, crying, "Oh, that it were with me as in days gone by, when the candle of the Lord shone round about me; when I took my seat in the market place, and justice was my robe and diadem! When I think of it, I am confounded. One dieth in the fullness of his prosperity, wholly at ease and quiet; another dieth in the bitterness of his soul, not having tasted pleasure. How is it? What does it mean? Why is light given to a man whose way is hid?"

Now, I suppose that not many men ever fall into such supreme desolation as this, that is made to centre in the life of this most sorrowful man. "It is the possible of that which is in itself positive." But then, it is true that we may reach out in all directions and find men and women who are conscious of the light shining, but who cannot find the way; whose condition will not chord with their conception of life, and who, in a certain sense, would be better if they were not so good. The very perfection of their nature is the way by which they are most easily bruised. Keen, earnest, onward, not satisfied to be below their own ideal, they are yet turned so woefully this way and that by adverse circumstances that, at the last, they come to accept their life as a doom, and bear it in grim silence, or they cut the masts when the storm comes and drift, a helpless hull, broadside to the breakers, to go down finally like a stone.

A young man comes to town from the country full of purpose and hope. He finds difficulties confront him; he strives, but remains poor. At last, when hungry and faint and alone, the devil comes—a nice person, probably, but still a devil—and tempts him. The young man yields. Or, he succeeds, and then slides into the belief that there is a Providence that will keep him prosperous because he is a good man. Disaster comes, and he loses his all, including his belief in God. Or, a maiden leaves her home full of trust and love. Under adverse conditions she loses hope, and asks: "Why is life given when the way is hid?"

Or, here, in the larger life, is a prince and leader of men. The roots of his power begin to ramify through all the land. He seems to be the one indispensable man of the time. In the sorest need of all, he is smitten down and dies. Or here is a great cause, reaching back into a great principle. The light of the divine justice shines on the principle and so wins men to it that they cannot rest. Year after year they will stand, suffering, toiling, dying for their cause; but the way does not open. Yet they cannot choose but follow the light. If the light had not shone so in our own land we might have ground along in some sort of affinity to slavery. It was light poured on the conscience of the nation that brought on the war; it was light shining through the darkness that kept the nation steady. Had no such light shone, we should have constructed a new Union with the shackles of the slave for a wedding ring. But the light stood like a wall of fire, yet how long it was only a light shining on a hidden way! Our homes, black with desolation; fathers, mothers, wives, only putting on a cheerful look, because they would not, by their sadness, dishearten the great heart of the nation.

And so, I say, in men and nations you will find everywhere this discord between the longing that is in the soul, and what the man can do. Our life, as some one said of the Cathedral of Cologne, seems to be a broken promise made to God.

Now, in trying to find some solution of this question, I want to say frankly that I cannot pretend to make the mystery all clear, so that it will give you no more trouble, because I cannot put a girdle around the world in forty minutes, and also because a full solution must depend greatly on our own dissolution. I believe, also, that the man who thinks he has left nothing unexplained, in the mystery of providence and life, has rather explained nothing. I listen to him, if I am in trouble, and then go home and break my heart all the same, because I see that he has not only not cleared up the mystery, but that he does not know enough about it to trouble him. The "Principia" and the Single Rule of Three are alike simple and easy to him because he does not know the Rule of Three. And so I cannot be satisfied with the last words which some later hand has added to the book that holds this sad history. They tell us how Job has all his property doubled, to the last ass and camel; has seven sons again and three daughters, has entire satisfaction of all his accusers, lives a hundred and forty years, sees four generations of his line and then dies satisfied.

Need I say that this solution will not stand the test of life, and that if life, on the average, came out so from its most trying ordeal, there would be little need for our sermons. For then, every life would be an open, self-contained providence and the last page in time would vindicate the first. Men do not so live and die; and such cannot have been the primitive conclusion of the history. It has deeper meaning and a sublimer justification, or it had never been inspired by the Holy Ghost.

And this issue to suggest itself to you as you read the story, that Job, in his trouble, would have lost nothing and gained very much if he had not been so impatient in coming to the conclusion that God had left him, that life was a mere apple of Sodom, that he had backed up to great walls of fate and he had not a friend left on the earth. His soul, looking through her darkened windows, concluded the heavens were dark. The nerve, quivering at the gentlest touch, mistook the ministration of mercy for a blow. He might have found some cool shelter for his agony; he preferred to sit on the ashes in the burning sun. He knew not where the next robe was to come from; this did not deter him from tearing to shreds the robe that was to shelter him from the keen winds. It was a dreadful trial at the best; it was worse for his way of meeting it; and, when he was at once in the worst health and temper possible, he said: "Why is light given to a man whose way is hid?" Is not this now, as it was then, one of the most serious mistakes that can be made? I try to solve great problems of providence, perhaps, when I am so unstrung as to be entirely unfitted to touch their more subtle, delicate and far reaching harmonies. As well might you decide on some exquisite anthem when your organ is broken, and conclude there is no music in it because you can make no music of it, as, in such a condition of life and such a temper of the spirit, try to find these great harmonies of God. When I am in trouble, then, and darkness comes down on me like a pall, the first question ought to be, "How much of this unbelief about providence and life, like Cowper's sense of the unpardonable sin, comes from the most material disorganization? Is the darkness I feel in the soul, or is it on the windows through which the soul must see?" Then, clear on this matter, the man tried so will endeavor to stand at the first, where this sad hearted man stood at the last, in the shadow of the Almighty, if he must stand in a shadow, and hold on to the confidence that somewhere within all this trial is the eternal, the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Friends speculate all about the mystery, and their conclusions from their premises are entirely correct; but they have forgotten to take in the separate sovereign will of God, as working out a great purpose in the man's life, by which he is to be lifted into a grander reach of insight and experience than ever he had before. Job said: "I suffer, I am in darkness and disappointment and pain, because it is fate." Job's friends said: "No, you suffer because you have sinned. Rushes never grow without mire." They were both wrong, and all wrong. He suffered because that was the divine way of bringing him out of his sleek, well satisfied content; and when through suffering this was done he said: "I have heard of Thee with mine ears, but now mine eye seeth Thee."

If I had never gone into darkened rooms, where the soul stands at the parting of the worlds; or sat down beside widows and little children, when the desire of their eyes was taken away with a stroke, or grasped the hands of strong men, when all they had toiled for was gone, nothing left but honor; or ministered to men mangled on the battlefield beyond all telling; and heard in all these places where darkness was on the way, melodies, melodies that I never heard among the commonplaces of prosperity, I could not be so sure as I am that God often darkens the way so that the melody may grow clear and entire in the soul.

There is a story in the annals of science touching this principle, that we cannot struggle faithfully with these things and leave them as we found them. Plato, piercing here and there with his wonderful Greek eyes:

"Searching through all, he felt and saw
The springs of life, the depths of awe,
To reach the law within the law,"

was impressed by the suggestive beauty of the elliptic figure. He tried to search out its full meaning, but died without the sight. A century and a half after Plato, Appolonius came, was arrested in the same way, took up the question where Plato left it, tried to find out its full meanings, and died without the sight. And so, says a fine writer, for eighteen centuries some of the best minds were fascinated by this problem, drew from it strength and discipline; and yet, in all this time, the problem was an abstract form, a beautiful or painful speculation. It did not open out into any harmonious principle. There was light on the thing, but no light on the way. In the full time, Kepler came; sat down to the study; and by what we call the suggestion of genius, but ought to call the inspiration of the Almighty, found that the orbits of the planets were elliptical, and he died. Then Newton was born, took up the problem where Kepler had laid it down, made all the established facts the base of his mightier labors; and, when he had done, he had shown that this figure, this problem, which had held men spellbound through the ages, is a prime element in the law of universal gravitation—at once the most beautiful theory and the most absolute conclusion of science. Then men could see how it was, because God had made the light shine on the thing, that the way was found. From Newton back to Plato, in true apostolic order, every man, bending over this mystery of a light where there was no way, and wrestling faithfully with it, had not only grown more noble in his own soul in the struggle, but had done his share toward the solution found by this greatest and last, who was also "born under the law that they might receive the adoption of sons."

So, I tell you, in this restless search for a condition that shall answer to our conception, this fascination, which compels us to search out the elliptic of providence, the geometric certainty underlying the apparent eccentricity. And every struggle to find this certainty; every endeavor to plumb the deepest causes of the discord between what the nature bears and what the soul believes; every striving to find the God of our loftiest faith in our darkest day, will, in some way, aid the demonstration, until, in the full time, some Newton of the soul will come and, gathering the result of all these struggles between our conception of life and our condition in life, will make it the base of some vast generalization, that will bring the ripest conclusions of the science of providence into perfect accord with the grand apostolic revelation. "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God."

We wrong the deepest revelations of [illegible] one [illegible] our [illegible] and [illegible] full and [illegible] in the [illegible] perhaps never [illegible] His [illegible] pose [illegible] in our life [illegible] The [illegible] poetry in [illegible] father had [illegible] the son Herschel [illegible] Herschel felt many [illegible] for John Herschel [illegible] Leopold Mozart wrestled [illegible] that Chrysostom Mozart [illegible] themselves in every [illegible] and Raymond Bonheur [illegible] daughter Rosa to come and paint [illegible] pictures for him. Dr. Reid has said, that when the bee makes its cell so geometrically, the geometry is not in the bee, but in the geometrician that made the bee. Alas, if in the Maker there is no such order for us as there is for the bee! If God so instruct the bee, if God so feed the birds, if even the lions, roaring after their prey, seek their meat from God; if He not only holds the linnet on the spray, but the lion on the spring, how shall we dare lose heart and hope?"

So, then, while we may not know what trials wait on any of us, we can believe that as the days in which this man wrestled with his dark melodies are the only days that make him worth remembrance, and but for which his name had never been written in the book of life; so the days through which we struggle, finding no way, but never losing the light, will be the ones [illegible] we are called to [illegible]. Indeed, men of all ages have wrestled with this problem of the difference between the conception and the condition. Life is full of these appeals, from the [illegible] that is on us to the love that is over us, from the God we fear to the God we worship. The very Christ cries once, "My God! Why hast Thou forsaken Me?" Yet never did our noblest and best, our apostles, martyrs and confessors, flinch finally from their trust, that God is light; that life is divine; that there is a way, though we may not see it; and have gone singing of their deep confidence, by fire and cross into the shadow of death. It is true, nay, it is truest of all, that "men who suffered countless ills, in battles for the true and just," have had the strongest conviction, like old Latimer, that a way would open in those moments when it seemed most impossible. Their light on the thing brought a commanding assurance that there must somewhere, sometime, be light on the way.

Aim High.

If one seems to promote his own personal welfare, it is at the best a low aim, unworthy of a true man. Selfishness, or selfness, even of the highest sort, is ever below what is superior to a man and any man and every man should always be aspiring and striving toward that which is superior to himself.

There are two vital difficulties in the way of a selfish man's strivings for his own personal good, even the highest. In the first place, it is a man's duty to seek what is more important than his own personal good; and in the second place, the man who strives to secure his own highest personal good is pretty sure to fail in his pursuit. Any man who does his duty and fills his place has some object of pursuit which he deems more important than himself; and, on the other hand, only the man who lives for something outside of himself is successful in his striving. It is a mistake and a folly to strive in an effort where, at the best, he will hopelessly fail. In every sphere of life the highest interest of self comes as an incidental consequence of living for something which one deems superior to self. Self is at the best unworthy of our life and endeavors.

A citizen who lives for himself, for his own welfare and happiness, is not likely to have happiness, or to find true enjoyment, or to secure the highest personal welfare. His fellow-citizens are pretty sure to be giving their thoughts and best regard to those who show themselves worthy of their devotion and honor.

Striving to gain in one's own way one's personal good is, at the best, a low aim. A better way is living for others, denying self for the good of others, or in obedience to God, and to honor Him. Those who live for self dishonor God and lose their best selves. Those who live for God, or for those to whom they are sent or set in the providence of God, honor God, and incidentally have honor secured to themselves.—Sunday School Times.

"Pray Through."

An interesting incident of how far-reaching is the influence of two words, occurred recently at Liverpool, England, during the Torrey-Alexander meeting. Mr. Alexander had occasion to go with a friend to one of the leading banks in the city, in order to exchange some American coinage for British currency. While he was waiting at the counter he traced on the blotting paper in front of him the words "Pray through," which he had been using in the course of an address. These words formed the motto of the convention at the Moody Bible Institute at Chicago. Almost unconsciously Mr. Alexander wrote the two words several times on the blotting paper; then, having finished his business in the bank, he and his friend left. Shortly afterwards a customer of the bank came in. He had been passing through a time of great anxiety, and while he was waiting at the counter his eye fell on the words, "Pray through." It interested him, and he asked the clerk who had written them. The clerk was not able to tell him, but the gentleman felt it was a direct message to himself to cease his anxiety and to continue in prayer until the cause of it was removed, or he was given strength to understand the Divine plan.

Helping the Poor.

The great need of the world to-day is not some one to bear its burden for it, but some one who will teach it how to bear its own burden. There is much done for the poor and afflicted in the name of charity that falls far short of the highest helpfulness. On every hand organizations are springing up to provide food for the hungry and clothing for the naked, and some Christians are foolish enough to say that they are of more value to the community than the church. To improve a man's circumstances without improving the man is to do him more of evil than of good. It is better to open the eyes of the blind and thus enable him to provide for himself than to give him alms. The cure of pauperism will not be found in the generosity of the rich, but in the regeneration of the poor.—W. W. Weeks, D. D.

EUROPE'S CHIEF SLEUTH.

THOMAS MELVILLE'S REMARKABLE CAREER AT SCOTLAND YARDS.

Kept London Free From Anarchists for Thirty Years—England's Vidoc Retires on Full Pension—Some Tests He Underwent—Guard of Ministers.

The most famous living detective, Superintendent William Melville, of Scotland Yard, who has recently been charged with the personal care of the king on his foreign journeys, retired the other day.

Destroyer of anarchist clubs, protector of kings, he has worked hard for 31 years in the detection of crime and has lived to complete his service and earn his leisure in spite of the explosive bomb, the chloroformed bag, the dagger and the revolver, all of which at one time or another have been carefully prepared for his own personal destruction.

"The [illegible] Melville" was the [illegible] phrase of hatred often heard in the anarchistic haunts of Soho in the days when Superintendent Melville was breaking them down, and he was often there to hear it said.

Although at the head of a staff of detectives, he did not merely remain at his office in Scotland Yard and give orders. Taking his life in his hand, he prowled Soho by night, he made friends of Italians and Frenchmen, members of the plotting clubs; "disguised as an anarchist" himself he obtained invitations to their meetings; he went to their feasts and dances, and their masked balls were regarded by Mr. Melville as so many delightful bits of luck.

At these picturesque night revels every one present was supposed to be either an active anarchist or a friend and supporter of "the great cause," and Superintendent Melville was able while masked himself to see the anarchist leaders unmasked and surrounded by their supporters.

He chatted volubly with them in French or Italian, he studied their features, learned their aspirations, discovered their programs of murder, and in some cases was able to quietly arrest red-handed and in the possession of deadly bombs the very men with whose wives and friends he had been dancing.

The way in which he imprisoned an anarchist in a wine cellar is typical of his methods. The man was a German, and he had made arrangements to assassinate the then Kaiser on his visit to one of the exhibitions in London. Having got his man to the wine cellar steps by a ruse, and having no specific charge or warrant upon which to arrest him, Mr. Melville took the law into his own hands, pushed the man into the cellar, locked the door, and kept him safe "bottled up" until the Kaiser had departed.

One of his Soho vigils unearthed the Walsall scheme.

Following up shadowy clues inch by inch, and maintaining his fine system of surveillance by a corps of detectives, he traced the Italian bomb expert Battola to Walsall. There the anarchist leaders not only preached the doctrines of anarchism, but taught their disciples how to carry them out. In a secret cellar Ballota held a bomb class, and had all the paraphernalia for making bombs. He instructed pupils in the mysteries of various explosives, gave them lessons about time fuses, with the intention of sending them forth a host of men to destroy the royal palaces of Europe. These calm studies were rudely stopped by Superintendent Melville and his fearless men, and four conspirators were sent to penal servitude for 10 years and one for five years.

Superintendent Melville discovered that this plot was arranged at the most formidable of anarchist rendezvous in London, the Autonomie club, in Windmill street, Tottenham court road. The smashing of this gang by Mr. Melville was the heaviest blow ever dealt at anarchism in England.

When Bourdain was literally "hoist with his own petard," being killed by the bomb which he had prepared for the destruction of the Royal Observatory, there was found on him a card of memership of the Autonomie club. This sent Mr. Melville down to Windmill street. He sat at the receipt of custom, placed his men at various points, and arrested each man as he sauntered into the club, keeping this going for four hours, until he had secured a cellarful of anarchists.

The chloroform scheme was one of the most important of the anarchist systems discovered by Mr. Melville. The detective met one member of the Walsall gang as the latter, on his arrival in London from Walsall, was on his way to the Autonomie club.

"What have you in that bottle?" asked Superintendent Melville; and on the man refusing to tell he ran him into the nearest police station, searched him, and discovered that the bottle contained chloroform. Following this new clue, Superintendent Melville found that the anarchists of the Autonomie club had devised a terrible scheme for the sole purpose of obtaining money for their murderous propaganda and spreading far and wide the gentle doctrines of anarchism.

Their scheme was to keep observation upon members of aristocratic clubs, to "shadow" them as they left late at night, and at the first opportunity to chloroform and rob them. Pini and Duval had carried out a long series of chloroform robberies on the Continent, the proceeds of which had been conscientiously devoted to the same purpose. Pini is now in prison in New Caledonia. The man arrested in the street by Mr. Melville was sentenced to five years' imprisonment by Mr. Justice Hawkins at Stafford Assizes.

This was but a part of an international scheme, by which the leaders hoped to kill all the crowned heads of Europe.

The frustrating of the chloroform scheme and the smashing of the Autonomie club made Mr. Melville the most hated man in England in anarchist eyes. Threats poured in wholesale. Letters arrived at Scotland Yard promising the most terrible vengeance upon Mr. Melville if he did not cease to watch the anarchists. One anarchist with a loaded revolver in his breast pocket succeeded in penetrating the strait corridors of Scotland Yard and getting in to Superintendent Melville's own room.

He began to talk to Mr. Melville quite [illegible], but the trained eye of the detective caught the glint of a shining [illegible] behind the edge of the anarchist's coat. [illegible] he snatched the weapon [illegible] formed the visitor that he had [illegible] more to say to him, and then [illegible] him out of the passage.

To hang [illegible] and imprison him [illegible] marked Mr. Melville [illegible] would [illegible] have made him a martyr [illegible] Mr. Melville [illegible] the martyr's halo [illegible] the breath of the anarchist's nostrils. By treating him with contempt and ignominiously throwing him out I deprived him of the halo."

Mr. Melville had a narrow escape of death at [illegible] in 1892 when Francois tried to shoot him to avoid arrest. But the powerful, athletic detective was too quick for the criminal and pinned him down and took away his weapon.

A sharp struggle at Victoria station occurred when Mr. Melville left his wife's side, went up to the French bomb-thrower Meunier and started to put him under arrest. Meunier drew his fully loaded revolver, but the detective showed that he had muscle as well as brains and gripped the anarchist's arm in time. There was an up and down struggle. Meunier was secured, and in addition to the cartridges in the revolver, Mr. Melville found a large stock of ball cartridges in his captive's pocket.

Mr. Melville knows his "seamy" London as well as any man, but he knows his "seamy" Paris well, too. One of the narrowest escapes he ever had occurred there. In company with a French detective Mr. Melville walked down the narrow streets of the Montmartre and entered an anarchist den. The moment he entered, some of the anarchists recognized him. There was a yell of anger, a flash, and a bullet took the ash off Mr. Melville's cigar.

"Oh," he observed, calmly, "I was not aware that you objected to smoking," and thereupon arrested a man who had baffled the officers of justice for months.—London Mail.

CHOOSE A LIFE IN JAIL.

Thirty Years Instead of Days Was "Jimmy's" Sentence.

In St. John's cemetery, Newtown, there was laid to rest "Jimmy the Paup," one of Brooklyn's oddest characters, who of his own will had been an inmate of Raymond street jail for 30 years. He died on Saturday night, and his death caused genuine sorrow among the keepers and jail attendants.

Jimmy's real name was James Davis, but many years ago the nickname "Jimmy the Paup" was given him. Jimmy was a little Irish man of quaint ways and bright wit, and his picturesque sayings had served to cheer up many a despondent prisoner to whom he talked. Of Jimmy's early history only little is known. It is said that at one time he was the keeper of the Public Pound in Brooklyn. So far as is known, he had no relatives here.

About 30 years ago Jimmy was sent to Raymond street jail for 30 days for some small offense. When his time was up he wanted to remain in the place.

"Oi'm thot stuck on ther place Oi won't be happy out of it," he said to the warden. "If yer turn me loose Oi'll be back again in a jiffy, Oi will."

Jimmy begged so hard to be allowed to remain in the jail that it was finally arranged that he should sell tobacco and like supplies to the prisoners, in return for which privilege he took charge of the white-washing gang. Jimmy then became a fixture at the jail, and every prisoner confined in the place came to know and like the little man, who moved around every day, cheering them up with his quaint humor and sayings.

Jimmy enjoyed the luxury of a "suite" of cells. He occupied three of them; one he used for a bedroom, a second for a "parlor," and the third for a storeroom. Although he had opportunities to turn quite a penny with his tobacco-selling privilege, Jimmy did not seem to care much for money, and gave away about as much of his stock as he sold. It is told of him that he frequently helped out some poor prisoner in whose case he took an interest by giving him money when he left the jail.

Although he was at liberty to go and come when he pleased, Jimmy would go out into the world about once a week to get a new stock of supplies. Once he took a fancy into his head not to go out at all, and for seven years he did not put his foot outside the jail walls.

Jimmy, who was 70 years old, fell ill early last week, and it was thought best to remove him to the Brooklyn hospital, where he died on Saturday night. Warden McLaughlin, Deputy Warden Wilson, and the jail keepers made up a fund, with which a grave was bought in St. John's cemetery.—New York Times.

AUGHT BY THE GRIP. RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

"The world of medicine recognizes Grip as epidemic catarrh."—Medical Talk.

A GRIPPE is epidemic catarrh. It spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and pauper, the masses and the classes are subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip got you? Grip is well named. The original French term, la grippe, has been softened by the busy American to read "grip." Without intending to do so a new word has been coined that exactly describes the case. As if some hideous giant with awful Grip had clutched us in its fatal clasp. Men, women, children, whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of a terrible monster.

The following letters speak for themselves as to the efficacy of Peruna in cases of la grippe or its after effects.

After Effects of La Grippe Eradicated by Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Fred Weinberger, Westerlo, Albany County, N. Y., writes:

"Several years ago I had an attack of la grippe which left my nerves in a prostrated condition. Then I had another attack of la grippe which left me worse. I had tried three good physicians, but all in vain. I gave Peruna a trial. In a short time I was feeling better, and now I am as well as any one."—Mrs. Fred Weinberger.

Hon. James R. Guill, of Omaha.

Hon. James R. Guill is one of the oldest and most esteemed men of Omaha, Neb. He has done much to make Omaha what it is, serving on public boards in a number of times. He endorses Peruna in the following words:

"I am 68 years old, am hale as I heartily, and Peruna has been a main stay of health for years. Ago I had a grippe which would have carried off. Peruna saved me."—J. R. Guill.

A Relative of Abraham Lincoln.

Mrs. Silas S. Lincoln, who lives at 923 I street, N. W., Washington, D. C., a near relative of Abraham Lincoln, writes to Abraham Lincoln. He writes:

"I had la grippe four times before using your medicine. After using it I began the use of Peruna, since which time I have not been troubled with that disease. I can now do as much work at my desk as I ever could in my life. I have gained more than ten pounds in weight."—S. S. Lincoln.

Pe-ru-na Not Only Cured La Grippe But Benefited the Whole System.

Miss Alice M. Dressler, 1313 N. Bryant Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"Last spring I suffered from la grippe and was partially cured, but the bad after effects remained through the summer and somehow I did not get strong as I was before. One of my college friends who was visiting me asked me to try Peruna and I did so, and found it all and more than I had expected. It not only cured me of the catarrh, but restored me to perfect health, built up the entire system and brought a happy feeling of buoyancy which I had not known for years."—Alice M. Dressler.

An Actress' Testimonial.

"During the past winter of 1901 I suffered for several weeks from a severe attack of grippe, which left a serious catarrhal condition of the throat and head.

"Some one suggested Peruna. As a last resort, after wasting much time and money on physicians, I tried the remedy faithfully, and in a few weeks was as well as ever."—Jean Cowgill.

A Southern Judge Cured.

Judge Horatio J. Goss, Hartwell, Ga., writes:

Wireless Trolley a Success.

The "wireless" trolley system, invented by Leon W. Pullen, of Philadelphia, was successfully tested over a mile of steam railroad tracks. The invention does away with the third rail through the use of a magnet. The equipment, which is easily adjusted, consists mainly of a highly magnetized bar running the entire length of the car. The feed wire is buried in the ground. At intervals of eighteen feet a metal cap four inches in diameter comes to the surface. This cap is harmless and has no connection with the feed wire. It only becomes charged when touched by the metal bar under the car.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A WOMAN'S MISERY.

Mrs. John LaRue, of 115 Paterson Avenue, Paterson, N. J., says: "I was troubled for about nine years, and what I suffered no one will ever know. I used about every known remedy that is said to be good for kidney complaint, but without deriving permanent relief. Often when alone in the house the back ache has been so bad that it brought tears to my eyes. The pain at times was so intense that I was compelled to give up my household duties and lie down. There were headaches, dizziness and blood rushing to my head to cause bleeding at the nose. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills benefited me so much that I continued the treatment. The stinging pain in the small of my back, the rushes of blood to the head and other symptoms disappeared."

PASSING OF THE HEARTH.

Where the Family Gathered for Festival and Prayer.

An elderly woman in Wisconsin, who was a young wife in the young west, is telling in a local newspaper a few of the things that the young wife of the older west does not have to do. And in telling of this she recalls vividly her home as it was sixty years ago. There were no wood, coal or gas ranges in those days, but there was a fireplace, with a wide, deep hearth and a chimney that would draw, built large enough for the sweep to pass through it.

The fireplace would take a log four or five feet long and a foot and a half through. This was piled on andirons, and as there were no matches in those days one of the greatest activities of the careful housewife was to prevent the fire from going out. If it did go out she had to go to one of the neighbors, perhaps a quarter of a mile away, for a shovelful of live coals.

One of the signs of neatness in a housekeeper in those old days was the way she kept the hearth cleaned, using the broom and wing and a few of her many duties were to dip candles, put down pork and beef by the barrel, make sausage for the year put down lard by the jar, preserved fruit by the gallon, apple sauce by the quantity, boiled cider by the keg; to provide dried beef and smoked ham, to spin all the yarn for the men's clothes, to weave it into cloth, and to send it to the dyer's to be dyed, fulled and pressed.

The coming of the cooking stove marked the beginning of a new epoch in the lives of our grandmothers. "Oh!" exclaims the survivor, "the good cheer the fireplace brought to the children! No corn was quite so good as the ears roasted before the fire. No potatoes so good as those roasted in the ashes in the winter. No apple equal to frozen apples boiled; then we would melt maple sugar and sugar off again on the snow." And she says, in conclusion: "With the passing of the fireplace has passed the word 'fireside' and the word 'hearth.' It was around the fireside we gathered for family prayer, around the fireside we gathered to read, to chat, to visit. Gone with the fireside and the hearth are most of my dear ones with whom I knelt every day."

Ruskin as a Gardener.

Fond as Ruskin was of flowers, especially wild ones, he had his own ideas as to what a garden ought to be, and in his practical gardening was quite a landscapist. He liked making paths and contriving pretty nooks. When he first came to Brantwood he would have his coppice cut no more. It spindled up to great tall steps, slender and sinuous, promising no timber, and past the age for all commercial use or time honored wont. Neighbors shook their heads, but they did not know the pictures of Botticelli, and Ruskin had made his coppice into an early Italian altar piece. Then he had the espalier of apples and a little goosberry patch and a few standard fruit trees and some strawberries mixed with flowers. In one corner there were beehives in the old fashioned pent house trailed over with creepers. Here and there were little hummocks, each with its special interest of fern or flowers.

Better Salaries for Teachers.

Perhaps no more satisfactory Christmas present could have been devised than that which was enjoyed by the 3,800 school teachers of Philadelphia, who have just reached the successful climax of their brief and spirited campaign for higher salaries. A substantial increase will shortly be made all along the line from high school to kindergarten, not omitting the janitors of school buildings, who, it appears, get an additional ten per cent. While the new schedule just passed by the Philadelphia Councils places the nomination of Philadelphia teachers on a considerably higher plane than before, it is to be noted that it is still behind the standard of wages awarded in Boston and other cities. But the prompt and cordial response of the Councils, impelled by public sentiment, may be looked on as an indication that better things are in store for the teachers in Philadelphia public schools whenever they shall arise in their might and demand adequate pecuniary recognition for good work done.

Mrs. Hughson, of Chicago, whose letter follows, is another woman in high position who owes her health to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was fitful, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep, until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. Mrs. Pinkham's medicines are certainly all they are claimed to be."—MRS. M. E. HUGHSON, 347 East Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Ordinary Tasks Produce Displacements.

Apparently trifling incidents in woman's daily life frequently produce displacements of the womb. A slip on the stairs, lifting during menstruation, standing at a counter, running a sewing machine, or attending to the most ordinary tasks may result in displacement, and a train of serious evils is started.

The first indication of such trouble should be the signal for quick action. Don't let the condition become chronic through neglect or a mistaken idea that you can overcome it by exercise or leaving it alone.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for her advice, and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.

Mrs. Leiah Stowell, 177 Wellington St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—You are indeed a godsend to women, and if they all know what you could do for them, there would be no need of their dragging out miserable lives in agony.

"I suffered for years with bearing-down pains, womb trouble, nervousness, and excruciating headache, but a few bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made life look new and promising to me. I am light and happy, and I do not know what sickness is, and I now enjoy the best of health."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can always be relied upon to restore health to women who thus suffer. It is a sovereign cure for the worst forms of female complaints,—that bearing-down feeling, weak back, falling and displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and all troubles of the uterus or womb. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in the early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. It subdues excitability, nervous prostration, and tones up the entire female system. Its record of cures is the greatest in the world, and should be relied upon with confidence.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE BY THE REV. DR. ROBERT COLLYER.

He Took For His Subject "Light on a Hidden Way"—Every Life Should Be an Open, Self-Contained Providence—Lose Not Heart and Hope.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Dr. Robert Collyer, who recently passed his eightieth birthday, preached Sunday morning in the Second Unitarian Church. The audience filled the church and listened with great attention to the eloquent words of the famous preacher. Dr. Collyer took for his subject "Light on a Hidden Way." His text was Job iii: 23: "Why is light given to a man whose way is hid?" He said:

"The Book of Job," says Thomas Carlyle, "is one of the grandest things ever written with a pen; our first statement, in books, of the problem of the destiny of man and the way God works with him on this earth; grand in its simplicity and epic melody, sublime in its sorrow and reconciliation ... as the heart of man, as the summer midnight, as the world with its seas and stars. There is no other thing in the Bible or out of it of equal merit." I am afraid it is not possible now to tell whether the book is a translation or a sort of Oriental drama. The question is one that will always keep the critics at work as long as there are rational and what ought, in all fairness, to be called not rational schools in theology. My own idea is that the rude outline of the story was floating about the desert, as the story of Lear or Macbeth floated about in later times among our own forefathers, and that, like these great dramas, it was taken into the heart of some man now forgotten and came out again endowed with this wondrous quality of inspiration and life, that will bear it onward through all time. But whatever the truth may be in this direction this is clear, that when Job put the question I have taken for a text he was as far down in the world as a man can be who is not crazed by sin.

Job had been the richest man in the countryside, honored by all who knew him for his wisdom, his goodness or his money. He was now so poor that, he says, men derided him whose fathers he would not have set with the dogs of his flock. He had been a sound, healthy man, full of human impulses and activities; he had been sight to the blind, feet to the lame, a father to the poor and a defender of the oppressed. He was now a diseased and broken man, sitting in the ashes of a ruined home, his fires all gone out, his household goods all shattered, his children all dead, and his wife, the mother of his ten children, lost to the mighty love which will take ever so delicate and true-hearted a woman at such a time and make her a tower of strength to the man. His wife, who should have stood, as the angels stand, at once by his side and above him, turned on him in his uttermost sorrow, and said, "Curse God, and die."

Two things, in this sad time, seem to have smitten Job with unconquerable pain. First, he could not make his condition chord with his conviction of what ought to have happened. He had been trained to believe in the axiom we put up in our Sunday schools, that to be good is to be happy. Now he had been good and yet here he was, as miserable as it was possible for a man to be. And the worst of all was, he could not deaden down to the level of his misery. The light given him on the divine justice would not let him rest. His subtle spirit, pierced, restless, dissatisfied, tried him every moment. Questions like these came up in his mind: "Why have I lost my money? I made it honestly, and made good use of it. Why is my home ruined? I never brought upon it one shadow of disgrace. Why am I bereaven of my children, and worse than bereaven of my wife? If this is the result of goodness, where is cause and effect? What is there to hold on by, if all this misery and mildew can come of upright, downright truth and purity?"

Questions like these forced themselves upon him and would not be silenced. If these spirits that troubled him could have whispered, "Now, Job, what is the use of your whining? You know that you have got just what you deserve; that you are a poor, old pewter Pecksniff, with not one grain of real silver about you. Your whole life has been a sham."

The second element in Job's misery seems to lie in the fact that there appeared to be light everywhere except on his own life. If life would only strike a fair average; if other good men had suffered, too, or even bad men—then he could bear it better. But the world went on just the same. The sun shone with as much splendor as on his wedding day. The moon poured out her tides of moulton gold, night fretted the blue vault with fires, trees blossomed, birds sang, and young men and maidens danced under the palms. Other homes were full of gladness. This man had sold his clip for a great price; the lightning had slain Job's sheep. That man had done well in dates; the tornado had twisted Job's trees down. Nay, worst of all, here were wicked men, mighty in wealth; their houses in peace, without fear; their children established in their sight, sending forth little ones like a flock, spending their days in prosperity and yet saying, "Who is the Almighty that we should fear Him?" While here he was, a poor wreck, stranded on a desolate shore; a broken man, crying, "Oh, that it were with me as in days gone by, when the candle of the Lord shone round about me; when I took my seat in the market place, and justice was my robe and diadem! When I think of it, I am confounded. One dieth in the fullness of his prosperity, wholly at ease and quiet; another dieth in the bitterness of his soul, not having tasted pleasure. How is it? What does it mean? Why is light given to a man whose way is hid?"

Now, I suppose that not many men ever fall into such supreme desolation as this, that is made to centre in the life of this most sorrowful man. "It is the possible of that which is in itself positive." But then, it is true that we may reach out in all directions and find men and women who are conscious of the light shining, but who cannot find the way; whose condition will not chord with their conception of life, and who, in a certain sense, would be better if they were not so good. The very perfection of their nature is the way by which they are most easily bruised. Keen, earnest, onward, not satisfied to be below their own ideal, they are yet turned so woefully this way and that by adverse circumstances that, at the last, they come to accept their life as a doom, and bear it in grim silence, or they cut the masts when the storm comes and drift, a helpless hull, broadside to the breakers, to go down finally like a stone.

A young man comes to town from the country full of purpose and hope. He finds difficulties confront him; he strives, but remains poor. At last, when hungry and faint and alone, the devil comes—a nice person, probably, but still a devil—and tempts him. The young man yields. Or, he succeeds, and then slides into the belief that there is a Providence that will keep him prosperous because he is a good man. Disaster comes, and he loses his all, including his belief in God. Or, a maiden leaves her home full of trust and love. Under adverse conditions she loses hope, and asks: "Why is life given when the way is hid?"

Or, here, in the larger life, is a prince and leader of men. The roots of his power begin to ramify through all the land. He seems to be the one indispensable man of the time. In the sorest need of all, he is smitten down and dies. Or here is a great cause, reaching back into a great principle. The light of the divine justice shines on the principle and so wins men to it that they cannot rest. Year after year they will stand, suffering, toiling, dying for their cause; but the way does not open. Yet they cannot choose but follow the light. If the light had not shone so in our own land we might have gone along in some sort of affinity to slavery. It was light poured on the conscience of the nation that brought on the war; it was light shining through the darkness that kept the nation steady. Had no such light shone, we should have constructed a new Union with the shackles of the slave for a wedding ring. But the light stood like a wall of fire, yet how long it was only a light shining on a hidden way! Our homes, black with desolation; fathers, mothers, wives, only putting on a cheerful look, because they would not, by their sadness, dishearten the great heart of the nation.

And so, I say, in men and nations you will find everywhere this discord between the longing that is in the soul, and what the man can do. Our life, as some one said of the Cathedral of Cologne, seems to be a broken promise made to God.

Now, in trying to find some solution of this question, I want to say frankly that I cannot pretend to make the mystery all clear, so that it will give you no more trouble, because I cannot put a girdle around the world in forty minutes, and also because a full solution must depend greatly on our own dissolution. I believe, also, that the man who thinks he has left nothing unexplained, in the mystery of providence and life, has rather explained nothing. I listen to him, if I am in trouble, and then go home and break my heart all the same, because I see that he has not only not cleared up the mystery, but that he does not know enough about it to trouble him. The "Principia" and the Single Rule of Three are alike simple and easy to him because he does not know the Rule of Three. And so I cannot be satisfied with the last words which some later hand has added to the book that holds this sad history. They tell us how Job has all his property doubled, to the last ass and camel; has seven sons again and three daughters, has entire satisfaction of all his accusers, lives a hundred and forty years, sees four generations of his line and then dies satisfied.

Need I say that this solution will not stand the test of life, and that if life, on the average, came out so from its most trying ordeal, there would be little need for our sermons. For then, every life would be an open, self-contained providence and the last page in time would vindicate the first. Men do not so live and die; and such cannot have been the primitive conclusion of the history. It has deeper meaning and a sublimer justification, or it had never been inspired by the Holy Ghost.

And this is sure to suggest itself to you as you read the story, that Job, in his trouble, would have lost nothing and gained very much if he had not been so impatient in coming to the conclusion that God had left him, that life was a mere apple of Sodom, that he had backed up to great walls of fate and he had not a friend left on the earth. His soul, looking through her darkened windows, concluded the heavens were dark. The nerve, quivering at the gentlest touch, mistook the ministration of mercy for a blow. He might have found some cool shelter for his agony; he preferred to sit on the ashes in the burning sun. He knew not where the next robe was to come from; this did not deter him from tearing to shreds the robe that was to shelter him from the keen winds. It was a dreadful trial at the best; it was worse for his way of meeting it; and, when he was at once in the worst health and temper possible, he said: "Why is light given to a man whose way is hid?" Is not this now, as it was then, one of the most serious mistakes that can be made? I try to solve great problems of providence, perhaps, when I am so unstrung as to be entirely unfitted to touch their more subtle, delicate and far reaching harmonies. As well might you decide on some exquisite anthem when your organ is broken, and conclude there is no music in it because you can make no music of it, as, in such a condition of life and such a temper of the spirit, try to find these great harmonies of God. When I am in trouble, then, and darkness comes down on me like a pall, the first question ought to be, "How much of this unbelief about providence and life, like Cowper's sense of the unpardonable sin, comes from the most material disorganization? Is the darkness I feel in the soul, or is it on the windows through which the soul must see?" Then, clear on this matter, the man tried so will endeavor to stand at the first, where this sad hearted man stood at the last, in the shadow of the Almighty, if he must stand in a shadow, and hold on to the confidence that somewhere within all this trial is the eternal, the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Friends speculate all about the mystery, and their conclusions from their premises are entirely correct; but they have forgotten to take in the separate sovereign will of God, as working out a great purpose in the man's life, by which he is to be lifted into a grander reach of insight and experience than ever he had before. Job said: "I suffer, I am in darkness and disappointment and pain, because it is fate." Job's friends said: "No, you suffer because you have sinned. Rushes never grow without mire." They were both wrong, and all wrong. He suffered because that was the divine way of bringing him out of his sleek, well satisfied content; and when through suffering this was done he said: "I have heard of Thee with mine ears, but now mine eye seeth Thee."

If I had never gone into darkened rooms, where the soul stands at the parting of the worlds; or sat down beside widows and little children, when the desire of their eyes was taken away with a stroke, or grasped the hands of strong men, when all they had toiled for was gone, nothing left but honor; or ministered to men mangled on the battlefield beyond all telling; and heard in all these places where darkness was on the way, melodies, melodies that I never heard among the commonplaces of prosperity, I could not be so sure as I am that God often darkens the way so that the melody may grow clear and entire in the soul.

There is a story in the annals of science touching this principle, that we cannot struggle faithfully with these things and leave them as we found them. Plato, piercing here and there with his wonderful Greek eyes:

"Searching through all, he felt and saw
The springs of life, the depths of awe,
To reach the law within the law,"

was impressed by the suggestive beauty of the elliptic figure. He tried to search out its full meaning, but died without the sight. A century and a half after Plato, Appolonius came, was arrested in the same way, took up the question where Plato left it, tried to find out its full meanings, and died without the sight. And so, says a fine writer, for eighteen centuries some of the best minds were fascinated by this problem, drew from it strength and discipline; and yet, in all this time, the problem was an abstract form, a beautiful or painful speculation. It did not open out into any harmonious principle. There was light on the thing, but no light on the way. In the full time, Kepler came; sat down to the study; and by what we call the suggestion of genius, but ought to call the inspiration of the Almighty, found that the orbits of the planets were elliptical, and he died. Then Newton was born, took up the problem where Kepler had laid it down, made all he established facts the base of his mightier labors; and, when he had done, he had shown that this figure, this problem, which had held men spellbound through the ages, is a prime element in the law of universal gravitation—at once the most beautiful theory and the most absolute conclusion of science. Then men could see how it was, because God had made the light shine on the thing, that the way was found. From Newton back to Plato, in true apostolic order, every man, bending over this mystery of a light where there was no way, and wrestling faithfully with it, had not only grown more noble in his own soul in the struggle, but had done his share toward the solution found by this greatest and last, who was also "born under the law that they might receive the adoption of sons."

So, I tell you, in this restless search for a condition that shall answer to our conception; this fascination, which compels us to search out the elliptic of providence, the geometric certainty underlying the apparent eccentricity. And every struggle to find this certainty; every endeavor to plumb the deepest causes of the discord between what the nature bears and what the soul believes; every striving to find the God of our loftiest faith in our darkest day, will, in some way, aid the demonstration, until, in the full time, some Newton of the soul will come and, gathering the result of all these struggles between our conception of life and our condition in life, will make it the base of some vast generalization, that will bring the ripest conclusions of the science of providence into perfect accord with the grand apostolic revelation: "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God."

We wrong the deepest revelations of life when we are not content to let this one life, the segment in the arc of our existence, stand on its own simple, separate ... whether it be gladness or gloom, and trust surely, if we are faithful, the full and perfect ... must come out in the full time ... God will in perhaps never work out His whole purpose in ... how then shall He in one life work out His ...? The dumb poetry in William Blake, the father, had to wait for ... Blake, the son. Bernardo waited ... to be perfected in his son, Torquato Tasso; William Herschel left many a problem in the heavens for John Herschel to make clear; Leopold Mozart wrestled with melodies that Chrysostom Mozart found afterward of themselves in every chamber of his brain, and Raymond Bonheur needed his daughter Rosa to come and paint out his pictures for him. Dr. Reid has said, that when the bee makes its cell so geometrically, the geometry is not in the bee, but in the geometrician that made the bee. Alas, if in the Maker there is no such order for us as there is for the bee! If God so instruct the bee; if God so feed the bird; if even the lions, roaring after their prey, seek their meat from God; if He not only holds the linnet on the spray, but the lion on the spring, how shall we dare lose heart and hope?

So, then, while we may not know what trials wait on any of us, we can believe that as the days in which this man wrestled with his dark maladies are the only days that make him worth remembrance, and but for which his name had never been written in the book of life; so the days through which we struggle, finding no way, but never losing the light, will be the most significant we are called to live. Indeed, men of all ages have wrestled with this problem of the difference between the conception and the condition. Life is full of these appeals, from the gloom that is on us to the love that is over us; from the God we fear to the God we worship. The very Christ cries once: "My God! Why hast Thou forsaken Me?" Yet never did our noblest and best, our apostles, martyrs and confessors, flinch finally from their trust, that God is light; that life is divine; that there is a way, though we may not see it; and have gone singing of their deep confidence, by fire and cross into the shadow of death. It is true, nay, it is truest of all, that "men who suffered countless ills, in battles for the true and just," have had the strongest conviction, like old Latimer, that a way would open in those moments when it seemed most impossible. Their light on the thing brought a commanding assurance that there must, somewhere, sometime, be light on the way.

Aim High.

If one seems to promote his own personal welfare, it is at the best a low aim, unworthy of a true man. Selfishness, or selfness, even of the highest sort, is ever below what is superior to a man; and any man and every man should always be aspiring and striving toward that which is superior to himself.

There are two vital difficulties in the way of a selfish man's strivings for his own personal good, even the highest. In the first place, it is a man's duty to seek what is more important than his own personal good; and in the second place, the man who strives to secure his own highest personal good is pretty sure to fail in his pursuit. Any man who does his duty and fills his place has some object of pursuit which he deems more important than himself; and, on the other hand, only the man who lives for something outside of himself is successful in his striving. It is a mistake and a folly to strive in an effort where, at the best, he will hopelessly fail. In every sphere of life the highest interest of self comes as an incidental consequence of living for something which one deems superior to self. Self is at the best unworthy of our life and endeavors.

A citizen who lives for himself, for his own welfare and happiness, is not likely to have happiness, or to find true enjoyment, or to secure the highest personal welfare. His fellow-citizens are pretty sure to be giving their thoughts and best regard to those who show themselves worthy of their devotion and honor.

Striving to gain in one's own way one's personal good is, at the best, a low aim. A better way is living for others, denying self for the good of others, or in obedience to God, and to honor Him. Those who live for self dishonor God and lose their best selves. Those who live for God, or for those to whom they are sent or set in the providence of God, honor God, and incidentally have honor secured to themselves.—Sunday School Times.

"Pray Through."

An interesting incident of how far-reaching is the influence of two words, occurred recently at Liverpool, England, during the Torrey-Alexander meeting. Mr. Alexander had occasion to go with a friend to one of the leading banks in the city, in order to exchange some American coinage for British currency. While he was waiting at the counter he traced on the blotting paper in front of him the words "Pray through," which he had been using in the course of an address. These words formed the motto of the convention at the Moody Bible Institute at Chicago. Almost unconsciously Mr. Alexander wrote the two words several times on the blotting paper; then, having finished his business in the bank, he and his friend left. Shortly afterwards a customer of the bank came in. He had been passing through a time of great anxiety, and while he was waiting at the counter his eye fell on the words, "Pray through." It interested him, and he asked the clerk who had written them. The clerk was not able to tell him, but the gentleman felt it was a direct message to himself to cease his anxiety and to con- His crown; be sure that unless you follow tinue in prayer until the cause of it was removed, or he was given strength to understand the Divine plan.

Helping the Poor.

The great need of the world to-day is not some one to bear its burden for it, but some one who will teach it how to bear its own burden. There is much done for the poor and afflicted in the name of charity that falls far short of the highest helpfulness. On every hand organizations are springing up to provide food for the hungry and clothing for the naked, and some Christians are foolish enough to say that they are of more value to the community than the church. To improve a man's circumstances without improving the man is to do him more of evil than of good. It is better to open the eyes of the blind and thus enable him to provide for himself than to give him alms. The cure of pauperism will not be found in the generosity of the rich, but in the regeneration of the poor.—W. W. Weeks, D. D.

EUROPE'S CHIEF SLEUTH.

THOMAS MELVILLE'S REMARKABLE CAREER AT SCOTLAND YARDS.

Kept London Free From Anarchists for Thirty Years—England's Vidoc Retires on Full Pension—Some Tests He Underwent—Guard of Ministers.

The most famous living detective, Superintendent William Melville, of Scotland Yard, who has recently been charged with the personal care of the king on his foreign journeys, retired the other day.

Destroyer of anarchist clubs, protector of kings, he has worked hard for 31 years in the detection of crime and has lived to complete his service and earn his leisure in spite of the explosive bomb, the chloroformed bag, the dagger and the revolver, all of which at one time or another have been carefully prepared for his own personal destruction.

"The vile Melville" was the muttered phrase of hatred often heard in the anarchistic haunts of Soho in the days when Superintendent Melville was breaking them down, and he was often there to hear it said.

Although at the head of a staff of detectives, he did not merely remain at his office in Scotland Yard and give orders. Taking his life in his hand, he prowled Soho by night, he made friends of Italians and Frenchmen, members of the plotting clubs; "disguised as an anarchist" himself he obtained invitations to their meetings; he went to their feasts and dances, and their masked balls were regarded by Mr. Melville as so many delightful bits of luck.

At these picturesque night revels every one present was supposed to be either an active anarchist or a friend and supporter of "the great cause," and Superintendent Melville was able while masked himself to see the anarchist leaders unmasked and surrounded by their supporters.

He chatted volubly with them in French or Italian, he studied their features, learned their aspirations, discovered their programs of murder, and in some cases was able to quietly arrest red-handed and in the possession of deadly bombs the very men with whose wives and friends he had been dancing.

The way in which he imprisoned an anarchist in a wine cellar is typical of his methods. The man was a German, and he had made arrangements to assassinate the then Kaiser on his visit to one of the exhibitions in London. Having got his man to the wine cellar steps by a ruse, and having no specific charge or warrant upon which to arrest him, Mr. Melville took the law into his own hands, pushed the man into the cellar, locked the door, and kept him safe "bottled up" until the Kaiser had departed.

One of his Soho vigils unearthed the Walsall scheme.

Following up shadowy clues inch by inch, and maintaining his fine system of surveillance by a corps of detectives, he traced the Italian bomb expert Battola to Walsall. There the anarchist leaders not only preached the doctrines of anarchism, but taught their disciples how to carry them out. In a secret cellar Ballota held a bomb class, and had all the paraphernalia for making bombs. He instructed pupils in the mysteries of various explosives, gave them lessons about time fuses, with the intention of sending them forth a host of men to destroy the royal palaces of Europe. These calm studies were rudely stopped by Superintendent Melville and his fearless men, and four conspirators were sent to penal servitude for 10 years and one for five years.

Superintendent Melville discovered that this plot was arranged at the most formidable of anarchist rendezvous in London, the Autonomie club, in Windmill street, Tottenham court road. The smashing of this gang by Mr. Melville was the heaviest blow ever dealt at anarchism in England.

When Bourdain was literally "hoist with his own petard," being killed by the bomb which he had prepared for the destruction of the Royal Observatory, there was found on him a card of memership of the Autonomie club. This sent Mr. Melville down to Windmill street. He sat at the receipt of custom, placed his men at various points, and arrested each man as he sauntered into the club, keeping this going for four hours, until he had secured a cellarful of anarchists.

The chloroform scheme was one of the most important of the anarchist systems discovered by Mr. Melville. The detective met one member of the Walsall gang as the latter, on his arrival in London from Walsall, was on his way to the Autonomie club.

"What have you in that bottle?" asked Superintendent Melville; and on the man refusing to tell he ran him into the nearest police station, searched him, and discovered that the bottle contained chloroform. Following this new clue, Superintendent Melville found that the anarchists of the Autonomie club had devised a terrible scheme for the sole purpose of obtaining money for their murderous propaganda and spreading far and wide the gentle doctrines of anarchism.

Their scheme was to keep observation upon members of aristocratic clubs, to "shadow" them as they left late at night, and at the first opportunity to chloroform and rob them. Pini and Duval had carried out a long series of chloroform robberies on the Continent, the proceeds of which had been conscientiously devoted to the same purpose. Pini is now in prison in New Caledonia. The man arrested in the street by Mr. Melville was sentenced to five years' imprisonment by Mr. Justice Hawkins at Stafford Assizes.

This was but a part of an international scheme by which the leaders hoped to kill all the crowned heads of Europe.

The frustrating of the chloroform scheme and the smashing of the Autonomie club made Mr. Melville the most hated man in England in anarchist eyes. Threats poured in wholesale. Letters arrived at Scotland Yard promising the most terrible vengeance upon Mr. Melville if he did not cease to watch the anarchists. One anarchist with a loaded revolver in his breast-pocket succeeded in penetrating the strait corridors of Scotland Yard and getting in to Superintendent Melville's own room.

He began to talk to Mr. Melville quite plausibly, but the trained eye of the detective caught the glint of a shining pistol-barrel behind the edge of the anarchist's coat. Quick as lightning he snatched the weapon, coolly informed the visitor that he had nothing more to say to him and then flung him out into the passage.

To hang him and imprison him," remarked Mr. Melville once to an intimate friend, "would have been to have made him a martyr, to have given him just what he lived for, a chance to pose as the man who for the cause had ... Melville ... Publicity and the martyr's halo are the breath of the anarchist's nostrils. By treating him with contempt and ignominiously throwing him out I deprived him of the halo."

Mr. Melville had a narrow escape of death at Poplar in 1893, when Francois tried to shoot him to avoid arrest. But the powerful, athletic detective was too quick for the criminal, and pinned him down and took away his weapon.

A sharp struggle at Victoria station occurred when Mr. Melville left his wife's side, went up to the French bomb-thrower Meunier and started to put him under arrest. Meunier drew his fully loaded revolver, but the detective showed that he had muscle as well as brains and gripped the anarchist's arm in time. There was an up and down struggle. Meunier was secured, and in addition to the cartridges in the revolver, Mr. Melville found a large stock of ball cartridges in his captive's pockets.

Mr. Melville knows his "seamy" London as well as any man, but he knows his "seamy" Paris well, too. One of the narrowest escapes he ever had occurred there. In company with a French detective Mr. Melville walked down the narrow streets of the Montmartre and entered an anarchist den. The moment he entered, some of the anarchists recognized him. There was a yell of anger, a flash, and a bullet took the ash off Mr. Melville's cigar.

"Oh," he observed, calmly, "I was not aware that you objected to smoking," and thereupon arrested a man who had baffled the officers of justice for months.—London Mail.

CHOOSE A LIFE IN JAIL.

Thirty Years Instead of Days Was "Jimmy's" Sentence.

In St. John's cemetery, Newtown, there was laid to rest "Jimmy the Paup," one of Brooklyn's oddest characters, who of his own will had been an inmate of Raymond street jail for 30 years. He died on Saturday night, and his death caused genuine sorrow among the keepers and jail attendants.

Jimmy's real name was James Davis, but many years ago the nickname "Jimmy the Paup" was given him. Jimmy was a little Irish man of quaint ways and bright wit, and his picturesque sayings had served to cheer up many a despondent prisoner to whom he talked. Of Jimmy's early history only little is known. It is said that at one time he was the keeper of the Public Pound in Brooklyn. So far as is known, he had no relatives here.

About 30 years ago Jimmy was sent to Raymond street jail for 30 days for some small offense. When his time was up he wanted to remain in the place.

"Oi'm thot stuck on ther place Oi won't be happy out of it," he said to the warden. "If yer turn me loose Oi'll be back again in a jiffy, Oi will."

Jimmy begged so hard to be allowed to remain in the jail that it was finally arranged that he should sell tobacco and like supplies to the prisoners, in return for which privilege he took charge of the white-washing gang. Jimmy then became a fixture at the jail, and every prisoner confined in the place came to know and like the little man, who moved around every day, cheering them up with his quaint humor and sayings.

Jimmy enjoyed the luxury of a "suite" of cells. He occupied three of them; one he used for a bedroom, a second for a "parlor," and the third for a storeroom. Although he had opportunities to turn quite a penny with his tobacco-selling privilege, Jimmy did not seem to care much for money, and gave away about as much of his stock as he sold. It is told of him that he frequently helped out some poor prisoner in whose case he took an interest by giving him money when he left the jail.

Although he was at liberty to go and come when he pleased, Jimmy would go out into the world about once a week to get a new stock of supplies. Once he took a fancy into his head not to go out at all, and for seven years he did not put his foot outside the jail walls.

Jimmy, who was 70 years old, fell ill early last week, and it was thought best to remove him to the Brooklyn hospital, where he died on Saturday night. Warden McLaughlin, Deputy Warden Wilson, and the jail keepers made up a fund, with which a grave was bought in St. John's cemetery.—New York Times.

The following letters speak for themselves as to the efficacy of Peruna in cases of la grippe or its after effects.

After Effects of La Grippe Eradicated by Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Fred Weinberger, Westerlo, Albany County, N. Y., writes:

"Several years ago I had an attack of la grippe which left my nerves in a prostrated condition. Then I had another attack of la grippe which left me worse. I had tried three good physicians, but all in vain. I gave Peruna a trial. In a short time I was feeling better, and now I am as well as any one."—Mrs. Fred Weinberger.

Hon. James R. Guill, of Omaha.

Hon. James R. Guill is one of the oldest and most esteemed men of Omaha, Neb. He has done much to make it what it is, serving on public boards a number of times. He endorses Peruna in the following words:

"I am 68 years old, am hale and hearty, and Peruna has helped me attain it. Two years ago I had la grippe, my wife was despaired of. Peruna saved me."—J. R. Guill.

A Relative of Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Silas S. Lincoln, who resides at 311 I Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., has the honor of being third cousin to Abraham Lincoln. He writes:

"I had la grippe five times before using your medicine. Four years ago I began the use of Peruna, since which time I have not been troubled with that disease. I can now do as much work at my desk as I ever could in my life. I have gained more than ten pounds in weight."—S. S. Lincoln.

Pe-ru-na Not Only Cured La Grippe But Benefited the Whole System.

Miss Alice M. Dressler, 1313 N. Bryant Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"Last spring I suffered from la grippe and was partially cured, but the bad after effects remained through the summer, and somehow I did not get strong as I was before. One of my college friends who was visiting me asked me to try Peruna, and I did so, and found it all and more than I had expected. It not only cured me of the catarrh, but restored me to perfect health, built up the entire system and brought a happy feeling of buoyancy which I had not known for years."—Alice M. Dressler.

An Actress' Testimonial.

"During the past winter of 1901 I suffered for several weeks from a severe attack of grippe, which left a serious catarrhal condition of the throat and head.

"Some one suggested Peruna. As a last resort, after wasting much time and money on physicians, I tried the remedy faithfully, and in a few weeks was as well as ever."—Jean Cowgill.

A Southern Judge Cured.

Judge Horatio J. Goss, Hartwell, Ga., writes:

"Some five or six years ago I had a very severe spell of grippe, which left me with systemic catarrh. A friend advised me to try your Peruna, which I did, and was immediately benefited and cured. The third bottle completed the cure."—H. J. Goss.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Wireless Trolley a Success.

The "wireless" trolley system invented by Leon W. Pullen, of Philadelphia, was successfully tested over a mile of steam railroad tracks. The invention does away with the third rail through the use of a magnet. The equipment, which is easily adjusted, consists mainly of a highly magnetized bar running the entire length of the car. The feed wire is buried in the ground. At intervals of eighteen feet a metal cap four inches in diameter comes to the surface. This cap is harmless and has no connection with the feed wire. It only becomes charged when touched by the metal bar under the car.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A WOMAN'S MISERY.

Mrs. John LaRue, of 115 Paterson Avenue, Paterson, N. J., says: "I was troubled for about nine years, and what I suffered no one will ever know. I used about every known remedy that is said to be good for kidney complaint, but without deriving permanent relief. Often when alone in the house the back ache has been so bad that it brought tears to my eyes. The pain at times was so intense that I was compelled to give up my household duties and lie down. There were headaches, dizziness and blood rushing to my head to cause bleeding at the nose. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills benefited me so much that I continued the treatment. The stinging pain in the small of my back, the rushes of blood to the head and other symptoms disappeared."

PASSING OF THE HEARTH.

Where the Family Gathered for Festival and Prayer.

An elderly woman in Wisconsin, who was a young wife in the young west, is telling in a local newspaper a few of the things that the young wife of the older west does not have to do. And in telling of this she recalls vividly her home as it was sixty years ago. There were no wood, coal or gas ranges in those days, but there was a fireplace, with a wide, deep hearth—and a chimney that would draw, built large enough for the sweep to pass through it.

The fireplace would take a log four or five feet long and a foot and a half through. This was piled on andirons, and as there were no matches in those days one of the greatest anxieties of the careful housewife was to prevent the fire from going out. If it did go out she had to go to one of the neighbors, perhaps a quarter of a mile away, for a shoveful of live coals.

One of the signs of neatness in a housekeeper in those old days was the way she kept the hearth cleaned, using the broom and wing, and a few of her many duties were to dip candles, put down pork and beef by the barrel, make sausage for the year, put down lard by the jar, preserved fruit by the gallon, apple sauce by the quantity, boiled cider by the keg; to provide dried beef and smoked ham, to spin all the yarn for the men's clothes, to weave it into cloth, and to send it to the dyer's to be dyed, fulled and pressed.

The coming of the cooking stove marked the beginning of a new epoch in the lives of our grandmothers. "Oh!" exclaims the survivor, "the good cheer the fireplace brought to the children! No corn was quite so good as the ears roasted before the fire. No potatoes so good as those roasted in the ashes in the winter. No apple equal to frozen apples boiled; then we would melt maple sugar and sugar off again on the snow." And she says, in conclusion: "With the passing of the fireplace has passed the words 'fireside' and the word 'hearth.' It was around the fireside we gathered for family prayer, around the fireside we gathered to read, to chat, to visit. Gone with the fireside and the hearth are most of my dear ones with whom I knelt every day."

Ruskin as a Gardener.

Fond as Ruskin was of flowers, especially wild ones, he had his own ideas as to what a garden ought to be, and in his practical gardening was quite a landscapist. He liked making paths and contriving pretty nooks. When he first came to Brantwood he would have his coppice cut no more. It spindled up to great tall steps, slender and sinuous, promising no timber, and past the age for all commercial use or time honored wont. Neighbors shook their heads, but they did not know the pictures of Botticelli, and Ruskin had made his coppice into an early Italian altar piece. Then he had the espalier of apples and a little gooseberry patch and a few standard fruit trees and some strawberries mixed with flowers. In one corner there were beehives in the old fashioned pent house trailed over with creepers. Here and there were little hummocks, each with its special interest of fern or flowers.

Better Salaries for Teachers.

Perhaps no more satisfactory Christmas present could have been devised than that which was enjoyed by the 3,800 school teachers of Philadelphia, who have just reached the successful climax of their brief and spirited campaign for higher salaries. A substantial increase will shortly be made all along the line from high school to kindergarten, not omitting the janitors of school buildings, who, it appears, get an additional ten per cent. While the new schedule just passed by the Philadelphia Councils places the nomination of Philadelphia teachers on a considerably higher plane than before, it is to be noted that it is still behind the standard of wages awarded in Boston and other cities. But the prompt and cordial response of the Councils, impelled by public sentiment, may be looked on as an indication that better things are in store for the teachers in Philadelphia public schools whenever they shall arise in their might and demand adequate pecuniary recognition for good work done.

Mrs. Hughson, of Chicago, whose letter follows, is another woman in high position who owes her health to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was fitful, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep, until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. Mrs. Pinkham's medicines are certainly all they are claimed to be."—MRS. M. E. HUGHSON, 347 East Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Ordinary Tasks Produce Displacements.

Apparently trifling incidents in woman's daily life frequently produce displacements of the womb. A slip on the stairs, lifting during menstruation, standing at a counter, running a sewing machine, or attending to the most ordinary tasks may result in displacement, and a train of serious evils is started.

The first indication of such trouble should be the signal for quick action. Don't let the condition become chronic through neglect or a mistaken idea that you can overcome it by exercise or leaving it alone.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for her advice, and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.

Mrs. Leiah Stowell, 177 Wellington St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—You are indeed a godsend to women, and if they all knew what you could do for them, there would be no need of their dragging out miserable lives in agony.

"I suffered for years with bearing-down pains, womb trouble, nervousness, and excruciating headache, but a few bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made life look new and promising to me. I am light and happy, and I do not know what sickness is, and I now enjoy the best of health."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can always be relied upon to restore health to women who thus suffer. It is a sovereign cure for the worst forms of female complaints,—that bearing-down feeling, weak back, falling and displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and all troubles of the uterus or womb. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in the early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. It subdues excitability, nervous prostration, and tones up the entire female system. Its record of cures is the greatest in the world, and should be relied upon with confidence.

I hope the good brethren will answer to the call of your correspondent last week and come along and help get rid of all the wolves. Say, ye good old cross-tie cutter, who knows just how to hold an axe, you had better throw away that old axe of yours which has or did, when I last saw it, all of the front corner broke off, for ye know when ye just draw your axe to hew to the line of God's justice some of those wolves may just skip through that old broken corner and escape with only a small cut, and you know that a criple in the church is of no avail and their blood shall be upon your head. Say, ye tie cutter, did you know that the gamer's club met last Sunday just about a half mile of your church and spent the day! Pshaw, there was only four church members to six public sinners in that club. So just get you a new axe, one that will cut from tip to tip, and pass around and only hint that you are hunting timber, and we have it for you.

It suffered dreadfully until four o'clock the next morning and then passed away. It was four years of age.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical science have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

FEMALE WEAKNESS

542 1-2 Congress St.
PORTLAND, MAINE, Oct. 17, 1902.

I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pains would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed to be beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came as a God-send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering the agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain. Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities.

Periodical headaches tell of female weakness. Wine of Cardui cures permanently nineteen out of every twenty cases of irregular menses, bearing down pains or any female weakness. If you are discouraged and doctors have failed, that is the best reason in the world you should try Wine of Cardui now. Remember that headaches mean female weakness. WINE OF CARDUI

THE LAST PACK THORSBY.

We cannot publish any more correspondence on this subject—Editor.

Thorsby, Ala., Feb 1, 1904

Editor Banner—My object in writing the letter published in the Banner of the 18th ult. was for the purpose of informing the public as to the truth regarding pending questions in our city. And also the conduct of our recent city election. The letter published previous to mine charged that an election had been held and the result was for open saloons, and further charged that votes cast against the saloon was thrown out and illegal votes counted for saloons. Considering this very grave charge that would injure our citizens in the estimation of some at least I felt it my duty to answer these charges, which I did and which I thank the editor for publishing. Now the true name of the writer who made those charges comes to light in the person of J. Bice who replies to my letter and seems to make threats if I write another. I do not want to see the Banner for chewing the rag with J. Bice but I would like to state more clearly the facts in regard to the question mentioned. First I stand pat on every work I said in my previous letter, the citizens of Thorsby were invited to participate in a nominating convention which they did, and to prove that there was no issue the convention nominated twice the number that it would take to fill the offices. After this there was a little rump meeting held headed by J. Bice. The main object of which was to get No. Bice said he printed circulars to the effect that it was an anti wine movement. Here is what the circular says on the subject: "I am a candidate for mayor on the anti license ticket. I am opposed to the license system in any form." Mind you the circular does not mention wine, and in view of the fact that every business in Thorsby is licensed I fail to see how this could be construed to mean wine. Now to the election. To show his ability for judging the law think of him going to one of the inspectors and asking whether the election would be held under the old or new law. Any ten year old child that is bright should be able to answer that question. He selected Mr. Quint Meroney for watcher, furnished a list which he said were legal voters. Now Meroney challenged one man Mr. Foss whose reputation for integrity is unquestionable. I was present and saw Mr. Foss sign the oath administered by the inspectors. Please cite me to the law that would set that ballot aside. Mr. Franzen made satisfactory proof of his right to vote without taking the oath, in fact he was not challenged. He was nominated on both tickets and he is now charged by Mr. Bice as having voted against this so called prohibition ticket. I will say here that Mr. Franzen is a total abstainer of strong drink, but this ticket headed by J. Bice did not meet his approval. Now for those that were said to have been thrown out. Dr. Shelter told me he knew he was not a legal voter for the reason that he had resided in the county the required time. Mr. Hawthorne tells me the same thing. Robinson and Hewett were barred for the same reason and Mr. Heaton because he had resided in the city the required time. Each of these gentlemen were made acquainted with the law and the oath that they would have to sign in order to have their votes counted and each refused to qualify. Will any one man say that their votes were thrown out? The law is that a person can live and do business in another county and maintain his residence in Thorsby is perfectly ridiculous and is not worthy of comment.

Refering to the school question Bice says I only asked for the people of the school to be taught at the New Hall building where it had been taught for the last two years. The contention was to divide the school and would ruin it and what I said has come true and the public knows it. Now reader, compare this statement from the circular which Mr. Bice had printed just before the election. Here it is: "There has been one question come up that caused me and some of the citizens of Thorsby to differ and that is the school question. And I now for all the time I am done with that question. I was honest in what I did, I thought I was doing the best thing for the city but it seems that a majority thought otherwise and after giving this matter careful study I believe it is best for the schools that they remain as they are now."

Can any person harmonize these statements? If so let me hear from him.

Respectfully,
D. N. RIGGS.

Deason, the Commissioner named in said commission, will proceed to sell at public outcry, in the town of Clanton, Alabama, in front of the court house door, to the highest and best bidder for cash, on

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1904,

The west ½ of northwest ¼, and north of southwest ¼, Section 20 Township 22, Range 13 in Chilton county Alabama.

E. B. DEASON, Commissioner.

To the Public:

LIBERTY HILL, LA. Aug. 24, 189

On April 18th, 1895, I was shot with a double-barrel shot gun loaded with bullets or rifle balls, twelve taking effect, six passing through my body. The wounds were dressed with Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic and kept saturated with it, nothing else being used. There was no inflammation nor pus formed in the wounds and I slept and rested without opiates.

Within fifty days I was able to take charge of my farming interests. I owe my life to

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic.

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

The amount of correspondence coming nowadays to The Banner is getting to be a serious consideration, and correspondents will confer a favor by confining their items to such as are of general interest. The visits of one neighbor to another should be omitted, and possibly we may be able to publish all that come, as it is now we are obliged to omit a great deal. Say that you have to say in as few words as possible, remembering that "Brevity is the soul of wit."

CALL FOR POPULIST EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The Populist Executive Committee is hereby called to meet in Clanton on Tuesday, the 15th day of March, 1904, to attend to such business as may come up. All members who oppose organized Democracy are also invited to meet with said committee.

This, the 23d day of Feb 1904

W. H. SHAW,
Chairman Pop. Ex. Com.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Capt. Reuben F. Kolb will address the voters of Chilton county at Cooper, on Monday, Feb. 29, 1904, at 11 a.m.

Falakto.

Farmers in this section are right busy preparing for another crop.

Miss Ressie Harris is still on the sick list. She will have been sick twelve months the 10th of next March; just think of it, nearly a year confined to her room and suffering most intensely a great portion of the time. Yet Miss Ressie seems to have borne her suffering with great fortitude and patience, welcomes her visitors with a pleasant smile, and if able converses with them most cheerfully.

Mr. George Nobles of Prattville made a flying visit to his old home and friend last.

Mr. Ruff Harris and wife of Verbena visited relatives here last week.

Our community does a reasonable portion of social visiting, but don't think it interesting enough to come at a distance to make a note every call. And now a word to the man on the corner. What if he does whittle on the corner and sights, while there are some he does not (probably these do not come his way or he closes his eyes when he knows they are ugly or unpleasant) he does not neglect his duty, but has been giving us little items and comments on the various subjects of the times for a number of years without a word of thanks. Such faithful, earnest service is worthy of our commendation. But he is no more, we miss him, wish he one would take his place, why not the man on the corner. Here to so high an honor? He does like a Christian, I hope he is and he seems to appreciate the honor feeling. If he would just try and learn by experience its joys and blessings and he might tell it better. He also aspires to be something of a critic, has a sense of the comical and the ludicrous that is amusing when not too exacted. If he would give more time and energy to study and searching for knowledge and be less self and accommodating in, for helping others and answering their inquiries, he might in a great measure fill the place of the famous Georgian. GEORGIA GIRL.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution issued out of Circuit Court of Chilton county, Alabama, and to me directed I am commanded to make the amount of a certain judgment recently obtained against W. L. Parnell, in favor of O. S. Welch, Administrator of the Estate of L. A. Welch, deceased, out of the goods, chattels, lands and tenements of the said W. L. Parnell, I have levied on the following real estate, as the property of W. L. Parnell, to-wit:

Southwest fourth of Section 1, Township 20, Range 13; the southwest fourth of southwest fourth, Section 36, Township 20, Range 13; northwest fourth of northwest fourth, Section 25, Range 13; northeast fourth of northeast fourth and south half of northeast fourth, Section 26, Township 20, Range 13; west ½ of southeast fourth and southwest fourth of Section 27, Township 20, Range 13; east half of southeast fourth of Section 28, Township 20, Range 13; southeast fourth of Section 29, Township 20, Range 13; all lying and being in Chilton county, Alabama.

Therefore, according to said command, I shall expose for sale at Public Auction, all the right, title and interest of the above named W. L. Parnell in and to the above described property, on during the legal hours of sale at the Court House in Clanton, in Chilton county, Alabama, or at Clanton, this 17th day of Feb. 1904.

LET THE PEOPLE RULE.

VOL. XII | CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1904 | NO. 18

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Three little lilywhites held a convention
All by themselves, so their names I'll not mention
Resolved, made speeches, they had speakers three
And this resolve was carried unanimously.

Resolved by the lilywhites of Chilton county,
In convention assembled to the number of three,
That we are the people and we all do agree
We're the lilywhite party of Chilton county.

"Gents of the convention" said H. A. W.
I don't see any fun in just bossing you two.
The whole thing's a fizzle between me and you.
I vote we go home," said H. A. W.

"Second the motion," said W. C. E.
"After all my big talk it is galling to me
Not to have one little follower to add to us three.
Let's get out of this" said W. C. E.

Up spake J. B. D. "I move we adjourn,
This convention was dead before ere it was born,
No use us three staying here all forlorn,
Like lilywhite sheep who've been sheared and shorn."

And the "convention" adjourned without naming a day.
Thus the lily white "party" fadeth away.

The remnant of the Populist party in Marshall county recently held a meeting and the leaders decided to disband and come back to the Democratic party. It is said that nearly every Populist in Marshall county will go into the primary on April 11 and abide by the results. Marshall county has heretofore been one of the strongest Populist counties in the State.

A movement is on foot, we believe, in the same direction as the above. Many of our good Populist friends recognize the fact that nothing whatever is to be gained by remaining out of the Democratic porty, but on the contrary much of benefit to the county will result in a united people. The bars are down, and any white man can become a candidate before the primary on April 11, and all his friends can come in and vote for him. The Democratic primary gives all an opportunity, and wise men will seize it. Differences of opinion can be discussed better among friends in one political party, than in any other way, and those differences adjusted then a united people can demand and obtain their desires.

ACCIDENT AT CLANTON.

Last Friday noon as Mr. A. J. Wilson was driving into town with his boy, the horse or mule took fright at the noise of the engine at the railroad crossing and ran away up the street. Mr. Wilson jumped from the wagon, and broke his ankle. He was carried into Dr. Campbelle's, who set the limb, and he was then carried home. It is a bad fracture and may cripple him for life. The boy escaped unhurt. The team and wagon stopped at court house square, the wagon tongue being broken.

PRIVILEGE TAX NOTICE.

I again call attention of the people having mortgages recorded to the privilege tax. I can't file the papers under the new revenue law until tax is paid. The tax is 25 cents on the hundred dollars or any portion of a hundred, and this must be paid before mortgages are filed. Please take due notice and govern yourselves accordingly.

S. M. ADAMS,
Judge of Probate.

Clanton, Jan. 29, 1904.

Sheriff's Sale

By virtue of an execution issued out of the Circuit Court of Bibb county, Alabama, and to me directed, whereby I am commanded to make the amount of a certain judgment recently obtained against W. R. CORRESPONDENCE.

[As we are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Maplesville, Feb. 10, 1904

Editor Banner—I am no politician and no office seeker, neither am I John in the Backwoods, but live at home and board with the old 'oman, and read the Banner. I notice Judge Adams did not come out as a candidate for Probate Judge. I am very sorry, for I think he is a good officer and a high-toned Christian gentleman. As for his going back to the Democratic party, as some say he did, after the constitution was changed, I don't see what other course could have been taken. Paul persecuted the church, he thought he was doing God's service. My father was a Populite and was given up to be a well read man, and I haven't the least doubt he was conscientious in what he did. After the constitution was changed he might have voted with the Democratic party, as he once did. As for the other men that are running for Probate office I think they are nice men.

Denmark Will Defend Herself.

The British government has inquired if the Danish government is prepared to defend Denmark's neutrality, especially the important sea routes. Denmark replied in effect:

"We will defend ourselves."

The construction placed on this inquiry is that Great Britain appreciates the danger of Russia occupying Danish fortresses in the event of complications with Great Britain and Russia over the far eastern question.

In consequence of the possibility of such an outcome the Danish war department has ordered the army reserves to be ready for mobilization throughout Denmark within twelve hours.

A telegram from Birmingham asked the officer to hold the negro, as he is thought to be a person wanted in that city for burglary.

Somewhat extraordinary orders received at the Brooklyn navy yard led to the rumor that the department is preparing to send the battleship Iowa to the far east. CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

FEBRUARY 11TH.

The senate was in executive session more than four hours, and after the agreement to vote on the treaty had been reached, nearly the entire time was devoted to general discussion of the encroachment of the senate and the president on each others' prerogatives under the constitution.

The house, by a vote of 172 to 103, concurred in the senate amendment to the urgent deficiency appropriation bill authorizing a loan of $4,600,000 by the government to the Louisiana Purchase exposition, after amending it with respect to the manner in which the money shall be paid.

When the house convened Mr. Foss, of Illinois, chairman of the naval affairs committee, reported the naval appropriation bill. In part, it reads:

"The committee recommends the construction of more than the usual number of cruisers, in view of the fact that last year we provided for five large battle ships. This will give a better proportion to our navy.

"If we judge public sentiment rightly, it is in favor of the continued policy of building up our navy. If we stopped now, we would be left behind the leading countries of the world.

"To complete all the ships authorized up to the present time, including their constructions and machinery, armor, armament and equipment, will cost $82,718,659."

The following bills were passed:

Relating to applications, declaratory statements, entries and final proofs under the homestead and other land laws, and to confirm the same in certain cases.

FEBRUARY 12TH.

The senate listened to the reading by Mr. Carmack of a speech prepared by Mr. Morgan in opposition to the president's policy with reference to an isthmian canal, and also considered the bill appropriating $200,000 to ex-Queen Lilliuokalani of Hawaii. Speeches in support of the bill were made by Mr. Blackburn and Mr. Mitchell, and in opposition by Mr. Spooner and Mr. Platt, of Connecticut.

Mr. Spooner moved to recommit the measure, but the vote on this motion failed to display a quorum, and the senate was forced to adjourn.

Senator Martin presented the credentials of his colleague, Mr. Daniel, as senator from Virginia for the term beginning March 4, 1905.

Adjourned till Monday.

Speaker Cannon broke all previous records in the dispatch of private pension bills. Under his guidance 320 of these measures of relief were passed by the house in 155 minutes. Nearly the whole of this time was consumed in committee of the whole.

The house passed the bills "en bloc" under unanimous consent, which the speaker himself asked for. About half of the bills were disposed of under this request without amendment.

FEBRUARY 15TH.

The suspense concerning the condition of Senator Hanna had appreciable effect on the senate and the proceedings were marked by an unusual listlessness and depression.

There were no speeches on any subject and more attention was given to the frequent bulletins announcing the condition of the senator than to matters of legislation. The entire time ofthe legislative session was devoted to routine business.

The senate in executive session agreed to vote on the Panama treaty and all its amendments on February 23d.

The bill to pay $150,000 to ex-Queen Lilioukalani failed to pass the senate, the vote being 26 to 26.

The conference report on the urgent deficiency appropriation bill was presented and agreed to. The following bills passed:

The torch will be applied in the next few days.. Their No. 1 furnace is also nearing completion, this iron-maker being practically rebuilt. It is intended to start up this furnace about March 1 or a little later. The No. 2 furnace, which has been in blast right along, has been making from 240 to 255 tons of iron daily. The new furnace of the Alabama Steel and Wire Company at Gadsden, which was blown in a few weeks ago, is doing well. The Sloss-Sheeld Steel and Iron Company has six of its seven furnaces in operation. Their make for the month of January footed up 33,550 tons of iron.

Thompson Objects.

Representative C. W. Thompson, of Alabama, called at the postoffice department to enter further protest against the establishment of a post office at the Tuskegee school of Booker T. Washington. The postoffice at Tuskegee is a few hundred yards from the school, where a sub-station has been established, and it is declared by Representative Thompson that the mail facilities are already sufficient for the needs of the school, and the establishment of a new office is entirely unnecessary. The Tuskegee office is now of the second class and the establishment of a new office cutting into the receipts would reduce the compensation of the postmaster. The postmaster general is inclined to agree with Mr. Thompson, but the pressure is pretty strong for a new office, with a relation of Washington's at its head.

For Relief of the College.

Congressman Richardson has introduced a bill in congress for appropriating $60,000 for the relief of LaGrange college, which was destroyed in 1863 by the federal troops, the building, a fine library and laboratory being burned. The lands are valuable for fruit raising and agriculture and the syndicate has perfected plans to settle them with northwestern farmers as fast as the timber is cut. Several thousand acres are now available and colonization will start at once.

PRODUCTION OF COAL

Over 1,000,000 Tons Greater Than in 1902.

The official figures on the production of coal in Alabama for the year 1902 have been announced by State Mine Inspector J. M. Gray, being 11,700,753 tons, with 19,356 men employed in and about the mines. There were fifty-seven men killed in and about the mines, making the production for the year 206,276.36 tons of coal for each man killed, and one man killed in every 339.57 employed.

The figures show an appreciable increase over production last year. The inspector saw fit not to make any estimate for the coal consumed in boilers around the mines or sold to miners and other employes at the different mining camps in the coal bearing section of the state. Had he done so, as is done in other states, the production would have gone over the 12,000,000 tons mark.

During 1902 the production amounted to 10,329,479 tons, with 17,509 men employed in and around the mines. There were fifty men killed in and around the mines. The production in that year was 206,589.58 tons to the man killed out of 358.18 employed.

Woman's Realm

Some Refined Distinctions.

There was a delightful schoolmistress who used thus to impress on her scholars certain refined distinctions: "My dears, horses 'sweat,' young men 'perspire,' young women 'are all in a glow.'" In these outspoken days, when a spade is called at the very mildest a spade, the gentle euphemism is a matter for amusement, to be laughed at with affectionate patronage like an old-time gown out of grandmother's chest.

Young ladies have disappeared and girls get quite as warm as "their brothers nowadays, and on the whole the change is vastly for the better, frankness being own sister to truth and mortal foe to affectation. Yet, the farther we go from the brocade days, the more inevitably we must recognize a price paid for our freedom, a certain stately charm gone out of life and human intercourse.

The formality of those times made barriers, and in barriers, after all, lie the half of romance. It is the face beneath the veil that we are most eager to see, the voice behind the wall that tempts us to the most strenuous climbing. What could be prettier or more inaccessible than a young woman all in a glow?

Man is still at heart essentially old-fashioned, and the modern girl, rejoicing in her new equipment of frankness and courage and unconventionality, sometimes finds him strangely unresponsive. Theoretically he is thoroughly in sympathy with her, as a reasonable being must needs be, but for all that he dimly realizes that something is missing—a price has been paid. The ostentatiously modest scoop bonnet, with its defensive ruffle behind and its lace curtain across the front, give a piquancy that the unveiled intercourse of to-day can never attain.—Indianapolis News.

Danger in High Heels.

Since the accident to a French Countess through the wearing of high-heeled shoes, their merits and demerits have been discussed by several French women's papers.

Sarah Bernhardt, who was interviewed on the subject, says: "High heels are exquisite for the woman who knows how to wear them. Everyone does not know how. A happy medium must be struck. I can see no reason in the world why there should be any danger from wearing high heels. The great argument in their favor is that they are prettier than low ones."

A shoemaker famous for his Louis XV. heel, has also written upon this all-important topic. "Some women," he says, "are content with the heel moderately high, but many of them ask for it high enough to make a lover of flat heels gasp.

"We sell a great many two and one-half inches high. A heel of that measurement looks something like a stile, for to have any style about it it must be very slender and curved. The high heel certainly throws a woman somewhat out of balance unless the shoe is properly manufactured, but if the front of the foot rests well on the ground, —as it should in a properly made Louis XV. shoe—the danger is well overcome."

Doctors, of course, consider high heels most harmful, and women who have much walking exercise have long since given them up. But so long as the high-heeled shoe reduces the apparent size of the foot and increases the height of the wearer, the vanity of women will prevent its banishment. —Philadelphia Record.

Chevrons on a Rain Coat.

Chevrons of stitched cloth or of gilt button, originally meant to decorate the upper part of the sleeve, have now abandoned their arm station and have taken up their place on the front panel of coats and cloaks. They are used like stitched straps, partly for ornament and partly to support the buttons or buttonholes, which help to fasten these outdoor garments.

This is especially noticeable where a box front is used. This is the case with a smart raincoat of Army blue cloth entirely waterproof and not too heavy. It is double faced and shows a crimson and blue check on the inside. The coat has a box front produced by a straight panel, machine stitched, cut in one with the entire shoulder yoke. The coat has been fitted to the shoulders and lies quite smooth and the fronts, of course, are double-breasted. Below the broad yoke which rests low on the shoulder descends a smart little cape of stitched cloth, which falls to the elbow. Beneath this cape descend sleeves of comfortable fulness, gathered into roomy cuffs.

From the front panel or box front are spaced seven chevrons of stitched cloth. These have each two buttonholes and a single button stitched to the right side. The buttonholes on the left receive the buttons sewed to the left side of the cloak, which folds under the box panel and so fastens the garment.

When the Hands Perspire.

Cold, moist hands are annoying, even embarrassing, at times. This condition results from several causes, the most common being general debility, nervousness and impaired circulation. Be sure that the arm holes in waists and other garments, especially coats, are sufficiently loose. Pressure at this point will frequently cause the annoying perspiration. Build up the system by a good tonic and nourishing foods. Follow the regular weekly bath with a good tonic bath and a brisk rub-down. Put alcohol and cool water, equal parts, into a bowl and sponge the entire body quickly. An astringent tonic solution should be applied to the hands, especially the palms and the under side of the fingers. Then dust with talcum powder and wipe away all superfluous particles.

Dusting the inside of all kid gloves with talcum powder will also assist in preserving them from the effects of moisture until a cure is effected. An excellent astringent solution is made by steeping a large handful of white oak bark—obtainable at any drug store —in one quart of water for two or three hours. Strain the fluid, which should measure about one pint, and add one ounce of alcohol. Pour into a bottle having a sprinkle top and keep in a cool place. Moisten the hands with the solution several times each day and rub vigorously into the palms.

Character in Footsteps.

Sharacter is easily told by the walk of women. If one is of an observant nature it will be seen that obstinate persons, who in argument rely more on muscular than intellectual power, rest the feet flatly and firmly on the ground, walk heavily and slowly, and stand with the legs firmly planted and far apart.

Slow steps, whether long or short, suggest a gentle or deflective state of mind, as the case might be.

The proud step is slow and measured. The toes are conspicuously turned out, the legs straightened.

Where a revengeful purpose is hidden under a feigned smile, the step will be slinking and noiseless.

Steps that are quick are indicative of energy and agitation.

Women Lovingly Remembered.

We have a letter from a little girl in Italy telling of her visit to the tomb of Juliet in Verona. It is a moss-clad structure, she says, almost buried beneath thousands of cards of those who visit the shrine. These cards are left there in such quantities that the keeper has to cart them away at frequent intervals, lest the tomb be buried beneath them. Verily, all the world loves this memory.—Boston Herald.

The women of the Northwestern States are trying to raise money to erect a statue to Sacajawea, the Indian woman who acted as a guide to the Lewis and Clark expedition in 1904. The memorial is to have a temporary place in the Lewis and Clark Centennial, in Portland, Ore., and afterward to be permanently erected in that city. The statue is to be of bronze, heroic in size and to cost $7000.—Boston Transcript.

New Evening Slipper.

The new evening slipper is of black satin, with the toe richly embroidered in jetted beads. The tongue of the slipper is also important, and is profusely decorated with the same bead embroidery. The heel is truly Parisian, very high, very narrow, set in far under the foot, and, it must be said, very dangerous. Mules, as we know, are the little Spanish slippers with toe pieces to keep them on the foot, but with nothing above the sole and the heel from instep to instep. They are chiefly used in dressing, and are supposed to be easy to slip on, but their facilities for slipping off are also unequaled.

Fashions of the Day

Tiny gold buttons lend a bright touch to afternoon gowns of velvet or cloth.

Capes in shawl effects after the 1830 mode are in high style for spring coats.

Mohair will be used for creating some of the most swagger gowns for spring.

Coral is in great demand at present, and consequently it is a very expensive trimming.

Hand-painting decorates some handsome imported blouses of velvet, silk and satin.

Fringe and gaugings conspicuous on new models impart a quaint old-fashioned look.

The close pointed sibeline hat is something new, and a great many society people are seen in this latest wrinkle.

Shirred waists are among the smart waists of the season, and are seen in all the many soft silks and thin wools that are so much in vogue.

Crush girdle belts and stocks to match are dainty additions to otherwise plain costumes; when made of black silk or velvet they may be worn with any frock.

Fashionable women wear a white waist of lace, crepe de chine or finest fawn exclusively with their cloth or velvet morning gowns, but one to match with dressy gowns for afternoon wear.

Ribbons of all widths are popular for trimming. In plain colors they are used as band borders and skirt bands rachings, etc. The Pompadour ribbons are often combined with lace insertion to form entire waists.

A BRIEF HISTORY

Of the Career of the Late Senator Hanna.

United States Senator Marcus Alonzo Hanna was born at Lisbon, Ohio, September 24, 1837. He was descended from Quaker emigrants of Virginia and from Scotch Presbyterian settlers in Vermont. His father was a physician and later a merchant of Cleveland, Ohio, whither the family removed in 1852.

The son was educated in the public schools of Cleveland and at the age of twenty he entered the employ of Hanna, Garretson & Co., where his father was senior partner. Upon the death of the latter in 1861 he assumed control of his father's interests.

This firm dissolved in 1867, and he associated himself with Rhodes & Co., the pioneer coal and iron firm of Cleveland. He retained his connection until 1877, when he became senior partner, the firm name changing to M. A. Hanna & Co., with which he was still identified at the time of his death.

He first actively entered politics as a delegate at large from the state of Ohio to the republican national convention of 1884, and filled a like position in 1896. In 1888 he was a district delegate to the republican national convention.

Mr. Hanna took charge of Major McKinley's preliminary canvass for the presidency during the winter of 1895-96, and so well did he conduct it that he was chosen chairman of the national committee and given the entire conduct of the campaign.

During the Cleveland street railway strike of 1899 his men resisted every effort to get them out, claiming that they had no grievance for which to strike, and in the coal miners strike of 1896-97 the Hanna properties were the only mines at which there was no disturbance.

During a prostration in the iron industries, when all the ore mines in the Michigan region were shut down and the miners' families were in distress his mines were kept running and over 150,000 tons of ore piled up on the docks in order to give employment to the men and to support their families. At one time a superintendent was about to introduce two large steam hoists and shovels for unloading vessels; but as soon as Mr. Hanna heard of the matter he ordered the machines away, saying that the men were brought there to do the work, and their families needed the wages.

Having carried to a successful issue the campaign of 1896, Mr. Hanna was appointed by Governor Bushnell, of Ohio, March 2, 1897, United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John Sherman; and to this seat he was elected in 1898 for the term expiring in 1905. Less than a month ago he was again elected for the full term beginning in 1905.

Senator Hanna's estate is about $3,000,000.

HANNA'S FUNERAL.

President Roosevelt has decided not to go to Cleveland to attend the funeral of the late Senator Hanna. He will, however, attend the services at the capitol.

The special train bearing the remains of the dead senator will leave Washington Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock and will arrive in Cleveland between 10 and 11 o'clock Thursday morning.

The train will be met at the borders of the state by Governor Herrick. The body will lie in state Thursday at the armory of the Cleveland Grays.

The funeral will be held on Friday in St. Paul's Episcopal church. The service will be conducted by Bishop Leonard, of diocese of southern Ohio, and his assistant.

The Ohio legislature being in session, the successor to Senator Hanna will not be appointed. The names mentioned as being under consideration are those of Chairman Charles Dick, of the Ohio central republican committee, Representative Burton, Governor Herrick and Secretary Taft.

Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, speaking of the late Senator Hanna, said:

"There lies dead on his shield in Washington a man who was a friend to labor, and one whose every effort was for its equal right with capital. If ever labor had a true lover and an honest friend, it was this man—a man attacked by the slanderous papers of a wretched journalism—whose hands were always working for the best interest of both labor and capital—Marcus A. Hanna."

FRAUDS IN A BALE OF HAY.

Frauds in Watch Cases.

According to an article in the Cincinnati Commercial, a fifty-one pound stone was recently found in that city secreted in a bale of hay of eighty pounds.

This is not as bad as finding a lump of lead of nearly one-half the weight of the solid gold watch case secreted in the centre of the case.

Gold watch cases are sold by weight, and as one can see where this lead is secreted until the springs of the case are taken out and the lead will be found secreted behind them.

These cases are made by companies who profess to be honest, but furnish the means to the dishonest to rob the public. It is not pleasant for anyone to find that he has lugged a lump of lead in his watch case.

Another trick of the makers of spurious solid gold watch cases is to stamp the case "U. S. Assay." The United States does not stamp any article made out of gold and silver except coin, and the fakir, by using this stamp, wants to make the public believe that the Government had something to do with the stamping or guaranteeing the fineness of watch cases.

Another trick of the watch fakir is to advertise a watch described as a solid gold filled watch with a twenty or twenty-five-year guarantee. These watches are generally sent C. O. D., and if the purchaser has paid for the watch he finds that the company which guaranteed the watch to wear is not in existence.

The Dueber Hampden Watch Company, of Canton, Ohio, who are constantly exposing these frauds, will furnish the names of the manufacturers who are in this questionable business.

NOVELS TO ORDER.

How the Five and Ten Cent Thrillers Are Made.

The task of putting into readable shape stirring tales about Jesse James, Alkali Pete, Gentleman Jim, Wild Bill, the Gold King, the Boy Detective and other heroes whose exploits thrill small boys, is not done by writers of the same heroic and fire-eating type as the characters portrayed. Men who write such stories need principally a fertile imagination, a capacity for hard work and the ability to turn out thousands of words of readable stuff a day to make them successful.

They have never rescued imperiled maidens, tracked Indians and murderers over deserts and mountain trails, or recovered lost fortunes. Many of them have never seen a live Indian or cowboy, have a bare speaking acquaintance with the detectives at headquarters, and carry no six-shooters in their back pockets.

More than one dime novel publishing firm has made a fortune at the business of providing literature for Young America, and that in the days when they paid a writer from $75 to $250 for a story. Things are done differently now.

Each dime-novel publishing house employs a staff of writers, who receive a regular salary. Besides the staff of regular contributors, persons who can be depended upon to turn in a fixed amount of copy every week, each publishing house has a list of workers who can write a story to order and at short notice.

When a regular writer falls ill or takes a vacation, or when some special event happens which makes a foundation for a plot for a popular novel, one of these special writers is communicated with and is ordered to dash off a story on three or four days' notice. Inspiration forms a small part of the dime-novel writer's stock in trade, for nearly all his stories are written to order. In these cases the writer follows a plot suggested by the publisher, and does not even select the title.

It is said that regular writers of dime novels, men who do no other kind of work, are able to produce a story of from 40,000 to 50,000 words a week, and to keep it up for six months in the year. The writer cannot attempt to think out his plot and arrange the events in the hero's life before sitting down to write, as that would take too long.—Buffalo News.

The Red, Red Rose.

Good morning, pretty red, red rose,
All wet with early dew;
Your breath is very, very sweet,
Your gown is lovely, too.

I am the little maid who gave
You water every day;
I saw you grow, and grow, and kept
The naughty slugs away.

I watched the swelling bud, to know
What time you might unfold
Your silken gown, and show to me
The secret it might hold.

Although I could not see you come
I love you just as well.
Perhaps it held a secret which
You did not care to tell.

The Duke of Marmalade.

It is not generally known that there is a Haytian nobility. When many years ago, a negro general made himself dictator of Hayti, under the title of Emperor Faustine the First, he created numerous counts, marquises, dukes and other nobles.

Their descendants claim the titles to this day, though they are not acknowledged by the Haytian government. Among these comic opera noblemen are the Duke of Marmelade and the Duke of Limonade, who take their titles from the places with those names in Hayti.

A Family of Opossums.

The first young opossums I ever saw were in their mother's pouch, which is one of the most interesting states of their development, to my way of thinking. I was examining a hollow tree in a forest in the south, w I discovered an old opossum cur up, apparently asleep. The sight not a new one, and I should proba have left her to finish her nap ha not caught sight of a little white h with a long, pointed snout, and a of beady black eyes, which peered me from beneath the larger ani This was entirely another matter. I took the old lady opossum ge by the tail, and lifted her out of tree. As I did so she growled ang and opened her mouth in a hor grin, displaying a mouthful of w teeth of many sorts and sizes. B knew that this was done chiefly fo fect, for an opossum will rarely unless you put your hand in mouth, or in some other way give good chance to get hold of you. scaly, muscular tail squirmed in hand like a snake, and before I got quite to the ground I dropped Slight as was the fall, it killed apparently, for there she lay, lips drawn back, and curled up the very attitude of death. But was only "playing possum," and had seen the trick played befor was not deceived. Not a young was in sight; even the one which betrayed to me the presence of family had retired to the depths his mother's pouch. So I rolled over, and putting in my hand d out the babies one by one. Th were 12 of them, and when I laid th on the grass, they crawled slo about, opening their mouths to ya or to give vent to explosive little squeaks, which sounded more like suppressed sneezing than anything else I can think of. Very soon they found their mother, and began to climb upon her body, holding to her long gray fur with their hand-like paws. When I tried to detach one little fellow it was amusing to see the efforts he made to retain his position. He grasped a tuft of long hair in each of his tiny fists, seized another tuft in his mouth, and twined his flexible tail firmly around another. Left to his own devices, his mother need have had no fear of his falling off.—Ernest Harold Baynes in Woman's Home Companion.

A Wise Old Muskrat.

When a boy, and still barbarian enough to delight in trapping, partly from a love of the chase that was born in me and partly to put money into a boy's empty pocket, I once caught a muskrat in a steel trap that slid off into deep water at the first pull, and so drowned the creature mercifully. This was due to the careful instructions of Natty Dingle, at whose feet I sat to learn woodcraft, and who used the method to save all his pelts. For often an animal, when caught in a trap, will snap the bone by a twist of his body, and then cut the leg off with his teeth, and so escape, leaving his foot in the trap's jaws. This is common enough among fur-bearing animals to excite no comment; and it is sad now to remember that sometimes I would find animals drowned in my traps that had previously suffered at the hands of other trappers.

I remember especially one big musquash that I was going to shoot near one of my traps when I stopped short at noticing some queer thing about him. The trap was set in shallow water where a path made by muskrats came up out of the river into the grass. Just over the trap was a turnip on a pointed stick to draw the creature's attention and give him something to anticipate until he should put his foot on the deadly pan beneath. But the old musquash avoided the path as if he had suffered in such places before. Instead, he came out at another spot behind the trap and I saw with horrible regret that he had cut off both his fore legs, probably at different times, when he had been twice caught in man's abominable inventions. When he came up out of the stream he rose on his hind legs and waddled through the grass like a bear or a monkey. He had no forefoot to rest upon. He climbed a tussock beside the hole with immense caution, pulled in the turnip with his poor stumps of forearms, ate it where he was, and slipped back into the stream again; while the boy watched with a new wonder in the twilight, and forgot all about the gun he had brought with him to shoot muskrats as he tended his traps.

It does not belong with my story, but that night the traps came in, and never went out again; and I can never pass a trap now anywhere without poking a stick into it to save some poor innocent beg.—William J. Long in Outlook.

A Persian Family.

How happy they all were! There were three of them, Johnny and Joe and Queen Mab, and they lived together peaceably on the top floor. There were three windows on the top floor, looking upon the roof of the great bow window, and here on this roof they used to sit and run themselves, and here they grew from kittenhood to catdom and became more beautiful day by day. They were a family of much taste and refinement, always dressed becomingly in gray, with a fur ruff around their necks. They shared the same room with their mistress, who was studious and fond of music, they shared her interests, and it was no uncommon sight to see Johnny and Joe each perched on a shoulder as she played on her violin, with Queen Mab festooned along the top of the music rack, all listening with their ears cocked and they eyes blinking in time to the music. Sometimes, too, they would purr so loudly that their mistress was forced to tap them severely on their noses with her bow, at which they would jump down indignantly and go and sulk in the farthest corner of the room. When she studied, one of them sat on her desk, one on the back of her chair, and one in her lap, and as she studied aloud a great deal they gained a great

Then one [illegible] should takes a look at the [illegible] and is privileged to make sug[illegible] of addition or subtraction. [illegible] a royal servant takes his pl[illegible]orarily in the kitchen of the [illegible]se.

Last comes the Royal Draught Hunter, who sees where the king's chair is to be placed at table. He sits in this chair for some time while the doors of the room, if there are doors, are opened and shut or, if there are portieres, while they are pulled aside and closed again.

He does this to see if any draught of cold air is likely to blow upon the royal back and give his majesty a cold. If the Draught Hunter discovers a draught, the chair, or the table, must be shifted, or some expedient devised to do away with the possibility of a draught.

Obviously it would never do for the king to sit in a draught during dinner, and, as obviously, he could not rise in the middle of a meal and say, "I guess I shall have to change my seat; there is a bad draught here;" hence the necessity for the Royal Draught Hunter.

Also, although the king is royal, he has a mortal stomach, and certain articles of food disagree with him. His physicians tell him what he may eat and what he may not; but, like other people, he does not always obey his medical advisors. Hence the necessity of a supervision of the menu, in order that certain dishes, of which he is fond, and of which he will eat, if set before him, in spite of the doctors, shall not be present on the table to tempt him from the path of gastronomic rectitude.

So the king, as a general rule, sits where he is told, eats what he is allowed and drinks what is given to him.

Once in awhile he gets tired of all this supervision and eats and drinks what he wants. Then he has a royal stomach-ache, and his doctors dose and lecture him.

The food and drink of Albert Edward is as carefully regulated, now that he is some 60 odd years old and ruler of the greatest empire on earth, as it was when he was a little boy of 12, and his attendants are as careful to see that he does not sit in a draught or forget his overshoes as they were when he used to toddle around the Home Park at Windsor, a bare-legged boy in kilts.

THE death of Senator Mark Hanna removes from American public life one of its most influential factors. He was a man of strong individuality who made his force felt in the Republican party.

THERE is a large amount of correspondence we have received, which we regret to be unable to use this week, and respectfully ask the indulgence of our correspondents. The Editor is sick, barely able to attend to business at all, or arrangements would have been made for its publication. We will do our best to make amends in the future.

PERRY.

...e of his gentleman, whose announcement for the office of Tax Assessor appears elsewhere in this issue, is perhaps not so well known in the eastern part of the county as it is in the west, where he is well known and highly respected. His qualifications are of the highest; he is a man of sound judgment, well posted on values, and of good general information which would render him an excellent tax assessor. He has had experience as a public official, having well represented Perry county in the legislature, and has also served as Commissioner. He submits himself to the Democratic primary as a lifelong Democrat, and if nominated and elected he will prove a valuable official.

A DANGEROUS CROSSING.

THE unfortunate accident to Mr. Andrew Wilson that occurred last Friday noon at the railroad crossing at Clanton is a caution and a warning to every citizen of Chilton county, for each and every one of them is liable to meet with a similar misfortune, if not worse. This accident is directly attributable to the contemptuous indifference of the L. & N. R. R. Company to the rights of the public at this, the most important railroad crossing between Montgomery and Birmingham. This crossing is the only one in the town of Clanton, cutting in two our main street in the centre of the town, and moreover is the most important thoroughfare between the two chief cities of Alabama. There is more traffic at this one place than at any other railroad crossing between the two cities named.

And yet the L. & N. arbitrarily blocks the crossing for a large proportion of each day, forcing men, women and children, and every vehicle to dodge around in front of a snorting, hissing locomotive, and that we have escaped with as few accidents as we have done can only be thankfully attributed to a merciful Providence. There is not the slightest reason for the blocking of this crossing, the expenditure of a few dollars by the L. & N., in removing the standpipe a short distance further north, would leave the crossing clear, and citizens would not have to risk life and limb in passing over.

It must be said that the Mayor and Council of Clanton are partially responsible, for an ordinance of the town prohibiting the blocking of this crossing is in existence, but is not enforced. In behalf of the citizens of Clanton and the traveling public the demand is made that the L. & N. R. R. company shall no longer be permitted to block this crossing at their own sweet will and fancy, and if it is necessary to provide a special police to arrest offenders, the town of Clanton will provide them.

There is one other source of imminent danger in the same connection which can and must be remedied by the Mayor and Council of Clanton. With an utter disregard of the lives and limbs of the public, the L. & N. rushes its through passenger trains over this crossing at their maximum rate of speed, and only on Sunday morning one of the most highly respected ladies of Clanton narrowly escaped being run over by No. 1. Coming around the curve, through the cut, at a high rate of speed, a train is on the crossing before one can look around. From the south, down the incline, heavily laden freight trains come dashing along at all hours, and for all the attention shown us, Clanton might just as well be nothing more than a spot on the road. The Mayor and Council should see to it that trains are not permitted to pass through Clanton at a greater speed than five miles per hour, or one of these days we will all be bewailing a fearful catastrophe.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Be it remembered that on the 11th day of January 1904, a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican party of Chilton county was held in regular order at the court house in Clanton, and issued a call for a convention of said party, to be held at Thorsby, February 13, 1904; that in pursuance to said call a county convention was held in the public school building of Thorsby and the following proceedings were had and business transacted, to-wit:

In the absence of the chairman, Mr. J. B. Downs, the meeting was called to order by Secar Harris, member of the Executive Committee from Beat 8. Thereupon the roll was called and delegates enrolled, presenting proper credentials from their respective Beat meetings, and resulted in the enrollment of the following named delegates, to-wit:

Beat 1. A. J. Glasscock, W. P. Cleckler, W. E. Horne; Beat 2. J. H. Anderson; Beat 3——; Beat 4. F. O. Dudley, T. L. Kicker, J. F. Goodgame; Beat 5. F. C. Dawson, Jack Connell, E. J. Jones; Beat 6——; Beat 7. W. J. Atchison, W. F. Foshee, B. C. Crawford; Beat 8. Secar Harris, M. Bridges. T. C. Abbott; Beat 9. Anton Thorson, B. G. Burnett, D. N. Riggins; Beat 10. J. M. Wilson, John Aldridge, W. R. Wilson; Beat 11. A. Baker, Sr., Albert Gore, M. A. Killgore.

On motion of F. O. Dudley, J. F. Goodgame, of Clanton, was elected Chairman, and W. R. Wilson Secretary of the Convention.

Mr. T. L. Kicker moved the Convention to elect delegates to the State Convention be held at Birmingham May 10th 1904, and resulted as follows, to-wit: F. O. Dudley, W. E. Horn, J. F. Goodgame, Secar Harris and E. J. Jones were duly elected as such delegates to said Convention.

On motion of Secar Harris, J. F. Goodgame, D. N. Riggins, F. O. Dudley, E. J. Jones and W. E. Horn were elected delegates to the Fourth Congressional Convention to be held at Calera on the 23d day of February, 1904.

D. N. Riggins offered the following resolution:

Resolved: That we elect a new executive committee to consist of a chairman and committeeman to represent each Beat in the county, and five from the county at large, and a secretary, who shall have no vote by virtue of his office. The chairman shall only have a vote when the committee is equally divided on a question. The chairman has the right to fill all vacancies that exist on the adjournment of this convention. All vacancies that are caused by death, resignation or removal from the county will be filled by a majority of the committee.

The above resolution was adopted and committee elected, composed of the following named citizens, to-wit:

Beat 1. A. J. Glasscock; Beat 2. C. L. Glasscock; Beat 3. None; Beat 4. J. F. Goodgame; Beat 5. E. J. Jones; Beat 6 None; Beat 7. W. J. Atchison; Beat 8. T. C. Abbott; Beat 9. D. N. Riggins; Beat 10. J. M. Wilson; Beat 11. Moses A. Killgore. From the county at large, W. H. Goodgame, J. L. Wilson, John Aldridge, W. F. Foshee, B. C. Crawford.

Secar Harris was then unanimously elected chairman and F. O. Dudley chosen secretary of said committee.

The following resolutions were offered by D. N. Riggins and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the delegates elected by this convention to represent this county in the State convention, and in the district convention to be held at Calera on the 23d day of February, 1904, are hereby instructed to vote as a unit on all questions, and the majority of the committee are fully authorized to cast the full vote of the county.

Resolved That the delegates to the district convention are instructed to vote for such delegates to the National convention to be held in Chicago on June 21 1904, that are pledged by the district convehtion, or who pledge themselves to vote for the nomination of Hon. Theodore Roosevelt for the Presidency, and for Chas. H. Scott for Alabama's member of the Republican National committee, as long as they are candidates for these respective offices.

Resolved, That the delegates to the State convention are requested to use their influence to change the manner of electing the State chairman from an election by the convention to an election by the committee elected by the convention, as is almost the universal practice of the Republican party.

Resolved, That the administration of President Roosevelt is highly commended; the policy of granting equal political rights to all qualified electors is endorsed, and we renew our pledge to conform to and abide by our National platform as the highest declaration of our party principles.

Be it further resolved, That it is at this time unwise to make nominations for county officers, therefore, when this convention adjourns it hereby delegates to the County Executive Committee plenary power to act in every particular in reference to the agreeing or not agreeing to a division of the county ticket with another political party or parties; to nominate a full or partial ticket; to certify the nomination to the Probate Judge and to do and perform any and all acts in relation to the county ticket as could this convention if it remained in session.

On motion of F. O. Dudley, the convention then adjourned sine die.

This the 13th day of February, 1904. J. F. GOODGAME, Chm.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Feb. 15, 1904

The question is being asked here why the new department of Commerce and Labor has not succeeded better in its quest for "bad" trusts which it purposed to scare off the face of the earth by getting the facts concerning the doings of those trusts and giving them publicity. That department has been doing business now for more than a year and not one line has been printed about trusts. Secretary Cortelyou has been told times innumerable where to fish to catch a nice long string of trusts, but he persists in ignoring the suggestions of Democrats. If he really meant business and it ever was intended that he should proceed against the trusts and print the facts about them, he could have collected all the data necessary for a report that would have made the trusts sizzle like a wet cat flung into hades, but the new department has been idle concerning the trusts as has been the Department of Justice. It simply shows unmistakably that the Republican party has concluded to "stand pat" on the trust question as well as upon the tariff question and all other questions that will enter into the campaign this year as the vital issues. If the people of the country want any thing done on any of these questions they must vote the Democratic ticket and elect a Democratic president and Democratic House of Representatives, or they will have the same vicious laws left on the statutes and will experience no relief from the present tax exactions and the present license of the criminal trusts of the country to rob the people. In electing a Democratic president and a Democratic House of Representatives, the people need not be alarmed lest tariff reduction and trust-busting under Democratic auspices, will disturb business. The leaders of the party are not going to jump in and tear things to pieces. They are not going to blow up the tariff wall with dynamite, they are going to begin gently to lift the rocks off one by one until the wall is not so high that the people cannot see over it and see the tariff protected industries of this country selling goods to foreigners cheaper than they do to home consumers. I am rather close to some of the party leaders here and I know that their policy is conservative and not radical. They may not be radical enough to suit some tariff reformers, but we are all traveling the same road and if all will go together, then we will accomplish something in the end which will be of real benefit to the tax payers of the country. If we do not then the same old game will continue and the Republicans will laugh in their sleeves at the split between the conservatives and the radicals which continues to let them have their own way. When will the voters of the country who really want reform learn some sense?

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition or St. Louis World's Fair is beginning to occupy considerable attention of the people here who make the laws. They are beginning to find out that the Fair is to be a bigger thing than they anticipated. They have lately ascertained this fact because the builders of the Fair have come here and produced the evidence of the wonderful outlay of cash that has been expended on the Fair, which far exceeds that of any previous Fair in the world's history. This great expenditure has compelled the Fair management to ask for the loan of four and a half million dollars from the general government to be paid back to the treasury by a lien on the gate receipts. Such a measure has been introduced and undoubtedly will pass the House as it has passed the Senate. It will meet with some opposition from the men who are the strict constructionists, but it will pass just the same and the Fair management will not be crippled in its endeavor to give to the people of the world the best exposition of the world's progress that has occurred in all history. This being the case, and so many of the interesting things about the Fair eminating from and finding their source here in the national capital it is meet and proper that the Fair and the things concerning it which are of interest to the people should find a place in this letter occasionally.

The person that writes to the Union from this place says that, "when we Pops and Republicans put our shoulders to the wheel and nominate a good ticket, the Demmies will simply not be in it." Now, that is bad news for the Demmies. I am confident that they will take their sign down and go out of business immediately after reading the prognostications of this wise prophet who signs himself "C." He writes as if the Pops and Republicans were smoking the same pipe. Now, that is tough on the pops for "Old Cuffy" gets to puff that pipe as much or more than they do. He should predict for State and National politics. I am sure all parties would heed his advice and thereby save themselves enormous campaign funds. The Populites and Republicans in this county, both being one and the same, they will hereafter be known as Repopicans. HORN-STANG.

RUSSIA PROCLAIMS WAR

The Variag and Korietz Destroyed After an Hour's Fight.

ENGAGEMENT OFF CHEMULPO

In a Manifesto to His People the Czar Declares He Used Every Endeavor to Preserve Peace—The Poltava and the Nevik Aground at Port Arthur—The Mikado Directing the War.

St. Petersburg, Russia.—The Czar has issued a manifesto making an official declaration of war. The text follows:

"To all my dear subjects: I declare that we were anxious to preserve peace, so dear to all hearts, and made the utmost efforts to preserve peace in the Far East. We expressed our willingness to revise the existing treaty between the two empires regarding Korean affairs. The negotiations, however, were not carried to a conclusion, for Japan, without awaiting the receipt of our last reply and the proposals which we had forwarded to Tokio, informed us of her intention to discontinue the negotiations and to break off diplomatic relations with us, without considering that such rupture means the commencement of war. After the receipt of a report from our Governor of the attack on Port Arthur we immediately ordered him to reply to the Japanese challenge with our arms, and we hereby make known our decision."

The Czar's manifesto concludes with an expression of trust in the help of the Almighty and a prayer for success in the conflict.

Japan's Ships Sweep the Sea.

London, England.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister here, has received official confirmation from Tokio of the destruction at Chemulpo of the Russian first class cruiser Variag and the third-class cruiser Korietz.

The text of the official dispatch received by Baron Hayashi is as follows:

"A Japanese squadron escorting transports met off the way to Chemulpo, Korea, the Russian gunboat Korietz as the latter was coming out of port. The Korietz took up an offensive attitude toward the Japanese vessels, and fired on the Japanese torpedo boats. The latter discharged two torpedoes ineffectively, and then the Korietz returned to her anchorage in the port.

"The following day Admiral Urik, commanding the Japanese squadron, formally called on the Russian warships to leave Chemulpo before noon. The Admiral added that if his demand was not complied with he would be compelled to attack them in the harbor.

"The two Russian warships left the port at about 11.30 a. m., and a battle ensued outside the Polynesian Islands. After about an hour's engagement the Russian warships sought refuge among the islands.

"Toward the evening the Russian cruiser Variag sank, and about 4 a. m., February 10, the Korietz was reported also sunk, having been blown up.

"The officers and men of the two sunken vessels sought refuge on the French cruiser Pascal."

The Russian cruiser Diana was injured by a shot from the Russian shore battery at Port Arthur, and the cruiser Novik and the battleship Poltava have also been beached at Port Arthur.

Five large Russian steamers, among them the Ekaterinoslav, fitted up as an auxiliary cruiser, and the Argun, belonging to the Chinese Eastern Railways Company, were captured by Japanese warships and taken into Saseho. Several whalers were also taken.

Outburst of Patriotism.

St. Petersburg, Russia.—There was a great patriotic demonstration here. An immense procession of all classes, headed by choristers, and carrying National flags, paraded the streets to the Winter Palace, where the National anthem and other patriotic songs were sung.

There the procession moved to the barracks of the Pavlosky Regiment, and afterward to the French Embassy, where in response to the demonstration Mme. Bombard, wife of the French Ambassador, and General Kouropatkin, Russian Minister of War, who happened to be visiting the Embassy, went on a balcony and were enthusiastically cheered.

Later the procession went to the Anitchkoff Palace to serenade and cheer the Dowager Czarina.

A Russian version of "The Geisha," which was being performed here, has been withdrawn owing to the hostile demonstrations against it.

In consequence of rumors based on doubtful statements by foreign news agencies and newspapers, concerning a naval battle at Chemulpo, the landing of Japanese troops in Korea, incidents on the Manchurian railway, and similar reports, the general staff declared that no news confirmatory of such reports had reached St. Petersburg.

Japan Lost No Ships

Washington, D. C. — The Japanese Minister gave out the following telegram, which is the substance of Admiral Togo's official report to the Government at Tokio of the attack on Port Arthur:

"Japanese combined squadron left Sasebo in command of Admiral Togo on February 6 and on midnight of the 8th Japanese torpedo flotilla attacked with success the Russian fleet at Port Arthur, and again at 10 o'clock the following morning for forty minutes. The Russian fleet fled into the harbor. Two Russian battleships and one cruiser were damaged by torpedoes. The firing was ceased at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

"Japanese ships were but slightly damaged and none has lost its fighting power.

"Casualties were fifty-eight, four of which were killed and others wounded.

"Imperial princes are all safe. After battle the Japanese officers and men are high spirited and behaved with great calmness as if they were in ordinary manoeuvres."

The number of the imperial princes on board the Japanese ships is not known here, but the naval attache of the legation is of the opinion that three of them were with the squadron.

Russians Made Brave Fight.

London.—Later accounts of the engagement with the Variag and Korietz at Chemulpo indicate that the Russians made a brave fight against an immensely superior force. The engagement was watched by thousands of persons on shore, who had gathered in anticipation of a collision.

The Korietz was utterly overmatched. The broadsides from the Japanese vessels raked her continuously until she sank. Many of her crew were killed by shells or drowned. Those of the survivors who swam ashore were captured by Japanese soldiers.

As the cruiser Variag was steaming out of the harbor she was met by a hail of shells and her mast speedily fell. Her crew fought with desperate energy for several hours.

According to one report after she had taken refuge among the Polynesian Islands her captain ordered the crew to save themselves and then himself blew up his ship.

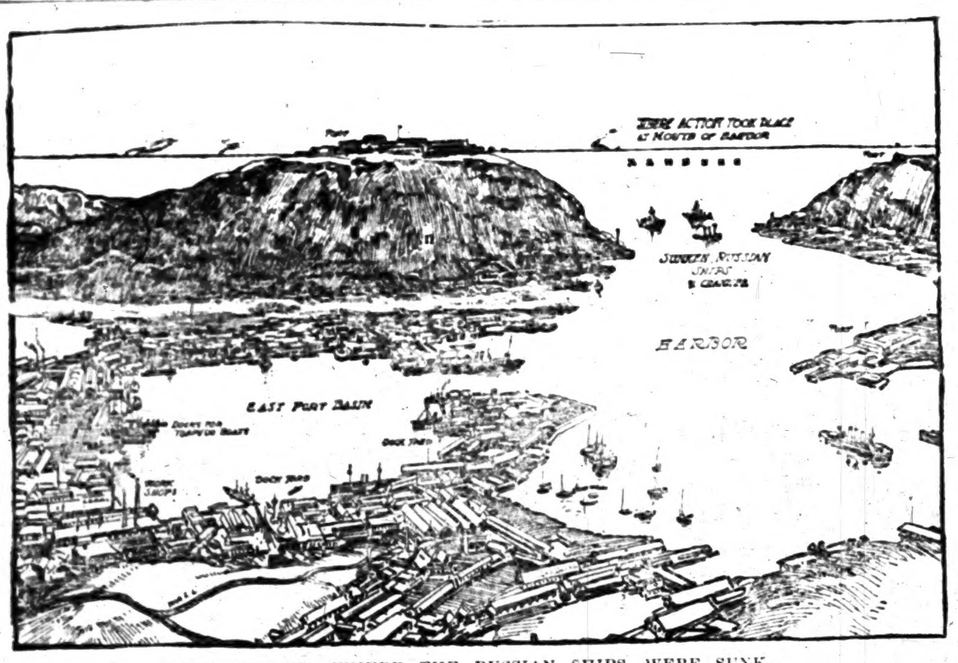
Mikado Directing the War.

Tokio, Japan.—The Emperor is taking an energetic part in the direction of the campaign. He is in constant communication with the Ministers. He is at his desk from sunrise until far into the night.

All the Provincial Governors have been summoned here to receive instructions. It is stated unofficially that a large Japanese force has reached Seoul.

Destroyed By a Mine.

St. Petersburg, Russia.—A report has been received from Viceroy Alexieff, saying that the Russian torpedo transport Yenisei has been blown up as the result of accidentally striking a mine at Port Arthur. The Yenisei sank and Captain Stepanoff, three officers and ninety-one men were lost.



PORT ARTHUR, WHERE THE RUSSIAN SHIPS WERE SUNK.

PLAN A NEW BALTIMORE

Plucky Maryland City Starts Rebuilding Her Burned District.

MANY MERCHANTS RESUME

Modern and Up-to-Date Structures Will Arise on the Sites of the Destroyed Houses—Total Loss is Now Estimated at $125,000,000—State to Lend City $21,000,000.

Baltimore, Md.—Out of the ashes which cover the 140 acres of burned business houses a new and better Baltimore will arise, modern and up-to-date in every respect. The whole city has been roused to the necessity of pushing forward the resurrection of the revived district. The undertaking will be one of the most prodigious in the whole range of municipal history. The magnitude of this work may be better grasped when it is estimated that the new buildings, many of the finest will cost about $75,000,000.

While the ruins of 1,231 more or less valuable structures are being cleared away and architects are busily engaged in preparing their plans for hundreds of new offices and stores, fifty-one fire companies of this and other cities have scores of agents at work soliciting contracts for replacing the buildings razed by the great fire, and in the temporary quarters of all the homeless mercantile institutions arrangements are being perfected for reviving the blackened centre of the city's business.

Incidental to the plans for rebuilding the burned district is a scheme for widening some of the city's streets. It is planned by the city officials to urge widening Baltimore street, turning Market place into a public square, and widening Light street. The matter will be taken up by the authorities very soon, and it may be that the plan will include condemning several blocks for park purposes.

The insurance men have conferred and place the damages at $125,000,000. The insurance losses are reckoned at from $75,000,000 to $80,000,000.

Street improvements are contemplated in the burned district, and H. C. Timanus, President of the Second branch of the City Council, is authority for the statement that the State Legislature will be asked to lend $21,000,000 for that purpose.

Definite plans for rehabilitation and relief are expected in a few days. Governor Edwin Warfield, who is President of the Fidelity and Deposit Company, one of the few financial institutions to escape the fire, said:

"I have appointed a committee of five financiers and lawyers to draft such relief legislation in the way of extending credit as may be thought desirable. All apprehension of any great financial distress in Baltimore is absolutely unfounded."

Commission men and grocers say that their supplies are entirely adequate for immediate needs and that no reputable house in town will take advantage of the situation by raising prices. Numerous offers of financial aid have been received from out of town by members of the National Association of Commission Merchants, and their help will enable them to start their business anew in a very short time.

Meanwhile the merchants say they are in a position to take all orders that come to them. Many of the larger houses, especially those with a big Southern clientele, already have secured offices and are doing their shipping on a large scale, although under difficulties.

Vegetables, eggs and butter are coming in just as usual, according to the produce dealers, and the local tradesmen say they have overcome the first uneasiness on the part of small shippers outside of the city, who were a little timid about sending their shipments here just after the fire. Fresh and salted meats, it is announced, will continue at the same prices, and sugar and coffee have undergone no change.

A GREAT RAILROAD.

The South American Continent Crossed by a Span of Steel.

Within two years the east and west coasts of South America will be united by a span of steel rails, and the dream of all engineers will have been accomplished. The first transcontinental road in the southern continent is now on the eve of being completed. Trains now run from Buenos Ayres, in Argentine, westward to a point only forty miles from the terminus of the state railroad in Chile, which carries the passengers eastward from Valparaiso, to the foot of the Andes.

Only the tunneling of the Andes remains to be done to complete the line. The surveying for this part of the road has been completed, and part of the work done. For years it has remained dormant, and for years the hopes of those interested in vast commercial enterprises in South America have been delayed. But now comes news that the great and energetic republic of Chile has decided that the road must be completed as fast as laborers can blast the rock and lay the rails.

The very fact that it is the Andes that are to be crossed tends to increase the interest in the road. It is the task to cross the Rockies or the Alps at their most precipitous points that to get across the Andes. The passes there are few and far between. At the point selected for the tunnel that will pierce the backbone of the continent the rails will be more than 10,000 feet above the level of the sea. Nor is this all.

Owing to the precipitous nature of the mountains at this point the road, which strikes their base at a straight line from the Chilean side, will be compelled to make the ascent by one of the most remarkable feats of tunnel building that has ever been attempted. The road is to ascend through a gorge by means of a cogged rail, until it reaches the limit of elevation. Then it will enter the tunnels, which, by reason of the sharp grades, are built in a spiral or corkscrew shape, crossing under itself and winding around like the proverbial snake until the Argentine boundary line is reached. This tunneling is the problem which has been solved by some of the greatest engineers of this country and England, and now that actual work on it is being pressed, it is expected that the road will be open for travel in about two years.—Brooklyn Eagle.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

A false profession will wear no better than a wise look on a fool.

You cannot cover the sores of sin with the paint of pious pretense.

When you have killed your enemy with kindness you have created a friend.

The modern prophet needs to be sure of his wires before he speaks his words.

Few things are more dangerous than a train of thought that carries no freight.

We shall never save our cities until we learn to love our neighbors more and fear them less.

When a sincere seeker reaches the station of doubt it is always safe to tell him to drive right on.

It often happens that the man who spends all his energy in groans in prayer has none left for growth in practice.

A man who is altogether taken up with his riches now, should remember that they will not be taken up with him then.—Ram's Horn.

Good Navy Marksmanship.

An interesting illustration of the excellent marksmanship of Uncle Sam's men behind the guns, as developed during the recent inspection trip of the naval committeemen on the U. S. S. Dolphin, has just come to light. Representative Roberts, of Massachusetts, was of the party. Approaching Gunner's Mate Spoer, of the ship, Mr. Roberts offered him a dollar to hit a sea gull. Spoer took a forty-pound six millimetre Colt's automatic gun, and after a trial shot, he popped a sea gull on the fly at 400 yards. One of the representatives was firm in his declaration that the shot was an accidental one, whereupon Spoer shot another sea gull at 350 yards. The crowd of astonished witnesses to the feat finally came to the conclusion that Spoer was the crack shot of the ship. This Spoer modestly disclaimed, saying, "We've a shipload of 'em, sir." Spoer got his dollar.—Washington Evening Star.

A Unique Check.

Maurice Proctor, of Mineral Point, Wis., is said to receive the smallest check drawn by the National Government. The slip of paper, with the seal of Uncle Sam on it, calls for one cent, and is paid annually. It is in remuneration in full for carrying the mails from Mineral Point to Dodgeville. A twelvemonth ago, when the bids were made for the contract, there was a great deal of rivalry among a dozen or more of those who wished to serve the Government in this capacity, and Proctor, who is wealthy and does not need the money, offered, in due form, faithfully and promptly to perform the task for a penny a year.

A Ball Watch.

In one of the chief watchmaking establishments in Zurich there is to be seen a remarkable curiosity in the way of watch or clock making. The timepiece is in the form of a ball, which moves imperceptibly down an inclined surface, without rolling. The length of this inclined surface, which is sixteen inches long, is accomplished from top to bottom in twenty-four hours. Then the ball only needs lifting to the top again. This extraordinary timepiece has no spring, and therefore needs no winding. The hands are kept in motion by the sliding along an inclined plane.—London Globe.

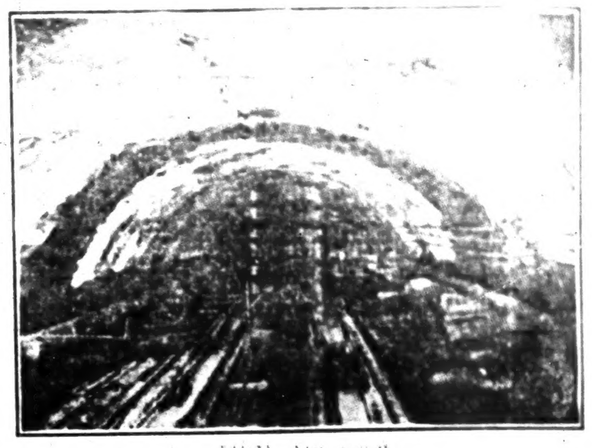
ON A SINGLE RAIL.

Novel Mode of Transportation on a Light Railroad.



After a lapse of seven years work was resumed in 1880, and continued for one year, when it was again abandoned. Operations have been resumed again, and it is now only a question of a short time when underground communication will be established between Jersey City and New York.

It is a matter of great curiosity and admiration to the average person how these human beavers, working toward a common point, yet each unable to discern the other, can meet in mid-stream so that the centre lines of tunnels coincide. The modern appliance which makes this sort of work possible is the shield. This is a cylindrical tube of about twenty-three feet diameter, made of steel plates, and both strengthened and divided into compartments by means of steel webs placed crosssectionally in both vertical and horizontal directions, forming a bulkhead across the shield. Outside of this is a cutting edge which penetrates the silt. The accompanying illustrations from the American Inventor show the first air lock in the tunnel and the process of cleaning up the debris after a "shove" of the shield has been made.

A Pocket Letter Scale.

"Will a two-cent stamp be sufficient postage for my letter?" How often the letter writer is confronted with this problem. And as frequently as the problem arises just as frequently is it found that there is no handy means of ascertaining whether the single stamp will serve to satisfy the demands of Your Uncle Sam for carrying the missive to its destination. Under these circumstances the prodigal generally slaps on another stamp in order to take no risk on delay, and forthwith drops the letter into a mail box.

On the train, in the home and at dozens of other places and under a variety of circumstances it is not convenient to have the ordinary letter scales at hand. The solution of the question seems to be presented by the inventor of letter scales which can be carried in the pocket. In fact, the contrivance is so designed that it actually fits upon the top of a lead pencil.

It consists of a metallic cylinder containing a spring properly regulated and a graduated scale. At the upper end is a [illegible] which the letter to be weighed is placed. The weight moves [illegible] the scale and indicates [illegible] representing the number of postage necessary. The [illegible] is [illegible] and [illegible] the letter to [illegible] the [illegible] is placed. [illegible] partially supported on the back of the horse or other animal which comprises the motive power. An arm fastened rigidedly to the vehicle passes over and partly around the horse and resting on a saddle suitably constructed for the purpose. In addition the animal is harnessed to the car in the usual manner with the use of traces, and the work of moving the load is done in this way.

The cars of this system are mounted on two wheels, one following the other and both rather deeply grooved to prevent them from leaving the rail. The car is balanced on the tracks by being

FOR THIRTY YEARS

Congressman Meekison Suffered With Catarrh--Read His Endorsement of Pe-ru-na.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON, OF OHIO.

Hon. David Meekison is well known, not only in his own State but throughout America. He began his political career by serving four consecutive terms as Mayor of the town in which he lives, during which time he became widely known as the founder of the Meekison Bank of Napoleon, Ohio. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh, with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last Peruna came to the rescue, and he dictated the following letter to Dr. Hartman as the result.

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison, ex-Member of Congress.

THE season of catching cold is upon us. The cough and the sneeze and nasal twang are to be heard on every hand. The origin of chronic catarrh, the most common and dreadful of diseases, is a cold.

This is the way the chronic catarrh generally begins. A person catches cold, which hangs on longer than usual. The cold generally starts in the head and throat. Then follows sensitiveness of the air passages which incline one to catch cold very easily. At last the person has a cold all the while seemingly more or less discharge from the nose, hawking, spitting, frequent clearing of the throat, nostrils stopped up, full feeling in the head and sore, inflamed throat.

The best time to treat catarrh is at the very beginning. A bottle of Peruna properly used never fails to cure a common cold, thus preventing chronic catarrh.

While many people have been cured of chronic catarrh by a single bottle of Peruna, yet, as a rule, when the catarrh becomes thoroughly fixed, more than one bottle is necessary to complete a cure. Peruna has cured cases innumerable of catarrh of twenty years' standing. It is the best, if not the only internal remedy for chronic catarrh in existence.

But prevention is far better than cure. Every person subject to catching cold should take Peruna at once at the slightest symptom of cold or sore throat at this season of the year and thus prevent what is almost certain to end in chronic catarrh.

Mrs. A. Snedeker, Cartersville, Ga., writes:

"I saw that your catarrh remedy, Peruna, was doing others so much good that I thought I would try it and see what it would do for me. My case is an old one, and I have none of the acute symptoms now, because I have had the disease so long that I had none of the aches and pains, but a general run-down condition of the whole body—sore nose and throat and stomach. I had a good appetite, but my food did not nourish my system. I had come down from 140 to about 75 pounds in weight. I now feel that I am well of all my troubles."—Mrs. A. Snedeker.

BACK TO THE FARM.

A Maine Newspaper Sees a Turn in the Tide.

One of the most serious problems that confronts the economic world today is to keep the young man on the farms. For many years there has been a tendency to congregate in the cities, and to such an extent has this been carried that all the vocations of city life have been so overcrowded that to-day it is well-nigh impossible for a stranger to get a foothold. For every situation there are a score of applicants and the young man who has no influential friends to render him aid is indeed unfortunate. We have long believed that this condition of affairs would correct itself. One of the reasons that our young men have been so willing to leave the old country home has been the lack of country attractions. This can hardly be said to hold good to-day. The trolley car, telephone and free rural delivery have well-nigh wiped out the distinctions between city and suburban life. Another powerful factor now working for the upbuilding of the country life is the agricultural college. Our young men are fast learning that farming is no longer the haphazard business of a former day, but it is one of the most exacting and scientific of pursuits. With this knowledge comes a higher respect for the vocation and a stronger desire to enter the industry. The tide is thus gradually but surely turning and the time is near at hand when farming will be held in the same high regard here that it has long been held in England. In that country when a man achieves financial success he at once seeks a country estate for a home.

Here the reverse has long held true, and the city has been held up as the ideal. This false system of ethics is rapidly going to the wall and a more exalted idea of the country life is taking its place. Rich and poor alike are beginning to take to the farm. It is the ideal spot for a home.—Lewiston Journal.

The Double-Deck Theatre.

The Ariel Theatre, which has been built on top of the New Amsterdam Theatre, is peculiar in that it is supported by what the architects of the structure say is the biggest built-up girder ever put together. The huge beam is 96 feet long and 14 feet through from top to bottom, and spans the entire proscenium arch of the New Amsterdam Theatre below. The Ariel, indeed, enjoys the distinction of being the only complete theatre in the world which has for its foundations another theatre. Because of this peculiarity the structural features of the new playhouse are of no little interest.

The entire roof over the stage is built of glass in sections. Each section is hung on a pivot and held in place by an automatic fastener, which the heat of a fire would melt. Thus released, the glass sections will swing on their pivots and the entire roof be opened to the outer air, thus forming a perfect flue, up which the smoke and flames will pass. A heavy asbestos curtain made of non-inflammable material and of strips of steel will act as a further check against the progress of the fire toward the auditorium.—New York Times.

The Thankful Driver.

With the cares of business behind him, and thoughts of wife and baby in his suburban home occupying his mind to the exclusion of everything else, Hilltop hurried to the station. He paused for a moment at a busy crossing just as a truck loaded with kegs of fresh Vermont maple syrup backed heavily against the curb. Down came a tub from the topmost tier and broke with a dull, sickening thud at Hilltop's feet. He looked in dismay at his syrup covered feet and trousers, and exclaimed:

"Here's a pretty mess!"

"Well," responded the driver, "it's not on me."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Alfalfa Clover.

For years the editor has been urging farmers to sow Alfalfa Clover, and glad he is that thousands of well-to-do farmers, scattered all over America, are doing this now, to their great benefit and satisfaction. A. Walford, Westfield Farms, Pa., writes: "I have 60 acres in Salzer's Alfalfa Clover. It is immense. I cut three crops this season and have lots of pasture besides."

Hon. H. F. Hunter, S. D., says, "Salzer's Northern Grown Alfalfa clover cannot be beat. I have solved the question of stock raising here. Salzer's Alfalfa is good for 5 rousing crops of hay, Salzer's Spelts for 60 bu. of grain and 3 tons hay, Salzer's Macaroni Wheat for 65 bu. best hog fattening wheat, and Salzer's Hanna Barley, for arid, dry land, is good for 70 bu. per acre. These are all great hog, sheep and cattle fatteners, and last but not least, Salzer's Victoria Rape for sheep, and Salzer's Teosinte, good for 20 tons of green food for cattle, and Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass and Bromus Inermis for lots and lots of good hay. These things make it possible for me to grow live stock by the thousands.

Some constitutents of the Congressmen at Washington find humor in free seeds. Representative Lacey of Iowa received a letter the other day from one such. "The seeds you sent me," wrote this man, who signed himself "John Allen," "were no good. Nothing but weeds grew where I planted them." By the next mail Mr. Lacey sent a reply: "I take pleasure in forwarding you under another cover," wrote the Iowan, "a copy of a bulletin from the Department of Agriculture. It is entitled, 'Weeds, and How to Kill Them.'"

SOURCES OF THE PEERAGE.

Ancient Lineage? Pooh! Pooh! Look Here, Says Labouchere.

"Progress is revolution in disguise and by degrees," a well known tory has recently said, "it is destined to make the peers powerless and the poor prosperous." The description will remind many of the phrase uttered by Cromwell: "There will never be a good time in England till we have done with the lords."

What is the value of our peerage of today? Lord Beaconsfield answered the question in "Coningsby" many years ago:

"'Ancient lienage,' said Mr. Millbank; 'I never heard of a peer with an ancient lineage. The real old families of this country are to be found among the peasantry; the gentry, too, may lay some claim to old blood. I can point you out Saxon families in this country who can trace their pedigrees beyond the conquest; I know of some Norman gentlemen whos fathers undoubtedly came over with the conqueror. But a peer with an ancient lienage is to me quite a novelty. No, no; the thirty years' war of the roses freed us from those gentlemen. I take it after the battle of Tewkesbury, a Norman baron was almost as rare a being in England as a wolf is now.'

"'I have always understood,' said Coningsby, 'that our peerage was the finest in Europe.'

"'From themselves,' said Millbank; 'and the heralds they pay to paint their carriages. But I go to facts. When Henry VII. called his first parliament there were only 29 temporal peers to be found, and even some of them took their seats illegally, for they had been attained. Of those 29 not five remain; and, as the Howards, for instance, are not Norman nobility. We owe the English peerage to three sources—the spoilation of the church, the open and flagrant sale of honors by the elder Stuarts and the boroughmongering of our own times. Those are the three main sources of the existing peerage of England, and, in my opinion, disgraceful ones.'"

Lord Beaconsfield might have added a fourth origin of the existing peerage, to wit, the bestowal of honors upon the mistresses of the kings and their illegitimate children. This decorous nation, therefore, delights to honor those who have inherited titles from such shameful sources.—London Truth.

Young women may avoid much sickness and pain, says Miss Alma Pratt, if they will only have faith in the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Judging from the letters she is receiving from so many young girls, Mrs. Pinkham believes that our girls are often pushed altogether too near the limit of their endurance nowadays in our public schools and seminaries.

Nothing is allowed to interfere with studies, the girl must be pushed to the front and graduated with honor; often physical collapse follows, and it takes years to recover the lost vitality,—often it is never recovered. Miss Pratt says,—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to tell all young women how much Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was completely run-down, unable to attend school, and did not care for any kind of society, but now I feel like a new person, and have gained seven pounds of flesh in three months.

"I recommend it to all young women who suffer from female weakness."—MISS ALMA PRATT, Holly, Mich.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Another Little Story.

Once there was a rich man—a very rich man—who wanted to do something handsome for a struggling institution of learning.

He called the directors together and said to them:

"Gentlemen, I purpose giving your institution $5,000,000."

"But," they said, after they had recovered from their surprise, "it will be impossible for us to raise the $10,000,000 that will be needed in order to secure your munificent gift!"

"You will not need to raise any $10,000,000," he replied, "the donation will be unconditional."

"Then the money will be invested in bonds or real estate, we presume, and we shall be allowed to use the income in erecting new buildings and paying running expenses?" they faltered.

"Not at all," responded the rich man. "The gift will be in cash, to be used in any way your please, and when it is all gone there will be another $5,000,000 at your disposal, gentlemen, if you have spent the first sum wisely."

The directors consulted together in whispers and then quietly sent for an officer.

The man evidently was insane.—Chicago Tribune.

A Professional Nurse Tells Her Experience With Doan's Kidney Pills.

Montague, Mass.

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—I heartily wish those who are suffering from backache and disturbed action of the kidneys would try Doan's Kidney Pills. As was the case with me, they will be more than surprised with the results. I had been troubled for years with my spine. I could not lie on either side. Spinal cramps would follow, and words could not explain the agony which I would endure. While in these cramps I could not speak or move, but by making a great effort after the cramp had left me I could begin to speak and move a little, but my whole back was so sore and lame that I could not even have the back bathed for some time. My nerves were in a terrible state. I would rather sit up at night than go to bed, dreading the cramps and the terrible backaches. I consulted physicians, but got only a little relief for the time being. Seeing your advertisement, my mother urged me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. After using one box I was better, and have ever since been on the gain. I have no backache and no cramps now, and I feel like a new person. My nerves are better and I know my blood is purer. Words cannot express my thanks to you for what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. In my work as professional nurse I have a chance to recommend them, and they did me so much good that I will do so on every possible occasion.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical science have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Capt. Reuben F. Kolb will address the voters of Chilton county at Cooper, on Monday, Feb. 29, 1904, at 11. a.m.

Falakto.

Farmers in this section are right busy preparing for another crop.

Miss Ressie Harris is still on the sick list. She will have been sick twelve months the 10th of next March; just think of it, nearly a year confined to her room and suffering most intensely a great portion of the time. Yet Miss Ressie seems to have borne her suffering with great fortitude and patience, welcomes her visitors with a pleasant smile, and if able converses with them most cheerfully.

Mr. George Nobles of Prattville made a flying visit to his old home and friend last.

Mr. Ruff Harris and wife of Posa visited relatives here last week.

Our community does a reasonable portion of social visiting, but don't think it interesting enough to those at a distance to make a note every call. And now a word to the man on the corner. What if he does whittle on the corner and spit sights, while there are some he does not (probably these do not mend his way or he closes his eyes when he knows they are ugly or unpleasant) he does not neglect his duty, but has been giving us little items and comments on the various subjects of the times for a number of years without a word of thanks. Such faithful, earnest service is worthy of our commendation. Bill Jones is more, we miss him, wish that some one would take his place, why not the man on the corner aspire to so high an honor? He is a close Christian, I hope he is, and he seems to appreciate the fine feeling. If he would just write and learn by experience all its joys and blessings are, I might tell it better. He also appears to be something of a critic in the use of the comic and the ludicrous that is amusing when not too much indulged. If he would give more time and energy to study and searching for knowledge and be as kind and accommodating in furnishing others and answering their inquiries, he might in a great measure fill the place of the famous Georgian. CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Jemison, Feb. 18, 1904

Editor Banner—We notice in the Birmingham News, issue of Feb 10, that the Republican State Executive Committee had accepted the resignation of L. H. Reynold, a member of that committee, and had elected W. F. Aldrich to the vacant place. It sounds to us like Reynolds had quit the Republican party altogether. If this is the case we suppose he will align himself with the Democrats or Socialists (the only two parties he has not been in) in the near future and announce himself candidate for something. The words of the poet (his name we cannot recall just now) fit Mr. Reynolds nicely; we will repeat them:

"He wireth in and he wireth out
And leaves the beholder still in doubt,
As to whether the snake that made the track
Was going home or coming back."

HORN STANG.

Clanton, Ala., Feb. 15th, 1904

Editor Banner:—Owing to some false charges that have been made against me in regard to my official duties as clerk of the town of Clanton, I respectfully ask you to publish the following, which is self-explanatory:

Clanton, Feb. 15th, 1904

Messrs. J. P. VanDerveer, ex-mayor, W. I. Mullins, E. M. Pinckard, Tipton Mullins and G. Higgins, ex-members of City Council,

Dear Sirs:—Will you do me the kindness to give me a letter stating whether or not my books, accounts and vouchers, as City Clerk and ex-officio Treasurer of the Town of Clanton were audited by order of the mayor and council of the town of Clanton prior to the expiration of my term of office. And if such books and vouchers were so audited if the same were found to be correct.

Thanking you in advance for the above kindness, I am

Yours truly, A. C. SMITH.

Clanton, Feb. 15, 1904

Mr. A. C. Smith—Dear Sir: Your letter of this date, asking that we give you statement showing whether or not your books, accounts and vouchers as City Clerk and ex-officio Treasurer of the town of Clanton were audited prior to your surrendering such office, received; and in reply thereto beg to state that just prior to the expiration of your term of office as City Clerk and ex officio Tax Assessor, Tax Collector and Treasurer of the town of Clanton, by direction of the mayor and council of the town of Clanton, you delivered your several books and vouchers for auditing, that each book and voucher was examined and checked, and that the said books and vouchers showing receipts and disbursements were found to be absolutely true and correct.

That a general financial statement of the town of Clanton, showing in detail each item of receipt and disbursement, was prepared for publication, but that such publication, was not had on account of the cost incident thereto.

Presuming that the above gives you the desired information, we are,

Respectfully,

J. P. VanDerveer, ex mayor; G. Higgins, W. I. Mullins, E. M. Pinckard.

If I should join in the above letter it would amount to an admission of some facts about which I am not fully advised. Mr. Smith's term of office expired about 2 years ago, and, as I recollect the matter, his books were examined and reported to be correct. No charge of irregularity was made against him at the time, and I have no reason to believe, and do not believe he was guilty of any improper conduct in connection with said office. TIPTON MULLINS.

I feel sure that the above is sufficient to satisfy all fair minded people as to whether or not I am guilty of any misconduct in connection with the said office. Respectfully,

A. C. SMITH.

Mulberry, Feb. 10, 1904

Editor Banner—It rains and we sagers cannot do much in the farm and we cannot haul guano and I have read all the news in the Banner, and I don't take any other paper, as the Banner furnishes all the news that we need; I don't see how we could get along without our county paper, it tells us who wants office, and so much other news. I certainly did enjoy the backwood mans peice last week. I am truly glad we have another campaign on hand, for I get letters from candidates that never did nor never would have wrote to me if there was not an election on hand. Now, I am to vote for some of them, but I cannot vote for all. If I was allowed to vote all my votes for one man I think I would cast them for Deason for Probate Judge, as he is an orphan and self-made country boy, and has made us a good clerk. I don't aim to say any thing against those other gentlemen, for I do think they are competent, good men, and Chilton county has plenty of such, but we don't need all of them at once in office. So we will save some for future use.

Well, I see we have another attack of Farmers' Alliance in some parts of the country. I wonder what will become of us if it is contagious, for it is said that a back set of most any disease is worse than the first attack. Men and brethren, you can't organize the farmer that has been tried often, I don't believe it was intended by our Maker, and every effort so far has been a sad failure. Neither can the Farmers' Mutual Insurance stand much longer, when all the officers and committees have to come together to investigate how a house looked before it burned by looking at the ashes. But I understand the main thing is to draw the pay and swap horses and go home and make no report, and if they did what good could such report be to the association? The motto is bear ye one another's burdens. But we ought not to make the burden. Yes, its principles are good, like the Farmers' Alliance, but some how they are subject to be worked and twisted so that they are unbearable. But I will hush for fear I hurt some one's feelings, and then I would feel sorry. W. Y. ATCHISON.

Should an inclined railway be constructed up Monte Sano, near Huntsville, Ala., it will result in the development of one or more coal mines on the mountain that have been worked in a desultory way for several years. The chief difficulty in the way of placing the coal on the market is the question of transportation. Local capitalists, it is said, are ready to work the mines extensively if a railroad down the mountain is ever built.

The invitation extended Hon William H. Hearst to come down to Mississippi and address the legislature has been heard from, but Mr. Hearst has not yet replied one way or the other. His secretary, Mr. L. J. O'Reiley, writes from Washington Hon. L. Pink Smith, clerk of the house, that the resolution "will have Mr. Hearst's personal attention at the earliest possible moment."

The floating indebtedness of the Southern railway, including $8,800,000 of certificates of indebtedness as of June 30, 1903, is stated to be in the neighborhood of $13,000,000. The debt has been largely incurred in the double tracking and general improvement of a great part of the main line, and in the purchase of equipment needed at all times by this system.

Russia is addressing the powers either through their representatives at St. Petersburg, the emperor's envoys abroad or both, a vigorous communication charging Japan with repeated violations of the laws of nations, in threatening to attack a neutral port, Chemulpo, Korea, unless the Russian war ships within came out to face an overwhelming force.

A business of nearly $200,000 a year is done by lumber men in Lauderdale county, Alabama. There are now stacked on the Tennessee river wharf at Florence, Ala., about 12,000 crossties awaiting shipment, which are valued at $30,000, and this is merely one item.

It is understood that bond to the amount of $16,100 has been agreed upon in the Cornwell case and everything has been arranged so there will be no hitch when he presents himself, which will be at an early date.

The proceedings of the Alabama Press association in its thirty-second annual session, held in Anniston last May, have been issued, and are being circulated.

The Southern railway ticket office in the Jefferson hotel, Birmingham, was robbed last Saturday.

Opelika, Ala., will soon have a paid fire department equipped with improved fire fighting apparatus.

Orders have been issued for the mustering out of the Montgomery, Ala., Mounted Rifles.

Bessemer, Ala., will vote on bonds for a $35,000 high school on Monday, the 29th.

Birmingham had 364 fires last year, with losses aggregating $120,603.

Eight prisoners escaped from the Anniston jail Monday morning.

Lauderdale county's books are reported substantially correct.

The new army recruits are objected to by Gen. Bates as undersized. Their fighting qualities may be none the worse. The man who made the Isthmian revolution possible, the Pewee of Panama, Gen. Huertas, is only 4 1-2 feet "tall."

An extraordinary story was told in the police court at Blackburn, England, the other day concerning a woman who held over 40 policies on the lives of men she had never seen, paying for these policies premiums to the amount of 25 shillings a week. This was the story of her husband, and the woman herself admitted that she paid 14 shillings a week, and that she insured the lives of all her lodgers. This gambling in the lives of human beings appears to be a recognized feature in the economy of certain classes; as a rule, however, it is reserved to the lives of the children of each particular household.

So far from being an evidence of a national lewity and lack of seriousness slang is the language of sincerity, declares Prof. Herman Spencer in a recent number of Booklovers' Magazine. It is the result of an instinctive effort to get as far away as possible from everything like pretentiousness. It is the antipodes of pathos. It is the language of the whole people, because it is expressive of the national sense of humor that is never so keen as when it contemplates with a joy likewise unutterable the spectacle presented by the fake exposed. It is blunt, it is crude, it is brutal sometimes, but it is always sincere. It directs against the citadels of evil the mighty engines of laughter. It does for our nascent abuses what the mordant satire of Martial and Juvenal failed to do for decadent Rome.

THE CANAL TREATY

Senator Carmack Has a Hot Broadside to Discharge

Tuesday a vote will be had on the Panama canal treaty. With the Panama question disposed of, the senate will take up appropriation bills, giving precedence to the agricultural bill. It is expected that it will be debated at some length. Then the legislative, executive, judicial, naval, pension and army bills will be considered.

Senator Carmack, of Tennessee, if opportunity is afforded him before the vote is taken on the canal treaty, expects to deliver a speech on that subject with special reference to the forty million dollars. In discussing the matter the senator does not mince words. He declares that Vunau-Varilla, the minister from Panama, is the very worst of the knaves whose thieving operations bankrupted the old Panama Canal company, and to prove it the senator has official reports and documents from the French courts. Senator Carmack points out that in the beginning the French peasantry chiefly raised the money, about two hundred and eighty-five million dollars, to start the canal scheme.

Of this amount one hundred and seventy million dollars was corruptly expended in bribery of French newspapers, cabinet ministers and members of the French parliament. About one hundred and fifteen million dollars were nominally expended on the canal work, but about half of this sum went into the pockets of swindling contractors and others, and represented not a single day's work on the canal.

"I have heard on what I consider first-rate authority that Mr. W. N. Cromwell, the attorney of this company, is to receive 5 per cent, or about $2,000,000, of this $40,000,000. I should be glad to know whether this is true, and Mr. Cromwell no doubt, if he thinks it worth his while, can give me and the country the information.

"Then I should be glad to know what legitimate service Mr. Cromwell could have performed in connection with this business that would entitle him to such an enormous fee."

Hanna's Funeral.

The nation, state and home city of Senator Hanna bestowed upon him Friday afternoon their last honors. Funeral services over the remains of the dead statesman were held in St. Paul's Episcopal church.

As a mark of respect for the dead business was abandoned from 12 to 2 o'clock throughout the city. From 1 and electric roads was suspended. During a portion of that time people stood with bowed heads.

The body, accompanied only by the family, pallbearers and Bishop Leonard, proceeded to Lakeview cemetery, where a final farewell of the dead was taken in Wade Memorial chapel. The services consisted simply of a prayer by the bishop. The body was deposited in crypt in the chapel to await burial at the pleasure of the family.

OBJECTIONABLE MATTER

To be Crusaded Out of Postal Rights. Advertisements Included.

The postoffice department has begun a crusade against the printing of objectional advertisements and stories in newspapers and periodicals throughout the country. The action is based on section 3893 of the revised statutes, which imposed a fine of not exceeding $5,000, or imprisonment for not over fifty years, or both for any person depositing in the mails or aiding in circulating through the mails of any obscene print, pamphlet, etc.

It is proposed to amend this law to include vulgar advertisements and other printed matter. Under the new policy a number of papers containing questionable matter have been thrown out of the mails under telegraphic orders to the postmasters, and a campaign will be waged against objectionable medical advertisements which are widely published.

"Russia gladly and willingly favored the suggestion of Secretary Hay that, as far as possible, the belligerents in the far eastern war localize hostilities and respect the neutrality of China in the interest of a continuance of peaceful intercourse of the rest of the world." This statement was made by Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador to the United States, and he added: "My government expressed the conviction that Mr. Hay's suggestion was prompted by motives of the highest humanity and was mutually advantageous to the belligerents."

The report of Charles J. Bonaparte, who was appointed to investigate affairs in Indian Territory, has been received at the interior department.

Declaration of incorporation of the Alabama Phosphate company, with a capital stock of $450,000, has been filed in the office of the judge of probate of Montgomery county. The company will begin work at once to construct a plant in north Montgomery, which will give employment to 200 workmen. The stockholders are all prominent phosphate manufacturers of Columbia, Tenn., and are owners of large tracts of phosphate lands in the Columbia district.

FURTHER EXPANSION

San Domingo May Become a United States Colony

The turn affairs have taken in San Domingo gives credence to a rumor that has been prevalent around the war department and white house for several days to the effect that San Domingo is to be made part of the United States in a few weeks.

The president has made all arrangements for this, and it is boldly announced in administration circles that the strife ridden country would have been seized two weeks ago had it not been feared that such action would have jeopardized the ratification of the Panama canal treaty.

Francis B. Loomis, assistant secretary of state, has gone to the West Indies. Ostensibly Mr. Loomis is going with Admiral Dewey to witness the maneuvers, but it is understood that he is sent by the president to investigate the situation in San Domingo, where he will be on the spot ready to act when the administration's policy is unfolded.

Mississippi Money.

Mississippi's superintendent of education is figuring out the amount of school fund money that is to go to each of the seventy-five counties of the state, and in a few days the teachers will get their money. The sum to be distributed at this time on account of the January distribution is $833,333.33, and that will make a great hole in the state's strong box. The expenses of the legislature will be nearly another hundred thousand dollars, and when the running expenses for the month of March are paid there will be little or nothing left in the state treasury.

Car Report.

The report of the Alabama Car Service Association, issued last week, shows by detail the number of cars handled from each point last year. It credits Birmingham, 95,442 cars; Bessemer 69,772 cars; Ensley 56,748 cars, Anniston 27,398 cars, Mobile 44,662 cars, Montgomery 28,647 cars, North Birmingham 37,945 cars, Sheffield 38,266 cars.

The total for 1903 is 733,816, an increase over the previous year of 117,879.

Another Iron Maker.

The probabilities are that the work that has been suspended for the past few weeks on the construction of No. 6 furnace of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway company at Ensley, Ala., will be resumed in a few days. It is understood that a large number of workmen will be put at work on the furnace, and it will be pushed rapidly to completion.

Not So Much Gold.

The production of gold for the year 1903 fell below that of 1902 to the extent of $5,500,000. The total, with the gold from Alaska included, is a little less than $74,500,000. In 1902 the total was more than $80,000,000. The miners' strike in Colorado is the principal cause of the decrease.

Big Stove Order.

The Sheffield, Ala., stove works has received from a wholesale firm in South Carolina the largest order for stoves ever given to an Alabama factory. The order calls for $25,000 worth of stoves, to be delivered at the earliest possible date.

The verdict of the arbitration court relative to the claims against Venezuela are made known. It recognizes the preference of England, Germany and Italy on 30 per cent of the import duties at La Guyra and Porto Cabello. The United States is charged with the execution of the sentence within three months.

Naval officials are considering earnestly the strengthening of the American Asiatic fleet in view of the vast interests of this country in the Philippines and China and in Korea. At the same time that the fleet is regarded as too small there is a desire to avoid exciting the suspicion of the old world powers, lest this government may be put in a false light.

The Japanese squadron has captured four Russian torpedo boats at Port Arthur by using Russian signals. This dispatch confirms reports from various quarters of a fresh attack on Port Arthur by the Japanese. The report adds that the Russian crews of the four torpedo boats have been transferred.

In the postoffice appropriation bill the fast mail subsidies amounting to $142,000, between Washington and New Orleans, and $25,000 between Kansas City and Newton, Kas., are continued. The item for railway transportation amounts to $45,000,000, which is an increase of about 3 per cent.

William Duggan walked off the rear platform of a rapidly moving passenger train near Heflin, Ala., while asleep and was uninjured. When he awoke he caught a freight train and returned to his home.

Mell Cotton and Roper Harris, two men injured by a boiler explosion at Ironton last Saturday, died of their injuries Wednesday.

Mrs. Hill, the widow of the late Senator Ben Hill, of Georgia, died at Washington Sunday, in the 79th year of her age.

HARDING RELEASED

Florida Authorities Fail to Hold Bank Wrecker

The United States marshal's office has received a communication from Florida stating that L. C. Harding, accused of perpetrating frauds at Gadsden, and wanted in many other places, had been released by the state authorities. The information comes in the shape of a letter from John F. Horr, marshal at Tampa, Fla., to whom warrants had been sent from Birmingham for the arrest of Harding and the request to bring him to Birmingham. Harding was then held by the state authorities, who would not give him up to the Alabama state officers. Marshal Horr wired the sheriff at Brookville, where Harding was held, to keep him until he could arrive with the papers. Several days later a telegram was received from Sheriff Law as follows:

"Harding not here. Been gone three or four days."

The release of Harding comes as a great disappointment to many people in Gadsden, Fort Payne and other places where he operated.

FROM THE FAR EAST.

The Latest Items from the Seat of the Russo-Japanese War.

Kuropatkin has been relieved of his functions as minister of war, and has been appointed commander-in-chief of the Russian army in the far east.

Russia has entered a protest because the Vicksburg did not take on board any of the surviving Russian sailors at Chemulpo.

A Russian soldier gets 90 cents every four months and has to pay for his own soap and towels.

Thirty per cent of her population has left Port Arthur.

All to Shanghai.

The United States cruiser New Orleans and the gunboats Wilmington and Annapolis, which sailed from Manila on February 15th under command of Rear Admiral Cooper, upon arriving at Che Foo received orders from the secretary of the navy to return to Shanghai.

When the outbreak of hostilities between Russia and Japan occurred, Admiral Evans, commanding the Asiatic fleet, dispatched a cruiser squadron to Shanghai and Admiral Cooper's squadron to Che Foo. Secretary Moody has ordered them all to Shanghai.

Insurance Companies' Baltimore Loss $31,095,132.

The Baltimore underwriters' paper prints a list of losses of all fire insurance companies in the Baltimore fire. The total gross loss is $32,864,894, of which $6,000,000 falls upon the local companies. The estimated total of salvage is $1,579,762, which leaves a net loss to the insurance companies of $31,095,132.

It has been learned that many of the large wholesale dry goods houses formed an insurance pool among themselves which amounted to about $5,000,000, from which practically nothing will be realized. Another development is that few tenants of the so-called fireproof buildings carried any insurance.

Believed to be Serious.

A telegram was received from Mr. Fairley asking his wife and son to come at once. This is taken to mean that the injuries to the labor official in Colorado were more serious than at first supposed. A letter was received stating that Mr. Fairley had been knocked down, badly stamped in the face and some of his ribs broken by the men who assaulted him. His face was also badly bruised by blows from the butt end of a pistol. It is feared that his injuries are more serious than the news contained in letters indicated.

A special grand jury summoned to investigate the Iroquois theater fire voted indictments against five men. Those who were indicted are: Will J. Davis, part owner of the Iroquois theater; Thomas Noonan, business manager, and James E. Cummings, stage carpenter, all of whom are charged with manslaughter; George Williams, city building commissioner, and Edward Laughlin, city building inspector, charged with culpable omission of official duty in office.

Arrangements are being made to build a new steamboat to ply the waters of the Coosa river in the interest of Gadsden, Ala. The boat will be used to open up a new territory below Gadsden from which it is thought many thousand dollars of trade can be brought and a large amount of cotton that is not received now. The boat will be ready for the fall trade.

In Atlanta the National Educational association is in session.

Edward Reigar, who gave his address as Chicago, was arrested at the white house and locked up pending an inquiry into his mental condition. Reigar is evidently of unbalanced mind. He has written many letters to the president, suggesting that people be named in accordance with their occupations. Reigar desired to see the president to ascertain why his letters had not been answered. When he was searched a loaded revolver and a box of cartridges were found in his pockets.

MERGER PLANNED.

And Birmingham is Promised a Railroad to the Atlantic at Brunswick.

Charles Livingston Hyde, of New York, chairman of the board of directors of the Brunswick and Birmingham railroad, states positively that the Brunswick and Birmingham and the Atlantic and Birmingham railroads are to be consolidated. This consolidation, said Mr. Hyde, practically assures the building of a line, as projected by us, from Brunswick to Birmingham, and will give the Atlantic and Birmingham tidewater outlet at Brunswick.

Mr. Hyde stated that the merger of the two roads may take place March 15th, the time when the option held by the Atlantic and Birmingham will expire.

PROMINENT CITIZENS QUARREL.

And One Uses a Shot Gun with Possibly Fatal Results.

At Center, Ala., Hiram Jordan shot Doc Sowell with a double-barreled shot gun last Friday, inflicting serious wounds. Both parties are well to do farmers, and the shooting occurred in the public road near Jordan's home.

Sowell, it is reported, was passing Jordan's house when Jordan engaged in a quarrel with him over some trivial matter and threatened him with his gun. As Sowell returned a short time later Jordan renewed the altercation and approaching within ten feet of Sowell shot him in the face and as Sowell turned away emptied the other barrel in his side and shoulder.

Sowell was carried home and received medical attention. He is in a critical condition. Jordan is at large with officers in pursuit.

THE OPEN GRATE AGAIN.

Granddaughter of Alabama Governor Dead from Burns.

Miss Elizabeth O'Neal, daughter of the Hon. and Mrs. Emmet O'Neal, of Florence, Ala., died from the effects of burns received December 26th. She was standing in front of an open fire when her clothes became ignited. She was taken to Memphis and everything possible was done to save her life, but after nearly eight weeks of suffering death came on her 17th birthday. She was a granddaughter of the late Governor O'Neil, of Alabama.

The Cane Crop.

Favorable weather conditions are still prevalent throughout the sugar district and the work of planting cane has been practically finished.

It is reported that local capitalists of Montgomery will organize a company to be known as the Kentucky-Alabama Oil company with a capital of $300,000.

The subcommittee of the judiciary committee of the house of representatives, which held three sessions investigating the charges against Federal Judge Swayne, of Florida, has adjourned to meet in Washington March 8th, when it will report its findings to the judiciary committee.

The president has offered a position on the isthmian canal commission to Alfred Noble, chief engineer in charge of the construction of the Pennsylvania railroad.

British army authorities have at last come to the conclusion that success in war depends upon the men behind the guns knowing how to shoot straight. Soldiers and gunners hereafter are to be taught that art.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDING

FEBRUARY 19TH.

The house today began consideration of the naval appropriation bill, four hours being allowed for general debate. During the general discussion Mr. Fitzgerald democrat of New York declared that our naval program was to procure a naval force greater than that of Germany. He further said:

"In all sections of the country conviction right or wrong, is firm that the present occupant of the white house is apt to involve us in war with some other nation," adding that the same belief had been held with reference to the head of another great nation "which may account," he went on, "for the fact that at a dinner on Lincoln's birthday at Grand Rapids, Mich., the highest compliment that Baron Sternberg thought that he could pay to President Roosevelt, was to declare that he very greatly resembled the emperor of Germany.

The house upon convening passed the bill authorizing the construction of pipe lines for oil and gas through the Indian Territory amending it so as to limit the period of grants under the bill to twenty years on the suggestion of Mr. Williams, who said "the history was, or at least he hoped it was on the eve of acquiring statehood."

FEBRUARY 20TH.

Panama was the subject of speeches in the senate and was the only subject of general importance that received any attention. Mr. Spooner completed the speech begun by him on Thursday and Mr. Morgan and Mr. Money both made brief addresses.

Mr. Morgan spoke in opposition to the treaty as usual, and announced that he would not be heard again on the treaty. Mr. Money announced his intention of voting for the ratification of the canal treaty, but criticised the part taken by the United States in the secession of Panama.

After Mr. Dayton, republican of West Virginia, of the committee on naval affairs, had pleaded for a big navy, Mr. Hitchcock, democrat of Nebraska, declared that there was gross extravagance in the annual appropriations bill. He asserted, too, that the larger items in the army and navy supply bills went to the trusts. He gave notice that he would attempt on Monday to amend the bill to provide for a government armor plate factory.

Mr. Hardwick, of Georgia, precipitated a discussion on the Philippine question by declaring that the Filipinos of the islands was responsible for the demand for a large navy. He challenged the majority to make a declaration as to the future of the islands.

Mr. Williams, the minority leader, sought to secure an adjournment on Tuesday, that proper respect might be paid to the memory of George Washington on Monday. Mr. Payne of New York, thought it would be more patriotic to celebrate the anniversary by building up the navy. Finally the house adjourned until Monday with the naval appropriations bill still pending.

FEBRUARY 22D.

The feature of the session of the senate was a speech by Senator Morgan in explanation of his former speech on the Isthmian situation. He complained of the criticisms of his utterances at this time, saying that they had been misunderstood and misrepresented and contended that his declaration on that occasion had been made to procure full information concerning the Panama revolt and not to cast criticisms on the president.

Washington's farewell address was read by way of celebrating the day.

Mr. Culberson called up and withdrew his resolution directing the committee on judiciary to investigate the constitutional right of Panama to secede and form a government. In withdrawing the resolution Mr. Culberson briefly discussed its purport, saying that any one who justified Panama's secession might justify the secession of the southern states in 1861.

The naval appropriations bill encountered opposition in the house committee of the whole. Mr. Hull of Ohio, chairman of the rivers and harbors committee, announced that he could not support a bill which declares that the United States, which, in his view, should be the leader of all works for peace, is going to treble and quadruple its navy. Ultimate and all under the assertion that it is done for peace.

Mr. W. W. Kitchen, of North Carolina, endeavored to have eliminated from the bill the provision for the purchase of land for a coaling station at Guantanamo, raising a point of order against it. Guantanamo ultimately will cost $12,000,000. He said the policy should be to keep pace with the growing needs of the country.

Evans Wants to Stay.

Rear Admiral Evans has cabled the navy department expressing a desire to remain in the far east for the present in the event that the Kentucky is not to be brought home to be repaired. He feels that the cruise is extremely important out there and for this reason offers to remain there though his time of real duty will expire next month. The department has decided him, leaving the matter entirely to his own judgment.

INDICTED FOR LAND

Arrest of Four Western Ordered by Washington Grand Jury.

Washington, D. C.—As a result of the investigation of alleged fraudulent public land frauds in many of the states the Grand Jury of the District of Columbia reported a true bill against four for conspiracy against the government. Benson, a wealthy real estate dealer of San Francisco; Frederick A. Kilgore, of San Francisco, closely associated with Benson in land affairs; Horace G. Dimond, of California, an attorney representing Benson, and Hyde, and H. Schneider, of Tucson, Ariz., an agent of Benson and Hyde.

Bench warrants were issued and Schneider was arrested. He was arraigned before Justice Barnard, and was fixed his bail at $20,000. Hyde has been a witness before the Grand Jury in the cases against the defendants. Benson has been under arrest here on a charge of bribery. Hyde is believed to be in New York. Hyde is thought to be in San Francisco.

TRAIN FALLS 350 F

Baltimore and Ohio Freight Plunges Mountainside.

Wheeling, W. Va.—A Baltimore & Ohio freight train went over the mountainside to the rocks, 350 feet below. The cars jumped the track in a tunnel just west of Piedmont. The fire train went over the edge and was broken up. Fireman Egan, of Westernport, was killed. Engineer Kenney, engineer, of Cumberland and escaped with injury.

This is the second bad accident that has happened on the same grade in the last few months at the place at which these wrecks occurred is one of the most dangerous on the Baltimore and Ohio system. On one side there is a sheer drop into the valley, in many places of hundreds of feet, and when a train goes over here it is usually reduced to kindling wood.

THE FUNERAL OF HANNA

Impressive Services Held in the Senate Chamber.

BODY TAKEN TO CLEVELAND

The President, Cabinet, Supreme Court Judges and Members of the House of Representatives Attend — Eulogy and Prayer by the Chaplain of the Senate —No Military Escort.

Washington, D. C.—Extreme simplicity and solemnity characterized the funeral ceremony conducted over the body of Marcus A. Hanna, late Senator from Ohio, in the Senate Chamber. No band and no military escort accompanied the modest funeral procession which left the Arlington Hotel and slowly wended its way up Capitol Hill to the Senate entrance of the National legislative building. Borne on the shoulders of eight Capitol policemen, the flower laden coffin was carried to the head of the centre aisle of the Senate. In the chamber were the President and his Cabinet, a representative gathering of the diplomatic corps, the Supreme Court and the members of the Senate and the House of Representatives, while close beside the bier sat the grief-stricken members of the late Senator's family. A short prayer offered by the chaplain of the House, a brief eulogy and prayer by the chaplain of the Senate, the singing of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," by the Gridiron Club Quartet and the benediction constituted the ceremony, and those who had gathered to pay this last tribute to the dead Senator filed silently out of the chamber. The brevity and simplicity of the service and the high rank of the men gathered to take part in it rendered it imposing, and throughout it seemed to accord with the simple tastes and democratic habits of the man in whose memory it was conducted.

The train bearing the body of Senator Hanna left Washington for Cleveland with all the members of the Senator's family and a number of personal friends. The coffin was taken from the Capitol and was escorted to the Pennsylvania Railroad station by the committee of Senators and Representatives in charge of the funeral. The train consisted of one baggage car, a dining car, two Pullman sleepers, a private car and an observation car. The coffin was placed in the observation car, and around it were banked the flowers.

INDICTED FOR LAND FRAUDS.

Arrest of Four Western Operators Ordered by Washington Grand Jury.

Washington, D. C.—As a result of the investigation of alleged wholesale public land frauds in many Western States the Grand Jury of the District of Columbia reported a joint indictment for conspiracy against John A. Benson, a wealthy real estate operator of San Francisco; Frederick A. Hyde, of San Francisco, closely identified with Benson in land affairs; Henry C. Dimond, of California, an attorney representing Benson, and Hyde and Joost H. Schneider, of Tucson, Arizona, an agent of Benson and Hyde.

Bench warrants were issued and Schneider was arrested. He was taken before Justice Barnad, and the latter fixed his bail at $20,000. Schneider has been a witness before the Grand Jury in the cases against the other defendants. Benson has been indicted here on a charge of bribery, and is now believed to be in New York, while Hyde is thought to be in San Francisco.

Wheeling, W. Va.—A Baltimore and Ohio freight train went over the mountainside to the rocks, 350 feet below. The cars jumped the track at Everett tunnel just west of Piedmont. RUSSIAN CRUISER SUNK

Boyarin Blown Up With Two Hundred Officers and Men.

KOREA TO RELY ON JAPAN

Russian Troops Freeze to Death in Crossing Lake Baikal — Admiral Alexieff Leaves Port Arthur for Harbin—Imperial Ukase Issued at St. Petersburg —Japanese War Loan to Be Issued.

St. Petersburg.—The Russian second-class cruiser Boyarin was blown up by a mine in the same manner as was the Russian torpedo transport Yenisei. She had on board 197 officers and men, all of whom, it is understood, were lost. No details of the disaster have been given out.

The Boyarin was 348 feet long, forty-one feet beam and sixteen feet draught. She was of 3200 tons displacement and her trial speed was twenty-five knots. Her armament consisted of six 4.7-inch guns, eight 1.8-inch guns, two 1.4-inch guns and three machine guns. She was also fitted with six torpedo tubes.

Captain Stephanof, who was blown up with the torpedo gunboat Yenisei, and who himself invented the system for laying submarine mines which is considered responsible for the catastrophe, had caused the Yenisei to be fitted with his device for the rapid laying of mines, whereby a trolley line extended beyond the vessel's stern along which the mines slid out and dropped into their appointed places. This plan did away with the cumbersome work of laying the mines from small boats. The accident was due to the excessive strain on the Yenisei's anchor cables while the mines were suspended, pending their immersion. The two cables snapped and one mine collided with another.

Tokio.—The Emperor of Korea has promised the Japanese Minister at Seoul never to intrust the country to any other power and to rely entirely on Japan.

The war loan will be issued on March 1.

At a meeting of bankers held here it was shown that the domestic loan of 100,000,000 yen, to be issued in March, will be taken up entirely in Tokio. The Emperor subscribes for 20,000,000 yen. His Majesty is daily receiving and bidding farewell to large batches of officers. The Emperor of Korea has sent a gift of tobacco and wine to the Japanese troops and has ordered the local officials to afford them every facility. He has congratulated Japan upon her victory, declaring that in view of Korea's position her satisfaction is equal to Japan's.

Berlin.—It is reported here that 600 Russian soldiers have been frozen to death while marching across Lake Baikal, Eastern Siberia. The temporary railroad across the lake is not yet completed. A large detachment of troops was sent on a twenty-two mile march over the ice-covered lake, and it is presumed that some of these troops lost their way in a snowstorm and perished.

St. Petersburg.—An imperial ukase has been issued commanding that all the troops in the military establishments in the Siberian military districts be placed in readiness for war, that all the divisions in the Far Eastern viceroyalty be brought to war strength, and that the army and navy reserves in the Siberian and Kazan districts be called out for active service.

The authorities are empowered to requisition the necessary horses.

Notice has been given that emigration eastward is suspended. The Siberian Railroad is monopolized by the transportation of troops and war munitions, to the complete exclusion of commercial traffic.

Two small Japanese merchant steamships were fired upon off the coast of Japan by four Russian warships. One of the vessels sank and the other escaped.

New-Chwang.—Viceroy Alexieff left Port Arthur for Harbin with General Pflug, the chief of staff and the general staff.

It is said that the Russian army and navy commands will be reorganized, and that General Kerpaitsky will command the Yalu division, which is expecting to be attacked by the Japanese forces.

Mines have been constructed and preparations made for depositing them at the mouth of the river here, where the forts have been occupied by a field battery of artillery and guns from the Russian gunboat Sivoutch.

Atrocities are daily perpetrated on foreigners and natives, both by the organized police and incoming troops, which makes it impossible for the civil administration of New-Chwang to control the situation. It is feared that a reign of terror will be caused if the neutral powers remain inactive.

HURT IN TROLLEY SMASH.

Motorman Lost Control of Car and It Jumped the Track.

Chagrin Falls, Ohio. — The worst wreck in the history of the Eastern Ohio Traction Company occurred in this village, when a heavily loaded passenger car dashed down a steep hill for more than a mile from the centre of the town and jumped the track at a sharp curve.

The motorman lost control of the brakes. Sixteen persons were more or less seriously hurt by the car overturning and sliding along the ground for twenty-five feet.

MYSTERY IN TWO DEATHS

Bridgeport Man and a Maid Servant Killed in His House.

News of the Tragedy Telephoned to a Neighbor by Mrs. Canfield, Wife of One of the Victims.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Joseph B. Canfield, superintendent of the Canfield Rubber Company, and his Swedish maid servant, Vinda Andersen, were found dead in their bedrooms in the Canfield residence, 840 Colorado avenue.

Mrs. Canfield was found in another bedroom of the house too dazed to make a coherent statement.

When the case was first reported to the police they began work on the theory that Mr. Canfield and the maid had been poisoned. A hasty investigation, however, convinced them that the double tragedy was the result of asphyxiation by coal gas from a hot air furnace.

Further inquiry seemed to weaken that theory. It was learned, for instance, that a window in the bedroom where Mr. Canfield's body lay in bed was open about eight inches, and that the air must have blown directly across the bed. That Mr. Canfield, who was an athlete of considerable local fame, should have been killed by the gas, while his wife, whose health is poor, was not completely overcome by it, is regarded by the police as remarkable.

Mrs. Canfield explains that she and her husband occupied separate bedrooms that night.

The police have established the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Canfield returned here from New York City at midnight on Wednesday. They went directly to their home. Before retiring Mr. Canfield banked a hot air furnace in his house with coal.

In a statement to the police Mr. Hammond said that at about 12 o'clock one night Mrs. Canfield called him up on the telephone saying she was ill and was afraid her husband was dead. Mr. Hammond telephoned to A. H. Canfield, a brother of the dead Mr. Canfield, and then responded to Mrs. Canfield's appeal for help.

On entering the house, he says, he smelled coal gas. Canfield was dead in bed, the maid, who occupied a room on the floor above, was also dead, and two bull terriers were found prostrate on the floor, semi-conscious. Newspapers bearing a recent date and several bottles of milk, most of which was sour, were found upon the porches of the house.

The police, after a systematic search of the house, found that the drafts in the furnace were closed. The furnace fire was burned in the centre of the fire pit, and the conditions were favorable to a circulation of coal gas through the house.

Canfield was about thirty years old, and his marriage about two years ago to Mae Kathryn Donnell, a girl employed in his factory, incurred the displeasure of his parents. To all appearances, however, the pair lived happily after overcoming the objections raised by Canfield's parents.

INSURANCE LOSS, $31,095,132.

Many Baltimore Wholesale Houses in Pool Will Get Nothing.

Baltimore, Md.—The Baltimore Underwriter prints the losses of all fire insurance companies in the Baltimore fire. The total gross loss is $32,864,894, of which $6,000,000 falls upon the local companies. The estimated total of salvage is $1,769,762, which leaves a net loss to the insurance companies of $31,095,152. Many of the large wholesale dry goods houses formed an insurance pool among themselves, which amounted to about $5,000,000, from which practically nothing will be realized.

Another development is that very few tenants of the so-called fireproof buildings carried insurance.

INDICTED ON 42 COUNTS.

But Defendant's Bail in Land Frauds Case Is Reduced $8000.

Washington, D. C.—Joost H. Schneider, of Tucson, Ariz., who recently was indicted on forty-two counts, and arrested here for alleged complicity in public land frauds in the West, was released from custody under $12,000 bonds. He was brought up in the Criminal Court on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, which alleged illegal arrest and excessive bail. The former point was waived to avoid delay, and Justice Pritchard sustained the contention of excessive bail by reducing the amount from $20,000 to $12,000.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

SUBJECT: "WHAT ARE THE PERMANENT ELEMENTS OF RELIGION?"

An Eloquent and Forceful Discourse by the Rev. John M. Davidson—Man's Interest in the Incarnation—A Striking Thought About the "Divinity of Man."

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—In the Fourth Unitarian Church, Flatbush, Sunday morning, the pastor, the Rev. John M. Davidson, preached on "What Are the Permanent Elements of Religion?" He said:

In this period of questioning, when old structures of religious faith are being torn down and new ones are taking their places, when what seems the very foundation of faith is being removed here and there to make way for new material, it is well worth our while to ask the question that is consequent upon such a condition, What elements of our religious faith are permanent and are likely to resist the tendency to change? It is a question that is agitating more people than ever before in history. We have been told that there is a growing indifference to religion, that men are abandoning the churches, that paganism has re-absorbed large sections of the country, even Puritan New England sharing in the general dissolution.

No one can deny that the influence of the church is not as great as it was when almost the only educated men were ministers. We who occupy the pulpits today frankly recognize the fact that the occupants of the pews are not only our equals in intellect, but are capable of giving us instruction in many departments of thought wherein the minister of old time was held to be supreme. The minister of to-day must recognize his relatively changed condition. He addresses minds at least as well informed and as bright as his own—and on many subjects more so. And he is woefully mistaken and unalert if he does not welcome the change as an advantage to himself and his work rather than a detriment. Nevertheless, for the time being, this condition tends to bring down the church attendance figures and to lessen the church's influence. It will continue to do so until the church finds men who are leaders (if not in intellect) in the effort for social amelioration. They must be specialists and authorities in their field, as the physicians and lawyers are in medicine and jurisprudence.

That the temporary falling off in the influence of the church as an institution argues for an indifference to religion I do not believe. The church has not yet learned its work. It is still delving in theologies and philosophies, when men are no more interested in the one than the other. Both theology and philosophy are vital matters, but the old manner of discussing these subjects cannot now interest men who are touched by the spirit of the scientific age. Until science and the whole new method of thought that follows upon recent scientific discovery have entered into and vivified theology and philosophy, they will cease to interest or influence man. They have no point of contact with his interests. But men are interested in religion. This very questioning and unrest proves it. Even the return to paganism, as it has been called, that trend, particularly noticeable in rural New England, away from the formalism of the church and back to nature, it not so alarming as appears at first glance. We are learning to see that, although for centuries we have called certain peoples "pagans," thinking to give them a bad name and so to avoid more tedious investigation into the character of these same pagans, we have much to learn about religion, and we may not seldom sit with profit at the feet of many a pagan prophet. Men are asking whether, after all, a comparatively small sect is right and all the rest wrong, or whether there is not a bit of truth in them all. They go further. They ask now whether that truth may not make all peoples free; they are wondering whether, after all, salvation is to be found with one and universal destruction with the other, whether the Creator of all nations is likely to make one of them His favorite, to give that one a true and final revelation and to withhold it from all others. Men are going even further than this in their questioning. They are putting the religions side by side for comparison. They are inquiring whether or not the truth that is in one may not be found occasionally in another, and they are finding through this comparative study of religions that, at bottom, all are alike. Great areas of parallel beliefs and aspirations are found making the claim of exclusive revelation ridiculous. In fact, when it is found that every single form of religion on the face of the earth lays claim to an exclusive revelation of some sort, and we find that the term "heretic" is merely an expression of one man's, or group of men's, point of view, we begin to open our eyes to the fact that our own past claims in the matter may not carry so much weight as we had thought.

The discoveries that we have made during the last century about the habits of life and the character of thought of the other half of the world, the scientific methods of investigation into the subject of religion, it origin, rise and—often—its decay, into religious literatures, and among them our own Bible, are broadening in view, even while, and perhaps because, they disturb our complacency. Religion is given a new interest. We find that we Christians are not the only members of God's family, and that there are others who care for Him as much as we do and whom He loves as greatly as He loves us.

I say that this is the tendency of men's minds to-day. Hardly do the most of us admit the changed point of view as an accomplished fact, even to ourselves, and in many localities the old exclusiveness is as impenetrable as ever it was in the dark ages. Universally, where religious exclusiveness is found it is accompanied, bred and safeguarded by some form of claims to final revelation or final authority for truth—some artificial guarantee that the doctrine preached in that church in the beginning is now and ever shall be preached without change, world without end. That such claim is manifestly impossible to substantiate has never deterred the church from making it. It is one recognition—though a weak one—that absolute truth is unchangeable, and every religion and every church that claims to have a final and true revelation must, of course, claim to possess a knowledge of that "absolute" which Spencer calls "unknowable." Not one such body could step forth boldly and lay hold on the great affirmation of to-day, that the faith of to-day is but the stepping stone to the faith of to-morrow; that revelation is not sealed; that truth is a living thing, growing as we grow; that mankind is saved through perpetual evolution from lower to higher, or, in other words, by fulfilling one meted destiny of becoming perfect as the Father in Heaven is perfect. Our business to-day is frankly to admit that the final revelation is yet far off and that we have by no means found the "absolute" truth. The knowledge of to-day is but a little section of that absolute. The thing for us to remember, and to take courage from remembering, is that we are here to enlarge, and that we are enlarging, that section of knowledge.

I have said that whatever religious exclusiveness is found it is accompanied by some kind of authority purporting to guarantee the permanency and integrity of its faith. The creed has been changed from its original meaning—"credo, I believe"—to an imperative "thou shalt believe." From being a simple statement of an individual faith it has become a formal statement of a system of dogma to which all who would be saved must subscribe. No latitude is allowed for individual interpretations or for the growth of religious and theological conceptions. The aim is simply to lay down a body of dogma that embodies final truth, and a confession to which the whole world must subscribe regardless of individual reason and unaffected by the growth of knowledge and moral consciousness. The attempt has always failed. There is no creed that holds the same meaning for us to-day which it held for mankind a century ago. If it is not now actually changed in form, as in the case of a notable number, it is changed in content to the minds of its adherents.

If we are but willing to open our eyes we shall find that there are hundreds of means of salvation, and each method breeds a sect. But what does the method signify beside the tremendous ultimate fact that all the world is looking for salvation? Here is the universal and permanent thing. In some way the truth has percolated through every mind that we are put into this world in order to grow. We are not universally interested in speculations about Nirvana, or about atonements, or about the "survival of the fittest," nor in the discussion as to the proper aim, whether for happiness or virtue. Perhaps every one is interested in one or another of these means to the end, but we are all interested in the outcome—salvation for the human race. It is a universal longing. It is one of the permanent things of religion.

Then mankind has been universally interested in another thing—the incarnation. Ever since man became man and learned that there was a power outside of himself to which he was bound, he has thought of this power as in some way entering into and becoming the guiding power of some object of the visible world. At first it was a mere stock or stone, a tree or river or wild beast that was the chosen dwelling place of deity. Then in good time the feeling grew that none but man would make a suitable habitation for the Creator; so we hear of the Greek heroes, "descendants of the gods," of Druidic and Delphic oracles and of prophets in all lands whose speech was controlled in an especial way by Deity. We hear of a perfect incarnation of Deity in Buddha, born of a virgin, with his divine parentage attested by miracles of various kinds, and teaching that there are many incarnations similar to his own; that whenever the world has advanced to a condition in which its needs are different from the old, God incarnates Himself in a mortal who thereupon becomes a great leader and prophet. Our minds, of course, now revert to another incarnation, that of God in Jesus, who also taught that there are many incarnations; who prayed that His disciples might be one with God as He Himself was one with Him. And again we see the tendency of men to obscure the great truth by the particular example. The truth which has most obviously appealed to men is the incarnation of God in a single man, or, formerly, in a class of men, as prophets or priests. The truth of that endures, and that has been pointed out by Jesus and all the greatest leaders of men is that of perpetual and universal incarnation. God has breathed the breath of life and has lit the spark of divinity in mankind, for we are His children, made in His moral image, inheritors of His divinity because we are natural sons and heirs. This is the tremendous fact toward which the world is groping. It explains the now proven fact that mankind's trend is upward rather than downward. It gives us the courage for going on, for keeping up the struggle when to our restricted view the obstacles seem insuperable. It compels us to believe that this world is founded upon good, that the good is "hastening on toward immortality," while evil is self destruction. If "God's in His heaven," God's in His world as well, the guarantor of its fundamental integrity, the inspirer of every good thing in the heart of man.

Do you not see how intimately connected are the two ideas, the incarnation of God and the divinity of man? Both ideas are everywhere recurrent in the theologies of the world, though their particular expression in one faith is utterly different from that in another, and it is the difference in the isolated expressions of the truth that keeps men apart. The permanent thing, the larger truth must wait upon our further enlightenment and broadening of view before it can bring us together. We are learning, it is true. The existence of an unwonted spirit of toleration and unity in religion, the modern armation of the universality of spirit shows that we are catching some glimpses of the larger truth that lies behind our incarnations and atonements, our theophanies and oracles, our Buddhas and Jesus of past time. If we had heard the real message of Jesus and the prophets and poets we should long ago have discovered this truth. To be a man is to be a descendant of God, to be a descendant of God is to be His prophet, His incarnation, the inheritor of His divinity; this is the larger permanent truth, one which is prepared for by every religion that the world has ever known.

After having agreed that to do right is the end of conduct, can we not take each other by the hand in the fellowship of that profession, even though we may differ as to the adoption of means to that end? If we all recognize the fact that the salvation of humanity is the permanent object of all religious effort, then our various methods of attaining salvation will soon take their proper places as subordinate elements of faith and variable according as the needs of men vary. The creed then will be not a Shibboleth by which to save one and to exclude another, but a covenant of kindred minds bent upon a common object and drawn together by the natural sympathy of similar beliefs. Religion will be no longer made up of religions—some false, some true—but will be recognized as fundamentally a unit wherever man has lifted up his head and called on the power that is above him. We shall see that the essential elements of religion are not the differences that divide, they are the permanent and fundamental things upon which all forms of religion are founded, and which, if we but let them, will unite men in the sympathy of common aspirations and inspirations.

Good Out of Blunders.

What we intend to do is an indication of our spirit and purpose. We are responsible for our words and acts as we endeavor to have them effective for good or ill. But God is ever working in love. He often brings good out of ill, or out of thought and speech beyond the best motive of a speaker or doer. A co-worker in Christ's service in Cuba notes the statement in these columns that Emerson's search for truth made discoveries which are helpful to those who think far more of Christ than he did. Then she wisely adds: "How that is continually done in this world has been illustrated to me for years. One who makes a true picture of anything in the universe—a leaf or a flower, a shell, a landscape, a cloud or a star, an agony, a joy, or any such thing—may and must reveal to some others more than he himself has seen. A child describing in a childish way some new flower might, without knowing it, give valuable information to a botanist." How good is God, to use for the welfare of others not only our best endeavors, but our very blunders and our poorest efforts!

The Alloy of Self.

Achievement fused with self is too brittle to stand the test of time. The secret of the success of one who had accomplished much in many fields was well expressed when it was said that he had learned to concentrate his powers on the result, irrespective of how that result would affect himself. Every atom of force deflected toward self becomes friction. Introspection, self-consciousness and egotism are all synonyms for wasted energy. Are you striving to rid yourself of this waste?

Examples.

The world, lying in sin and sorrow, with a thousand desires to be better, simply calls to the church for examples of those who rise above evil and walk and talk with God.—The Rev. Ray Palmer.

Number on Paper Money.

"If any one comes up to you and wants to bet you they can tell whether the number on any of Uncle Sam's paper money is odd or even by looking at that part of the bill on which the number does not appear, shun him as you would the plague," said a guest at a local hotel recently.

"Why? What is the joke?" asked another guest.

"Only this," replied the first. "I was out this afternoon with a number of men with whom I have business dealings. We ate lunch, and then one man wanted to bet me that he could tell the even or odd on the number of any bill I had, the loser to pay for the lunch. I took a bill from my pocket, folded it so that the number did not show, and after he had looked at it he said 'even.'

"Soon afterward I got stuck for the cigars in the same way. After I had been done four or five times they explained to me that all of the bills marked 'A' and 'C' were odd, while those marked 'B' and 'D' were even. It cost about $6 to find it out, but I guess it was a good investment at that. It is the same on all bills. Be careful when attempting to do the work not to take the series letter in front of the number, but hunt for a small letter on the left hand side of the bill."

Billion Dollar Grass and Alfalfa.

When we introduced Billion Dollar Grass three years ago, little did we dream it would be the most talked of grass in America, the biggest, quick, hay producer on earth, but this has come to pass.

Agr. Editors wrote about it, Agr. College Professors lectured about it, Agr. Institute Orators talked about it, while in the farm home by the quiet fireside, in the corner grocery, in the village postoffice, at the creamery, at the depot, in fact wherever farmers gathered, Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass, that wonderful grass, good for 5 to 14 tons per acre, and lots of pasture besides, is always a theme worthy of the farmer's voice.

PARENTS are insistent that the lives of their children going to and from school shall not be jeopardized by the running of express trains through the town of Clanton at a high rate of speed. The only crossing in Clanton must be rendered as safe as possible, and this can be done by the railroad company running their trains at a reasonable speed through the town, and should be done before some little innocent children are mangled to death.

L. O. DYER.

From the western side of the county comes the announcement of Mr. L. O. Dyer as a candidate for Tax Collector. For many years he has been a resident of Stanton, where he is well known and highly respected as a good citizen and substantial man of business. These are good recommendations for any man seeking the suffrages of the people, and those who are best acquainted with Mr. Dyer do not hesitate to say he will, if nominated and elected, make a thoroughly capable tax collector.

DEATH OF JUDGE WINTER.

WITH great sorrow we heard of the sudden death of Judge John G. Winter; we had hoped and believed that he would for many years preside over the circuit court of Chilton county. He had made a most excellent impression on his first circuit as an honorable and impartial judge, whose only desire was to mete out justice.

To know Judge Winter was to love him; he was a genial, whole-souled man, with no littleness in his composition. He had made a splendid record, as a loyal Confederate soldier, as a learned lawyer, and as an honorable and upright judge. Such men are greatly missed when they pass from earth to the great beyond.

IN publishing the open letter of Capt. Reuben F. Kolb, we do so with the conviction that it is a letter that appeals directly to the voters of Chilton county. Of all the candidates for the office of President of the Railroad Commission, Reuben F. Kolb is certainly the best known man in Chilton, where in former years he polled about as large a vote as was ever polled in this county by any individual. It is not worth while now recalling all that has happened in the past, many changes have occurred that place political affairs today in another light from those of the past, and it is now the duty of voters to elect men to office who are most likely to act in behalf of the people. Without detracting in any way from the merits of other candidates, we are of the opinion that Capt. Kolb would make the most efficient President of the Railroad Commission, and therefore we urge upon the voters of Chilton county the claims of the "Genial Reuben." He believes we are entitled to a reduction of freight rates, and avows his intention to see that we get that reduction, and we agree with him. His long and valuable services to the public demand recognition, and we of Chilton county should do our best to see that he gets the recognition, and by our votes show that we appreciate his services.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE VOTERS OF ALABAMA.

Dear Sir—I had hoped that my simple announcement as a candidate for President of the Railroad Commission and my statement that if elected, I would administer the affairs of the office to the best of my ability and that I would do my duty fearlessly and impartially and with an eye single to the best interest of all our people, would be all the assurance the voters of Alabama would demand.

I still believe that such assurance is all that is desired by a large majority of the voters of Alabama and I come to this conclusion from the strong personal endorsements I am daily receiving and the hundreds of letters I am getting from all over the State, pledging me support.

Yet, I have been reliably informed that some of the friends of other candidates are attempting to prejudice the people against me, by circulating the report that I am making the race in the interest of the railroads. Hence, I wish to denounce such charges, as absolutely false and without any foundation whatever. The announcement of my candidacy was no doubt a greater surprise to the railroad officials of this State than to any other class of our citizens. If I receive the nomination and am elected President of the Railroad Commission, I will go into office, determined to do my duty to all classes of people.

I fully realize that the people have grievances against the railroads in regard to freight rates, which should be equitably adjusted and that Alabama is entitled to and should have as low freight rates as any State in the South. As some years of my life was spent in a large mercantile and cotton brokerage business and a still greater portion of my life in farming and for many years the largest shipper of water melons in the South, places me in position to sympathize with the merchants and farmers and as President of the Commission, my past experience and familiarity with freight rates will enable me to more fully protect their rights.

It is not necessary for me at this late day to masquerade as the champion of the people's rights, or to remind the people of Alabama of my life long record on this line.

I again appeal to all the voters of Alabama, both my former friends and supporters, and those who heretofore opposed my political aspirations, to honor me with their votes and influence. I ask them to trust me and accept my assurance that if elected I will do my duty to all classes of our people.

I have opened my State Headquarters in Room 6, Moses Building, Montgomery, Ala., where I will be pleased at all times to see my friends socially and for consultation, and will thank them for suggestions and advice.

All letters and communications should be mailed to me at above address.

Very truly yours,
R. F. KOLB.

Maple Springs.

I am glad to say that the Sabbath school at this place is still on foot, though we have had some bad weather for the last month or two. But I thank God that he has placed it in the hearts and minds of enough to keep it alive so far. What is better for a community or settlement than a Sabbath school? For we are commanded to teach the little ones the ways of eternal life, bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord and they will not forget it when they are old. And then, why not bring them to the house of the Lord and read and expound the Scripture unto them? I long and pray for the time to come when the people of God will arise to the sense of their duty and more Sabbath schools be organized. May God help all the parents to realize the great responsibility that rests upon them for the proper training of their children. There will be preaching here next Sunday by Rev. W. O. Rich.

LOVER OF SABBATH SCHOOL.

THE Republicans of the Fourth District met at Calera Tuesday and elected W. F. Aldrich of Aldrich and W. A. Cook of Talledega, delegates, and Captain Tibbetts of Anniston and F. O. Dudley of Chilton county alternates to the National Convention. The delegates were instructed to vote for President Roosevelt for the nomination. The administration of President Roosevelt was endorsed.

D. N. Riggins and F. O. Dudley were elected members of the Fourth District Executive Committee from Chilton county, and Judge W. E. Horne from the district at large.

The farmers of this section are moving along very slowly about farming. The measles have been raging in this community. People are improving from a few day's illness of measles, some are advancing nicely and some very slowly; we hope that they will improve and be out again. We hope for better times in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. C. Bice from New Cedron were visitors to relatives here Sunday.

Sunday school is gone down at this place, and has been for some time on account of the measles. Hope that in a few weeks all Sunday school workers will be out and reorganize and revive up and move on again.

People have been hustling about getting a new school house completed in this district.

Success to the Banner and its dear readers. TWO BLUE EYES.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 15, 1904

Editor Banner—Will you give me a little space to express my thanks for the promptness of the Banner. It reaches me promptly every Friday morning.

We are having a great deal of the coldest most penetrating weather that I ever experienced. The Ohio river has been filled with ice gorges, but they have broken up and filled the river with fields of floating ice, covered with snow, which looks to a southern boy like a vast stream of lint cotton rolling down the river.

I must express my appreciation of the sentiments of the "Old Oman" in "John in the Backwood's" letter. We sit by the negroes in the theater up here, and some of my classmates from over across the Ohio river have been teaching mixed schools—white and black in the same class. That makes me think, perhaps it will surprise some to learn that more than half of our medical students are teachers. We also have some county superintendents of education here reading medicine.

Despite the reports of bad things occurring in Louisville, such as the firemen burning stores to rob them etc., there is a resolution for better. The city government has seized slot machines and gambling devices etc., to the value of $8,000. The Y. M. C. A. is also putting forth a special effort to put down drinking and kindred evils. Every Sunday afternoon a lecture is given at the Masonic Theater for men and boys over 16. The Y. M. C. A. gets lecturers of note and are making this very interesting. More than 2,000 men and boys attend these lectures and if you don't get in before time for the lecture you are forced to stand. Now just think of the good that could be accomplished if even half these people would heed to the call of their Master, but I am making my letter too long so I will close by saying happiness to friends and success to the Banner. V. G. GRAGG.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Feb. 22, 1904

The political complexion of the United States has been changed materially by the death of Senator Hanna. While to the outside world Hanna and Roosevelt were friends, really, the bitterest antagonism existed between them. Had Senator Hanna lived there is no doubt that Mr Roosevelt would have a very hard time in winning out at the Chicago convention. As things stand now it is a thousand to one shot that Mr Roosevelt will be nominated and in his nomination the Democratic party will find a very easy candidate to beat.

Two matters have occupied public attention during the past week to the exclusion of politics—the war in the East and the Baltimore fire. Both of these events are disastrous to humanity and much more far-reaching in their terrible effects than is generally supposed. The enormous financial loss by fire will have its effect upon the money problem which may result in hastening the hard times that are surely approaching, for the withdrawal of money from the usual channels of trade to rebuild the city of Baltimore chiefly comes from the banks and trust companies of New York, where the principal deposits of the insurance companies are used in stock market speculation. The war between Russia and Japan will increase the demand for some of our products for a time, but as the belligerents become exhausted it will decrease their ability to purchase and take them years to recuperate from the loss and waste that war entails. There is a great difference between war in Asia and war in Europe, and the popular delusion that any war will bring increased demand for our cereal products and bull the market for wheat and corn, will not be found true of this Eastern war. No large tract of country devoted to agriculture will be devastated in this case. Russia can supply her army with bread from her own fields, while the Japanese exist principally on rice of which a vast store has been laid up in preparation for the event. Our farmers must not, therefore, expect to make large profits from any rapid increase in the price of wheat, which would undoubtedly be the case if Europe were the battle scene.

The most interesting political event of the past week outside of the death of Senator Hanna, was the attempt of Secretary Shaw in a Chicago speech to retire the tariff and trust issues from the coming presidential campaign, which he declared had passed out of the realm of discussion. Being the chief adviser of President Roosevelt on financial and economic affairs, what Secretary Shaw says must be taken as the voice of the administration. That the tariff and trust issues are the principal topics of discussion in most of the states and especially in Iowa, the balliwick from which Secretary Shaw was injected into the national arena, does not seem to have any effect upon the dogmatical politician. That trust prices are at the top noch is ignored by Secretary Shaw, yet Davis' Index figures for Februrary, which had been published a week before Secretary Shaw made his declaration, show that the price of commodies had reached the highest point in two decades, except in May, 1902. That the tariff fostered the trusts and supported those high prices of most of the articles of general consumption was not considered by Secretary Shaw. Or if he did consider it he purposedly evaded the issue, because it was impossible to reply to the Democratic contention and the clamor of the people for reform. The much heralded legal proceedings against the beef combine has had a most disastrous effect on the pockets of the farmer and the consumer, for in spite of the injunction to prevent the beef combine from controlling the market for cattle and the wholesale market for beef, the price of cattle has declined nearly 50%, and the price of meat is much greater in proportion to the price of cattle than before the injunction was obtained.

HENRY CLAY SELHEIMER.

Honorable Henry Clay Selheimer, who is a candidate for the democratic nomination for associate justice of the supreme court of Alabama, was born in Lewiston, Mifflin county, Pa., on September 3d, 1858. His father, Hon. John B. Selheimer, was a life long democrat, and in 1884 was elected to the state senate of Pennsylvania on the democratic ticket from a strongly republican district. John B. Selheimer's paternal ancestor came to this country from Germany in 1765, and his maternal ancestor, whose name was Beale, came with William Penn in 1682. The ancestors of Mrs. John B. Selheimer, the Mathews, came to this country from Scotland in 1735. Both the Selheimers and the Mathews have for many years been closely identified with affairs of church and state in Pennsylvania and have contributed largely to her business prosperity.

Henry C. Selheimer has been a citizen of Alabama eighteen years. After graduating from Princeton university he located in Birmingham, and began the practice of law. Of studious habits and retiring nature he has applied himself diligently to the acquirement of legal knowledge. His associates commend him for these traits and also for soberness and truth.

The late Chief Justice Brickell said after an intimate acquaintance with Mr. Selheimer: "In my opinion, he has no superior at the bar in Alabama."

His private life has been blameless. His public life has gained for him the unanimous indorsement not only of all the members of his profession in Birmingham, but of many able lawyers throughout the state of Alabama, particularly his associates of the late constitutional convention. In this convention he filled with marked ability a position on the committee on harmony.

The large amount of litigation coming before the supreme court from the Birmingham district, its distinctive character, requires the selection of a member equipped to facilitate its disposition. The voluntary retirement of Judge Sharpe leaves the district a place to fill.

If Mr. Selheimer is placed on the supreme bench his official utterances will be those of a learned lawyer, a broad-minded and just man and a ripe scholar.

It is rare that one aspiring to such an exalted position receives such unqualified indorsements as to his eminent fitness therefor.

The following paragraphs have been culled from many indorsements received by him:

Hon. John B. Knox: "I am well acquainted with Hon. Henry C. Selheimer, who is a candidate for associate justice of the supreme court of Alabama. He is a lawyer of first class ability, and was an active and efficient member of one of our most important committees in the constitutional convention. His friends are strongly urging his claims to the position of associate justice of the supreme court, and I feel sure that he would discharge the responsible duties of this position with credit to himself and to those who support him."

Hon. Frank S. White: "There is no better judicial timber in Alabama than Henry C. Selheimer. If elected, he will be one of the greatest judges the state ever had."

Hon. Oscar W. Underwood, M. C.: "His high character, even temperament, clear reasoning powers and learning in the law, in my judgment, make him most eminently qualified to fill a position on our supreme court bench."

Hon. John W. Tomlinson: "Mr. Selheimer has the character, ability and temperament which eminently fit him for one of the judges of our highest court."

Hon. A. O. Lane: "He has a legal mind, and his powers of analysis and discrimination are unusually great. He is painstaking, but he quickly grasps the vital points in a case, and I regard him as exceptionally qualified for supreme court work."

Hon. Alex T. London: "A learned lawyer and laborious student; just and fair and patient and painstaking; he is at all times courteous and polite and possesses what I have always regarded as one of the greatest traits a judge can have—the judical temperament."

Captain William C. Ward: "He is well equipped for the bench, and in my opinion the supreme bench would be strengthened by Mr. Selheimer's accession to the court. He is young and of vigorous health, and has a great capacity for protracted and continuous work."

Hon. S. D. Weakley: "He has the judicial temperament and faculty to a marked degree. He is a deep student of the law, familiar with all the departments of jurisprudence. As a constitutional lawyer, I give him high rank."

Hon. Augustus Benners: "An intimate acquaintance with H. C. Selheimer convinces me that he has no superior at our bar in legal learning and in the correct application of legal principles to concrete cases."

Hon. John P. Tillman: "I know of no lawyer in Alabama better suited by temperament or better equipped by learning and study for the bench than Mr. Selheimer; and I only wish that the people of Alabama knew him as well as I know him."

NEWSPAPERS OF THE WORLD.

The United States Furnishes Nearly One-half the Total.

It appears from a recent census, which is necessarily only approximate, that the newspapers of the world number no fewer than 43,000, of which 5410 are dailies, and more than one-half of all are published in the United States.

To gain some tangible conception of this enormous output of news it is interesting to know that to devote five minutes to each of the world's newspapers would occupy nearly one year and eight months, reading for six hours each day; while, at the same rate, to skim the daily papers alone would take eleven weeks.

An annual subscriber to the daily papers alone would have to pay $40,000, independent of postage or carriage to his news agent.

Each thousand newspapers is distributed among the different countries in the following ratio: United States, 462; Great Britain, 141; German, 127; France, 85; Italy, 35; Austria-Hungary, 28; Russia, 19; Spain, 20.

It will be seen from this list that the output of the United States is nearly equal to the combined publications of Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Canada and Russia, and is only three-eighths per cent. less than half the total output of the world.

These newspapers are published in eighty-one different languages, fifteen of which are represented by one paper only, while many of the papers are published in two or even more tongues. The credit of the largest circulation belongs to a half-penny paper, Le Petit Journal, of Paris, which has a circulation rarely falling below a million copies.

The Austrian Imperial Review has a circulation of three copies only. The smallest paper is the Mexican Telegraph, which measures eight inches by half an inch.

Business and Advertising.

That the monthly business of an establishment bears a direct ratio to the amount of the monthly advertising bill is a statement which has been made recently by three different business men in communications to Printers' Ink. When experience has taught this fact to a man, advertising appears to him to be the life of the trade.

AGRICULTURAL.

Beets as Fodder.

The farmers of Germany have discovered that dried sugar beets make an excellent fodder, which may be used as a substitute for maize. The beets may be kept without difficulty if they are properly sacked and stored. This use of them will be likely to prevent any over-production of sugar. They will be turned into fodder whenever the price of sugar falls too low.

Rheumatism in Swine.

An unusual number of inquiries are made regarding a cure for rheumatism among swine, mainly with the summer dropped pigs. In the majority of cases this trouble is due to pens that are either draughty or damp, perhaps both. This being the case, the first thing to do is to fix the pens, seeing to it that the floor is dry and kept so, and that the pigs have a heavy bedding of dry material every night. Then see that the water given them is clean, and that there are no direct draughts of air blowing over them at night. To relieve the attack, let the feed be of middlings and milk, for the pigs and the hogs also, with a half pint of dried blood meal divided equally for the three feeds daily and mixed in the feed. If other attacks follow, give five grains each of salol and quinine concealed in some vegetable, such as the half of a small potato.

A Wagon Tongue.

It is not always possible to have a two-horse wagon sufficiently light for long distance driving where it is best to use two horses. The illustration shows a tongue which may be easily made by a local blacksmith at small expense, for use on a light one-horse wagon. The illustration needs little description, the main points being to have the pole made of tough lumber and about two inches square at the small end and three and one-half inches square at the large end.

The circle should be made of two-inch wagon felloes. Bolt the shaft couplings to the circle, the double-tree resting on the tongue where the circle is bolted to the tongue. This wagon pole is quickly attached and is very light, hence not a burden on the horses, and the expense of making it is small. —Indianapolis News.

Nut Trees For Shade.

We plant out almost innumerable shade trees that yield us absolutely nothing besides their services as parasols in summer and perhaps as windbreak in winter. If nut-bearing trees were planted in their stead they would make as good a growth, serve the purposes of the others equally well and yield us a good supply of nuts at the same time. Nearly or quite all of our nut-bearing trees are hardy in the larger sections of our country. Hickory, walnut, chestnut, pecan and filberts—the most common kind of nuts we have—can be found to some extent all over this country, and with a little pains in planting such, and otherwise giving them due attention, could be made to grow almost anywhere. The principal reason for this not being done is, people have not thought of it. We have been accustomed to buying and setting out all kinds of fruit trees, but whenever we wanted a supply of nuts we expected to go to the woods and gather them. No effort was made to grow them at home.

Along the walks and lanes in pastures, nut-bearing trees might be planted either in groves or strips, and used as wind-breaks for stock, the orchard or the farm buildings and as a combination of shade, protection and fruit—of the useful and the agreeable.

Increase the Poultry.

The average farmer does not keep poultry enough. A little larger investment in poultry will increase the income of the farm and bring a profit that cannot be equalled by the same amount invested in any other line of farming. By this I do not mean that the farmer shall become a fancier or a poultry specialist, but I do mean that he usually neglects the faithful hen, and if he will post up on this branch of live stock husbandry and take as much pains with his hens as he does with his other live stock he can increase his profits with very little labor and money expended.

The poultry business now is a stable business. Just as much so as hogs or cattle or the dairy. It used to be that you could scarcely sell poultry and eggs at certain seasons of the year, but that is not the case now. There is a market for all the poultry and eggs that can be produced, and at fair prices. The large packers have developed the poultry market just the same as they have the meat market, and our poultry and eggs are transported by them to the markets of the world. Both eggs and poultry are preserved in cold storage and distributed to the people as the market warrants.

The farmer can produce a pound of chicken just as cheaply as he can a pound of beef, pork or mutton, and it always brings a better price. Why, then, not give this branch of our business more attention? With good laying stock eggs can be produced at a handsome profit. Instead of a farmer having twenty-five or thirty hens he ought to keep 200 or 300, or more, as his fancy and the size of his farm permits.—Colon J. Little, in Commercial Poultry.

Parasites of Clover.

A popular edition of Bulletin No. 70 has been issued by the experiment station of Iowa State College, on the subject of "Some Weeds of Iowa." It was prepared by Dr. L. H. Pommel, botanist of the station. The following section on the dodder will be found of interest, for this parasite weed is found in many parts of the country.

During the last few years Dr. Pommel says, dodders have made their appearance upon clover in different sections of the country. Five species have been reported upon alfalfa and clover. Mr. Dewey states, from his experience, that the dodder is rarely found east of the Missouri River. No doubt, however, it occurs occasionally. Farmers should, therefore, be on their guard for this plant. It belongs to the same family as the common morning glory.

The dodders are leafless except the small scales on the stems. Herbs of yellowish color, with threadlike stems twining around the plants upon which they live. They pierce the bark with small and short rootlets, which are called suckers, or haustoria. The seeds are small, yet there is stored sufficient nourishment in them to give the embryo a start. The seed germinates in the soil and grows sufficiently in length to allow it to come in contact with the plant upon which it lives, when it immediately sends in its suckers, and thus becomes established upon the plant as though it was a part of the host.

The dodders contain no chlorophyll, the green coloring matter found in leaves, and hence cannot make plant food; that is, make starch out of raw material such as ordinary green leaves do, but must derive their nourishment entirely from the host upon which they live. Such plants are called parasites.

The first and most important point is to obtain seed that is free from the dodder seed. It is best, therefore, to obtain the seed grown in the Mississippi Valley and the East. European seed should not under any consideration be purchased. There is likelihood of some danger from the East, some danger from the South, and especially from the West. Clover seed grown in States south of Iowa is hardly suited for our conditions, and it is not likely that the Iowa farmer will purchase much of this seed.

Farmers cannot too emphatically be cautioned against sowing dodder infested clover seed. The ultimate loss caused by the dodder will greatly exceed the cost of cleaning the clover seed, and clean seed should be bought at any price.

The dodder may be exterminated when once established in the following way: First, by the herbicidal treatment. For this purpose a solution of copper sulphate in the following proportions will be found efficacious: One pound of copper sulphate to four gallons of water at the rate of fifty gallons to the acre.

ALFALFA AND CLOVER DODDERS.

It is advisable to mow the patch if a small one, rake the material into a pile, allowing it to dry, and then burn. This should be watched carefully, for if the seed is formed young dodder plants will make their appearance upon the new growth of clover coming on. So it is best to follow the mowing by hoeing if the patch is a small one, and continuing this for several weeks until all danger of infection is passed. Dewey recommends keeping the soil stirred for about two inches, and that shallow cultivation is best since the seeds, if buried deeper cannot come to the surface and infect the clover plant.

Farm Notes.

There is very little profit in feeding an old cow grain to make good beef.

Digestion is best accomplished when all other parts of the body are at rest.

With dairy stock more than others, merit must be settled by actual test.

Other things being equal, the best offspring comes from matured animals.

Under all conditions young animals make the largest gain in proportion to food eaten.

It is the amount digested and assimilated and not the amount eaten that benefits the horse.

By prepotency is meant the power of the animal to stamp his progeny with characteristics.

The time to sell a horse after he has been raised for market is whenever a good price is offered.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR FEBRUARY 28.

Subject: Reserve and Doors of the Wise. Matt. xxv., 1-13—Golden Text, Jas. i., 27—Memory Verses, 10-13—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. More profession not sufficient (vs. 23, 21). "Not every one." Christ is laying down the true test of admission into the kingdom of God. He has just told them that they must enter in through the narrow gate and walk a narrow way. Now He intimates that many will seek admittance on the ground of mere profession. That saith Lord. True religion is more than a profession. We must acknowledge the authority of Christ, obey in His divinity and accept His teachings as truth and still without the love of God in the heart we will not enter the kingdom. Kingdom of heaven. Do not live as being right for heaven and yet go to the [illegible]. Eph. 5:5. It has reference to that spiritual kingdom which Christ set up in the days of His followers. It is now in the hearts of those who have truly given that were raised a kingdom. 1. Because it has in view the precepts of the gospel. 2. Its subjects all submit to Jesus Christ. 3. Its King is Sovereign of heaven and earth. He is Lord. Christ's followers are "those who do" and not hearers only (James 1:22; Rev. 22:14). The will of God. That is, the one enters into the kingdom who obeys the gospel and keeps the commandments of God. It is His will that we be sanctified, and that we always pray always. It is our duty to follow His precepts fully. "My Father." Christ did not reject God as a stern judge rejecting and condemning, but as a loving father who was ready to bless and help His children. This was a truth hitherto unknown.

22. "Many." Not merely an occasional one, but the number will be astonishingly large. "In that day." The judgment day. The day when the final accounts shall be brought in, and when each shall receive his just desert. See Acts 17:31; Rom. 2:16; 2 Cor. 5:10. "Prophesied." As the whole gospel is a real prophecy, foretelling the vast future of the human race—both in judgment and eternity, so every preacher is a prophet. Here, then, are preachers who plead their ministry in vain in the day. See Paul's definition in 1 Cor. 14. "Cast out devils." Through their preaching souls had been converted and devils had actually been cast out of men's hearts. "Wonderful works." There have been great revivals of religion and great manifestations of divine power. The truth has been preached and God has blessed it.

23. "I never knew you." How different from this we see how easy it is to be deceived. Many trusting in the church, their good name, their generosity, their prayers, their gifts, their employment in the ministry, their self-sacrifice, their devotion to a cause, etc., etc., while at heart they are not right with God and at the last great day will be cast to the left hand. "Depart." Such belong at the left hand. "From Me." What could be worse than banishment from God?

II. The wise builder (vs. 24, 25). "Therefore." Jesus now proceeds to impress the truth by the use of a very striking illustration. "Whosoever heareth." See R. V. Both classes of men hear the word. So far they are alike. The houses have externally the same appearance, but the great day of trial shows the difference. "Will liken him." St. Matthew, who living near the lake had often witnessed such sudden floods as are described, uses vigorous language and draws the picture vividly. Palestine was to a considerable extent a land of hills and mountains. "A wise man." The truly wise man pays attention to spiritual and eternal things. He is a prudent man, a man of understanding, who looks ahead and considers the danger and makes use of the proper means in avoiding it. The wise builder is the one who hears and obeys the words of Christ. "Built his house." His character, his soul's interests. Each man possesses a house which is his absolutely, and for which he alone is responsible. "Upon a rock." Our rock is Jesus Christ (Psa. 18:2; Isa. 28:16; 1 Cor. 3:11). He is a sure foundation. As we centre our faith in Him, and build according to the principles which He has laid down, we will be safe. 25. "The rain—beat." So temptations and storms of afflictions, persecutions, temptations and all sorts of trials beat against the soul. Suddenly, when we think we are safe, the calamity comes upon us. How important in that hour to be possessed of something the tempest cannot destroy. "It fell not." The religion of Jesus Christ in the soul will stand every test. The emblem of a house to represent the religious life is specially appropriate. 1. A house is for rest. 2. A house is a shelter. 3. A house is for comfort. In like manner true religion is the rest, protection and comfort of the soul.

III. The foolish builder (vs. 26, 27). "Doeth them not." The foolish man is one who fails to do what he knows he ought to do. He hears, but is disobedient. "The sand." The foundation is the principal thing. The house on the rock is good, but the structure on the sand was soon undermined. The one who says, Lord, but whose heart is not right, is on the sand. 27. "It fell." So fails the sinner. The floods are wearing away the sandy foundation, and soon one tremendous storm shall beat upon him and all his hopes shall forever fail. Perhaps he has heard the words of Christ from childhood, and he may even have taught them to others, and yet he has failed to build a solid foundation for himself. Notice the points of difference between the wise man and the foolish: 1. The wise builder has a regard for the future; the foolish builder thinks only of the present. 2. The former looks to the solidity and durability of the structure rather than to the appearance; the foolish cares for the appearance only. "Great was the fall." How great is the loss of the soul! What a terrible fall! A soul created in the image of God, and with all the glorious possibilities before it—a life of bliss forever with Christ, to be on the right hand at the last day—

IV. An astonished people (vs. 28). "These sayings." The sermon preached. "Astonished." The teachings of Jesus all through His life excited admiration, wonder and amazement. The people were astonished, 1. At Christ's claims. At His manifest power. "His doctrine." The Sermon on the Mount contains a summary of all the great moral principles and cardinal doctrines of the gospel, except the atonement. 29. "Having authority." His power lay in Himself and in His life. "Not as the scribes." He did not speak like a commentator or interpreter of the law, confirming His doctrine as the Jewish doctors usually did by the authority of their learned men, but He spoke with the air and authority of a prophet, and by that authority took upon Himself to even correct the doctrine of the Scribes and Pharisees themselves.

Would that we might give full and correct answers to both questions. We should like to go on record as saying that we do not believe that any woman ever proposed marriage, in many words, to any man. SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH
RELY ON PE-RU-NA TO FIGHT
CATARRH, COUGHS, COLDS, GRIP

SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH

Use Pe-ru-na for La Grippe and Winter Catarrh.

IN EVERY country of the civilized world the Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs.

Whenever coughs or colds, la grippe or pneumonia make their appearances among the children these Sisters are not disconcerted, but know exactly the remedies to apply.

With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease these wise and prudent Sisters have found Peruna a never-failing safeguard.

Sisters of St. Joseph, of the Deaf Mute Institute, 1849 Cass Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"We appreciate Peruna very much. It certainly does good work with catarrh and also with colds and la grippe. We have faith in Peruna and have inspired many others with same. We do not like to be without it. It has certainly kept us from being very sick. It did a world of good last winter for our little ones. Thanking you for your kindness to us and our afflicted ones, we remain, yours gratefully,

"SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH."

Dr Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters from all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir:—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis, and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after further use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured."

Sisters of Charity.

This young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat, with good results as the above letter testifies.

From a Catholic institution in Central Ohio comes the following recommend from the Sister Superior:

"Some years ago a friend of our institution recommended to us Dr. Hartman's Peruna as an excellent remedy for the influenza; of which we then had several cases which threatened to be of a serious character.

"We began to use it and experienced such wonderful results that since then Peruna has become our favorite medicine for influenza, catarrh, cold, cough and bronchitis."

Another recommend from a Catholic institution of one of the Central States written by the Sister Superior reads as follows:

"A number of years ago our attention was called to Dr. Hartman's Peruna, and since then we have used it with wonderful results for grip, coughs, colds and catarrhal diseases of the head and stomach.

"For grip and winter catarrh especially it has been of great service to the inmates of this institution."

SISTERS OF CHARITY

All Over the United States Use Peru-na for Catarrh.

A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in the Southwest reads as follows:

A Prominent Mother Superior Says:

"I can testify from experience to the efficiency of Peruna as one of the very best medicines, and it gives me pleasure to add my praise to that of thousands who have used it. For years I suffered with catarrh of the stomach, all remedies proving valueless for relief. Last spring I went to Colorado, hoping to be benefited by a change of climate, and while there a friend advised me to try Peruna. After using two bottles I found myself very much improved. The remains of my old disease being now so slight, I consider myself cured, yet for a while I intend to continue the use of Peruna. I am now treating another patient with your medicine. She had been sick with malaria and troubled with leucorrhaea. I have no doubt that a cure will be speedily effected."

These are samples of letters received by Dr. Hartman from the various orders of Catholic Sisters throughout the United States.

The names and addresses to these letters have been withheld from respect to the Sisters, but will be furnished on request.

One half of the diseases which afflict mankind are due to some catarrhal derangement of the mucous membrane lining some organ or passage of the body.

A remedy that would act immediately upon the congested mucous membrane, restoring it to its normal state, would consequently cure all these diseases. Catarrh is catarrh wherever located, whether it be in the head, throat, lungs, stomach, kidneys or pelvic organs. A remedy that will cure it in one location will cure it in all locations. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

Reforming the Dyspeptics.

The Dyspeptic Club, recently formed in Jersey City, aims evidently to create a new "department of the interior" and to manage it on advanced and economic theories. So far there are only fifty-seven members in the organization, although a very much greater number, mostly Americans, are plainly eligible.

Each member must make quarterly written reports of experiences. The diversity of these should certainly give due variety to the sessions. But this is the only way to get facts. But actions of different foods must be duly estimated. Pie and pain, buckwheat and bloat, sausage and suffering, pickle and pang, cabbage and colic, ham and heartburn, must show their proper relations. The humiliating part of the business is that each culprit must confess his weak will and his misplaced confidences, while pork, pie and pudding will still hold their own against odds. Thus, no member should be trusted to give absolute impartial testimony unless he can prove that he was free from cramp, hyperacidity, headache or borborygmus when his report was written. Gastralgia is as apt, in a reflex way, to affect the higher moral sense of truth as is a colic to warp sound judgment on the ordinary relation of cause and effect. The only time for good resolution is when the paroxysm is on.—Medical Record.

Danced With Sixty-Seven.

Miss Margaret Costello and John Polinski of Jersey City were married at the Polish Roman Catholic Church at Bayonne. A reception followed at their home at Pine street and Communipaw avenue.

The bridegroom told his wife that it was a custom of his country for the bride to dance with every male guest at the wedding. There were sixty-seven men guests, and Mrs. Polinski waltzed with every one of them, concluding the final waltz by falling unconscious.

He must go and fancy
'Tis winter all the year.

Mrs. Haskell, Worthy Vice Templar, Independent Order Good Templars, of Silver Lake, Mass., tells of her cure by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: Four years ago I was nearly dead with inflammation and ulceration. I endured daily untold agony and life was a burden to me. I had used medicines and washes internally and externally until I made up my mind that there was no relief for me. Staying at the home of a friend, I noticed a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My friend endorsed it highly and I decided to give it a trial to see if it would help me. It took patience and perseverence for I was in bad condition, and I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nearly five months before I was cured, but what a change, from despair to happiness, from misery to the delightful exhilarating feeling health always brings. I would not change back for a thousand dollars, and your Vegetable Compound is a grand medicine.

"I wish every sick woman would try it and be convinced."—MRS. IDA HASKELL, Silver Lake, Mass. Worthy Vice Templar, Independent Order of Good Templars.

When a medicine has been successful in more than a million cases, is it justice to yourself to say, without trying it, "I do not believe it would help me"?

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak, and sick and discouraged, exhausted with each day's work. You have some derangement of the feminine organism, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you just as surely as it has others.

Mrs. Tillie Hart, of Larimore, N. D., says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: I might have been spared many months of suffering and pain if I had known of the efficacy of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a few months sooner, for I tried many remedies without finding anything which helped me before I tried the Vegetable Compound. I dreaded the approach of the menstrual period every month, as it meant much suffering and pain. Some months the flow was very scanty and others it was profuse, but after I had used the Compound for two months I became regular and natural, and so I continued until I felt perfectly well, and the parts were strengthened to perform the work without assistance and pain. I am like a different woman now, where before I did not care to live, and I am pleased to testify as to the good your Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Sincerely yours, MRS. TILLIE HART, Larimore, N. D.

Be it, therefore, believed by all women who are ill that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they should take. It has stood the test of time, and it has hundreds of thousands of cures to its credit. Women should consider it unwise to use any other medicine.

Mrs. Pinkham, whose address is Lynn, Mass, will answer cheerfully and without cost all letters addressed to her by sick women. Perhaps she has just the knowledge that will help your case—try her to-day—it costs nothing.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical science have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

LIBERTY HILL, LA. Aug. 24, 1895

On April 18th, 1895, I was shot with a double-barrel shot gun loaded with bullets or rifle balls, twelve taking effect, six passing through my body. The wounds were dressed with Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic and kept saturated with it, nothing else being used. There was no inflammation nor pus formed in the wounds and I slept and rested without opiates.

Within fifty days I was able to take charge of my farming interests. I owe my life to

For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband, felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disconsolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

It is some time since I was in Coopers until last Monday when I made a trip there in company with Tom Curry to see how the stock law election went, and to hear the speaking. I was agreeably surprised to find Coopers looking in a flourishing and prosperous condition, stores well stocked and plenty of business going on. It used to be said that while Coopers was an incorporated town, the streets were never worked, but I found the main street as neatly kept and in quite as good condition as another town not a hundred miles from Clanton. Eilis Gulledge was telling them how he would like to be their next Circuit Clerk, and at the last J. M. Holley arrived to do a little canvassing on his own account. It was pleasant gathering, everyone felt good, and found a fine appetite which was appeased by a visit to the Lavinsky house, where Miss Lizzie made us a charming hostess.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Jemison, Feb. 22, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to correct a misstatement of last week's issue. I saw a piece stating that I, J. H. Anderson, was a delegate from Beat 2 to the Republican convention held at Thorsby on the 23d inst. to which I affirm that I was not. I was in Thorsby on that day on other business and a friend of mine asked me to go with him to the hall and I went, and when the delegates were called from Beat 2 there was none, and one said he would substitute J. H. Anderson. I did not think what this would do and I did not accept nor reject But with due regard for my Republican friends, I can't stand that name black and tan. Therefore I emphatically say that I am not a delegate nor a black and tan.

Yours truly,
J. H. ANDERSON.

Cooper, Feb. 27, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your columns to speak a few words in regard to F. Loyd Tate to the voters of Chilton county. This is the first time that I have ever taken any interest in political issues, but I am personally acquainted with Mr. Tate; I served my county last fall as grand juror, I find Mr. Tate to be a high-toned gentleman and a man with a principle which wants justice to prevail, he has no respect of persons, when they are brought before the bar of justice. There is one thing I want you to notice, that every case which Mr. Tate found an indictment that has been tried yet, was sustained in the upper court. I look upon Mr. Tate as being a gentleman from the sole of his foot to the crown of his head, and I believe that every grand juror will endorse this statement.

Respectfully,
W. A. HUCKEBEE.

Clanton, Feb. 29, 1904

Editor Banner—You will please give me space in your paper for a few words to the public in regard to the situation of politics in Chilton county, the State of Alabama and of the United States. First, there are but two parties in the United States that stand any chance of ever succeeding. So it does look like men of forethought would place themselves in line with one of them. I want to say that it's not a man's name that prepares him to enter the kingdom of heaven, but it is his deeds. So I want to say further that it is not the name of the party that brings about prosperity, but it is the administration. Now, with due respect to everyone, I think that the time has come that every man should lay down his petty, childish motives and take choice between the Republican and Democratic parties. I wrote the Banner a letter in 1902, in which I said that I loved the name of Populist, but it was a thing of the past and that I was now a Republican, giving my reasons why I was a Republican. I never asked any man to go with me to said party. I now repeat that I am a Republican, and there were some of our good Populist brethren, that said by their actions in 1902, that they were as good Republicans as any one. But, lo and behold, they now say they are Populists and call the Republicans black and tan. Say, I see where an ex ray machine has been educated so as to write letters. One of them wrote the Union last week, in which he said the Republican convention at Clanton passed a resolution to co-operate with the Populists. I knew there were x-rays, but never knew they could write letters before. I went to inform that machine that the Republican convention was held at Thorsby. X-ray said that any one who favored a third ticket was open for boodle, or something of the kind. I reckon he alludes to a Republican ticket. Some of the Populists said if any one did otherwise than endorse the Populist mass meeting held at Clanton on the 5th of August, 1902, they would charge them with working for the Democrats. There have been some grave charges made against the Republicans, nevertheless when the roll is called they will be there. Now, if the Populists don't think there ought to be three tickets, and they mean what they say, when asked the question if they are Republicans, State and national, why not join in with the Republicans in the county. The good Book teaches us that he that is not for us is against us. I think that will apply to politics also. My dear friends, I hate to see the people split, but when I think of it seriously, I'd rather be right than to be successful. I don't know what will be done, but there is one thing I do know, a man can't serve God and mammon, both at the same time; neither can he serve two parties at the same time. Mr. Editor, please excuse me for my long letter this time, and oblige.

Respectfully,
M. A. KILLGORE.

We are having some extra warm weather now.

The farmers are behind with their work, but if we could have pretty weather we would be alright I guess, if we would work right hard. It makes me feel good to hear the little spring birds whistling their pretty songs, it seems like spring time.

CLANTON, ALA.

Even Greenland's icy mountains have their plutocrats. One Kor-ko-ya, of East Baffinland, literally stupefies his fellow tribesmen with his luxury. He lives in a wooden house, owns a table, and a parafine lamp, and recently, to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the foundation of his business, he stood cod liver oil all round to his employes. Such a spree of unrestrained revelry had never been witnessed in the country before.

Queen Marie Amelie of Portugal, who has done so much to alleviate the lot of the sick and poor in the land of her adoption, has now taken up the cause of the beggar children at Lisbon, and has organized a commission of women of the aristocracy, assisted by physicians, with the object of putting a stop to the practice of parents hiring out their children to mendicant bosses, who frequently deform and even mutilate the youngsters so as to increase their receipts by exciting sympathy.

The school ma'ams of Boston have been forbidden to chew gum while on duty, those of Nebraska have been put under contract not to wed during the school term, and the lady members of a fashionable choir have disrupted a church congregation because they were requested by the pastor not to eat candy during the service, remarks the Atlanta Constitution. Is it possible that in this age of boasted feminine independence and the equality of the sexes, the inherent, peculiar personal liberties of the fair sex are being systematically undermined?

An average of eighty deaths in every twenty-four hours, day after day and month after month—more than four deaths by violence in every calendar day of the twelvemonth—a suicide in every twenty-four hours—a murder in every third day. These are some of the striking facts connected with the morbid side of Chicago's life, pointing to the possibilities for the grim reaper in a city of 2,000,000 people. A death in every fifteen minutes while the hands of the clock toll round and round and round unceasingly: deaths from every cause known to the destroyer of men.

The unarmed man is as safe as possible if he attends to his own business, declares the St. Joseph News. The fool with a gun is reckless and generally comes to grief, whether he shoots somebody or gets shot. To carry a pistol is evidence of either weakness or cowardice, or both; the gun play proclaims the poltroon, the bully, the puppy. Shun the man with the pistol habit; most frequently he is a swaggering smart-aleck! always he is a menace to his fellow men—an ever-ready instrument of trouble and a promoter of woe.

If your child cannot concentrate its mind or commit to memory without great difficulty, or if it seems backward, do not urge it to study, advises a writer in Success. No development which is forced is natural or normal. The mind may be developing unevenly. When the brain cells are more fully developed and the nerve cells more mature, the faculties will balance and the child will become normal, evenly developed. But he must be encouraged instead of discouraged, for otherwise the result may be disastrous. It is cruel to keep telling a child that he is dull or stupid, or that he is not like other children. The discouraging pictures thus impressed upon his plastic mind will cling to it and become indelible in the brain of the man, and handicap him for life.

We get an idea how large New York is when we compare it with some European cities. Berlin is about the size of The Bronx. London county (not Greater London), with a population of 4,500,000, is not quite so large as Queens. Paris might be set down in the middle of London county, with a margin of streets and houses all around it. Vienna, which nearly doubled its area a few years ago by drawing the municipal line around the arms of the city extending along highways to the country, would about cover Brooklyn. Greater London, New York, Chicago and Vienna all carry on market gardening and other rural pursuits on a large scale within their own limits. Berlin, Paris, St. Petersburg, Vienna and Constantinople might be put in the area occupied by New York, with a margin for a few suburbs.

AUDITOR'S REPORT

Certain Figures of Interest Concerning Alabama.

Copies of the annual report of State Auditor Thomas L. Sowell are ready for distribution. The report shows that Alabama has 7,046 pieces of state tax land on hand. In the year 1902 the state received from the sale of tax land $54,206.14, which was four times as much as received in any year since 1899.

The report shows definitely the result of the reduction by the new constitution of the tax rates. Under the old constitution as fixed by the statutes the Alabama tax rate was 7 1-2 mills. As fixed by the new constitution the rate is 6 1-2 mills. Three mills is set apart from this for school purposes and one mill for helpless confederate soldiers. Under the old constitution during 1902 the total amount of general taxes was $1,628,745.16. With this cut made by the new constitution this general fund was in 1903 reduced to $773,198.68.

From the report it is learned that the total receipts of the state in 1903 were $3,201,840.42, and the disbursements in the same year were $2,937,383.07. The report shows, in one feature of interest, that the state received $16,929.75 from corporations taxes. The pensioners of the state, confederate soldiers and their widows, are paid annually $273,153.46.

The auditor's report shows that the last session of the legislature cost the state $59,823.76.

SHOOTING IN SELMA.

Jesse Seay, an ex-Policeman, Wounds C. P. O'Connor.

Early Monday morning Jesse Seay, formerly a police officer of Selma, shot and fatally wounded C. P. O'Connor, an artificial stone sidewalk and curbing layer, who has boarded with the Seays for some time. Seay was on a spree and asked O'Connor if he had paid his board. On being told that he had not, Seay is reported as having said he was going to have either the money or the man's life. A few words are said to have passed when Seay put his pistol to O'Connor's abdomen and fired. There is little if any hope for O'Connor's recovery. An operation was performed as a last resort, but the surgeons do not give out much hope for his recovery.

Seay was discharged from the police force for his too free use of his pistol, having killed a negro boy and a white jail bird before his removal from the force.

100 MILES THROUGH THE AIR.

A Moundville, Ala., Relic Picked Up Near Warrior.

A check for $2.64 drawn by a lumber company of Moundville, dated January 24, 1903, and drawn on the Merchants and Planters' bank, Tuscaloosa, Ala., payable to J. H. Spence, and with that name endorsed on it, was found in a field ten miles west of Warrior. It is believed that this check was carried by the wind on the night of the storm at Moundville.

Gadsden Fire Protection.

A fire engine recently purchased has been shipped and is expected to arrive this week. The engine was purchased by the city at a cost of $4,500 and was built and designed especially for Gadsden. Gadsden is the smallest city in the state to own an engine of this kind, but the water works are such that it was deemed necessary for the safety of the city to purchase a fire engine of this kind.

Opelika Bank Closed.

The Shaparde bank, the oldest institution in Opelika, closed its doors Saturday after an examination by State Examiner Rutledge. Notice is posted on the door which reads: "Closed pending action of state treasurer." The hope is expressed that depositors will be paid in full.

In a collision on the A. G. S. at Coaling, Ala., Sunday Bert Kingsley, a tramp, was killed and Engineer George Kerlin and the negro fireman, Green, were injured. The freights were both extras. It seems that Engineer Kerlin misjudged the distance at Coaling, where he was to meet the other train, and was unable to stop his train in time to prevent the collision. There is quite a steep grade at this point and he had a heavy train behind him.

W. L. Taylor, a merchant of York, Ala., was dangerously wounded by the accidental discharge of a pistol which had dropped. The ball penetrated his lung.

March was warmest in Alabama in 1898, coldest in 1896. The 19th is the average date of the last killing frost. The latest date is April 8th.

Opelika, Ala., is to have a paid fire department.

The city of Anniston will soon issue bonds to the amount of $50,000 for the purpose of refunding present outstanding bonds and the interest accruing.

Wisconsin's capital at Madison suffered an $800,000 damage by fire Saturday. There was an insurance of only $60,000.

Rochester, N. Y., had a three million dollar fire last week.

Perry county's books are reported practically correct.

TWINS IN DISASTER.

Decatur Has Serious Fire—Second Only to New Decatur's.

Following closely in the wake of the New Decatur fire a disastrous fire occurred in Decatur last Friday morning. The fire was of unknown origin and caused a loss of something like $70,000 on the buildings and stock of goods.

The fire originated in the second story of a large two-story frame building owned by the Mineral Land Company.

The losses were: Echols opera house, loss $10,000, insurance $5,000; one-story frame cottage owned by Jas. Edwards, loss $1,500, about half insured; two-story frame business house (where the fire originated), loss $2,000, about half insured; a two-story frame business house and stables, about half insured. It is said that Mr. Brown will build a fine hotel on the lot where this building burned. The loss on stocks of goods were: Holmes Bros., wholesale tobacconists and confectioners, heaviest losers, $30,000, half insured; Tom Williams, toombstone and marble works, $2,000; several hundred dollars' worth of hay stored in the Mineral Land Company's block by Brock & Spight.

The loss on the buildings and stock of goods is only about half covered by insurance, while the people who lived in the buildings were poor and carried no insurance whatever.

Two Mail Clerks Killed.

A negro supposed to be crazy shot and killed Postal Clerk Stockton and possibly fatally wounded Postal Clerk Glass on the Alabama Great Southern train two miles north of Meridian.

The negro jumped from the train after shooting the clerks and made his escape into the woods. He is being followed by a posse with bloodhounds and it is believed that he will be caught. The negro is supposed to have boarded the train at Meridian and ridden the two miles before he was discovered. He crept into the mail car and shot the clerks. The train backed back to Meridian to get more clerks and also to report the affair. It was at first thought that it was an attempt to hold up and rob the train and the passengers, but this was discounted by the fact that there was only one negro.

Cuban Elections.

Sunday the congressional elections, the first ever conducted entirely under Cuban auspices, were quiet. Predictions of disturbances at certain points caused some apprehension, but so far as reported nothing unusual occurred.

Three Killed.

Three were killed in Hargrove mines by an explosion Friday night and their bodies horribly burned. Jake Waldenberger, white, recently from Tennessee, and two negroes were the unfortunates. The explosion was what is commonly termed a "windy shot."

Work at the new Anniston, Ala., foundry is progressing rapidly. The company's patterns, machinery and other effects are unloaded and stored. The grading for the foundry is completed and the material for its erection will be on the ground and Monday morning the foundations will start. The spur track into the grounds is completed and the pipes have been carried in.

The artesian well which has supplied Marion with water caved in recently and disclosed a fine coal seam about six hundred feet under the surface. It is now thought that a valuable coal property has been discovered.

Lamar county's grand jury has returned 71 true bills, among which is one against Elna Webb, a boy of about 17 years of age, for the killing of a Mr. Hill at Pharos on the 11th of this month. Webb is out on bond.

The senate committee on public buildings and grounds ordered a favorable report on the bill appropriating $2,000,000 for a postoffice site in New York city in connection with the Pennsylvania railroad station.

The negro cook at the home of Samuel Waller, where a sensational burglary and arson case occurred recently, is under detention, as the Phoenix City authorities think she can give them valuable testimony.

James A. Pugh, a veteran newspaper man and the first president of the Virginia Press Association, is dead.

The dueling pistol used by William Lowndes Yancey has been presented to the Alabama department of archives and history.

Frank A. Walpole has sold the Demopolis Express to W. M. Tucker, who has already taken charge of the paper.

Gadsden, Ala., will have free mail delivery beginning June 1st.

CONVICT SYSTEM PAYS

Supt. Rogers Makes Report of the Matter.

Superintendent W. L. Rogers has filed his report on convicts and convict hire with the governor. It shows that they earned $235,962.51 for the state in 1903.

The Tennessee company worked an average of 491 men at Slope No. 10, mining 309,704 tons of coal at 73 cents per ton, which netted $225,624.02. Yardage and the hire of 83 men on Slope No. 2 run this total up to $271,071.12. The total expenses incurred for this work was $82,870.40. This expense account included the feeding of convicts, mine supplies, clothing, transportation, hospital guards, garden, stables, repairs and buildings, prison store and some incidentals. The average daily output was 998 tons.

It is shown that the cost for mining coal and other incidentals was $43.83 for each man per year. The gross earnings was $552.08 per man, and the expense was $154.95 per man, showing a net annual earning of $397.49 per year, or $33.13 per month. Under the old lease system the state received $13 per month for first class men and $10.17 for second class men.

The state works only about half of its convicts in the mines, the others being employed on the state farm and leased to different manufacturing concerns. As a matter of course many of these convicts not worked in the mines are not physically able to do very arduous manual labor and a great many of them are not able to work at all. For this reason the half of the convicts not worked in the mines do not quite earn enough to sustain themselves and the expenses of the department, which includes something like $40,000 court costs per year in addition to salaries, removal expenses and other expenses.

The farm in Elmore county has proven an expense every year because of the nature of the lands. Most of this land is of a thin, sandy soil. On this farm, however, the state made about 200 bales of cotton last year. The last legislature authorized the sale of this farm and the purchase of another and more fertile one. The Elmore farm has not been sold, but will again be worked. The department will plant a more diversified crop, however.

Tons of Steel Rails Needed.

Railroad extensions in the coal fields of Alabama are being pushed to completion and the laying of steel rail, all of which is being furnished by the Ensley steel plant, is on in earnest. The Louisville and Nashville railroad is using considerable steel rail on its Cane Creek branch and on other work of the Northern of Alabama railroad. There will be much steel laid at the new yards at Boyles. The Southern railway is pushing the six-mile extension in Bibb county, from Boothtown to mines along the Cahaba river, the road to be completed about April 11th. There is other work being done, on which there will be need for steel rail. The statement is made that something like 72,000 tons of steel rail will be supplied railroads in this state by the Ensley plant on orders already on hand.

What the Vicksburg Did.

The text of the message to the navy department from Commander Marshall of the Vicksburg is as follows:

"Took the initiative by sending medical assistance to the Variag as soon as possible after learning that they were abandoning the vessel. Sent three boats and assisted in taking off the Russian sailors, putting them on board the British and Italian vessels. The Variag remained afloat over five hours, filling slowly. Our boats were instructed not to bring the Russian sailors to the Vicksburg, offering the Zafiro temporarily, but offer was declined."

The establishment of a $25,000 fruit and vegetable cannery is contemplated by northern capitalists who are visiting in Huntsville. It is intimated that after the canning factory is established the same parties will locate a plant costing $25,000 for the manufacture of tin cans for use in this cannery and others operated by the company in several localities.

The decline in the market value of the stocks of leading industrial corporations from the highest prices of the last three years to the recent low prices has been from $4,090,047,450 to about $2,250,000,000, or 45 per cent.

At Annapolis the Navy Athletic association has taken steps to abandon football coaching by professionals. Probably it would be best for all our universities and colleges to dispense with paid trainers in every form of athletic competition. The players are supposed to be amateurs. Why should they be handled by professionals?

A small fight occurred on the island of St. Thomas last week between American and Spanish sailors, in which the Americans were victorious, although those on both sides were badly hurt.

Milwaukee, Wis., was chosen as the next place of meeting by the National Educational Association at its convention in Atlanta last week.

News of a land battle is expected from Korea.

LATEST WAR NEWS

The first shots of the war on land were exchanged Sunday at Ping Yang. A small detachment of Russian infantry, evidently scouts, appeared to the northwest of the town. The Japanese outposts opened fire and the Russians retired. The telegram reporting the incident fails to mention any casualties. It is presumed there were none on account of a small number of men engaged and the distance separating the opposing armies.

Fifteen Japanese warships bombarded Port Arthur for two hours Monday morning. The Russian cruisers Novik, Askold and Bayan, accompanied by four torpedo boats, met the attack. They were forced to retire, the Askold in a sinking condition. The Novik was damaged and a torpedo boat was sunk. The Russian battleship Retvizan was again damaged.

On account of Admiral Togo's success at Port Arthur the reopening of the sea to Japanese merchantment and the revival of shipping, the government does not anticipate that it will have further need for the auxiliary cruisers America, Maru and Yawata Maru, and they will be disarmed and returned to their owners.

A searching inquiry will be made by the Russian authorities in the effort to place the responsibility for the false report that Commander Marshall, commanding the American gunboat Vicksburg at Chemulpo, had refused to rescue the Russian sailors from the Variag.

Vladivostock has been blockaded by a Japanese fleet since Thursday. A dispatch from Hakodate adds that incoming steamers report Russian cruisers on the east coast of Kinkwasan, in the bay of Sendia, Japan.

The Cincinnati has arrived at Chemulpo.

Rich Lead Mine.

L. F. Reese, of Chicago, states that he has discovered a lead mine of wonderful richness in the western portion of Calhoun county. He has secured an option on 2,800 acres of land in that section and will at an early date organize a stock company for its development. He has had a ton of the ore analyzed and obtained 556 1-2 pounds of pure lead from it. The shaft from which this ore was obtained was sunk only eight feet.

Henry Christensen, an Athens, Ala., boy, has received letters patent on an invention that will save to its users thousands of dollars. It is estimated that it will save to the factories using it in this country alone more than $100,000 a year. It is a machine that does away with one man and saves two barrels of flour daily in all cracker factories.

Big Land Deal.

A land deal, involving something more than a quarter of a million dollars, is reported from Neshoba county, Mississippi, where Messrs. Skaggs and Crow, of Chicago, have just purchased 40,000 acres of timber lands along the line of the Mobile, Jackson and Kansas City railroad, now building through that section of the country.

At Columbus, Ga., while making a gesture in his sermon Bishop Kelley's arm passed so near a burning candle that the sleeve of his robe ignited. A member of the congregation extinguished the flame.

Every blast furnace owned by the United States Steel Corporation in the central west is now in full operation and the new material contracted for is in addition to its own output.

Brown McPherson and R. H. Baugh were run over and instantly killed by a Gulf and Ship Island cannon ball train at Meadenhall, Miss.

The discourse proceeded without the slightest interruption, the bishop completing his sentence as if nothing had happened.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS

FEBRUARY 25TH.

The senate passed both the agricultural and executive, legislative and judicial appropriation bills. An amendment to the agricultural bill, offered by Mr. Hepburn, of Idaho, caused animated discussion. It contemplates supervision of the interstate commerce so as to prevent the transfer of plants or seeds fraudulently marked from one state to another. The amendment started a debate on patriotism. It was ruled out on a point of order.

Mr. Gallinger called attention to the appropriation of $15,000 for investigating table syrups, saying the amount was appropriated last year and suggesting that some results should have been announced by this time. He offered an amendment requiring that the progress be reported to congress.

Mr. Proctor assured Mr. Gallinger that no part of the money appropriated had been used in investigating maple syrup because it needed no investigation.

Mr. Bacon defended the provision. He said that much inferior syrup was made, but that in Georgia the best article was produced. Mr. Gallinger's amendment was accepted.

The building program of the navy as contained in the pending naval bill occupied the attention of the house. The minority members of the naval committee are campaigning for a reduction in the number of ships to be authorized.

FEBRUARY 26TH.

The senate considered at some length the bill requiring the use of American ships in carrying government supplies, but without action adjourned for want of a quorum. The following bills passed:

Providing for the confirmation of entries under the homestead law when made outside the land district in which the land is situated.

Authorizing the Mobile and Western Alabama company to construct a bridge across the Black Warrior river in Tuscaloosa county, Alabama.

The house passed the naval appropriation bill after having it under consideration for a week. There was a party contest on a number of propositions during the day.

The house went into committee of the whole with Mr. Olmstead, of Pennsylvania, in the chair, and resumed consideration of naval appropriations. Mr. Roberts, of Massachusetts, in support of his amendment authorizing the purchase of five instead of three submarine boats, which was pending when the house adjourned yesterday, quoted Admiral Dewey as saying in a personal letter to him under date of February 18th, that in view of the effective work of torpedoes in the Far East it was his judgment that the government had waited long enough before constructing submarine boats, and that the number specified in the bill could be well increased.

FEBRUARY 27TH.

Immediately after convening the senate resumed consideration of the bill requiring the use of American vessels in transporting government supplies, and a roll call was offered on Mr. Carmack's motion to recommit. The motion was lost 19 to 39.

Mr. Hale moved to lay on the table Mr. Daniel's amendment relieving the government of the necessity of enforcing the provisions in the proposed law in cases in which the charge of American vessels exceeds that of foreign vessels to the extent of 10 per cent. The motion carried, 42 to 29. Efforts to fix the figures at 15 and then at 20 per cent were unsuccessful. The votes were all on party lines.

Mr. Mitchell offered an amendment to postpone the date when the law shall take effect until July 1, 1905. He expressed the opinion that the bill as a law would have the effect of restricting trade between the United states and its dependencies in the Pacific. Tabled.

A unanimous agreement was reached to vote on the bill on Tuesday next.

The house devoted nearly the entire session to the passage of 269 private pension bills.

Speaker Carmack announced the following committee appointments: Connell, republican, patents, letters and improvements of the Missisippi ventilation and acoustics; Mr. Hinshaw, republican, of Colorado, immigration and naturalization, patents, mines and mining; Mr. Candler, democrat, of Mississippi, public lands.

It is said that President Roosevelt will very likely offer Former United States Senator Thomas B. Turley, of Memphis, an appointment on the Panama canal commission to succeed John B. Harrod, of Louisiana, against whom charges have been filed. Mr. Turley was formerly a law partner of Luke E. Wright, who is now governor general of the Philippines.

Secretary Taft transmitted to the house the petition of the tobacco workers' guild of the Philippine islands praying for a reduction in the tax on tobacco. The guild is declared to represent 6,000 tobacco workers. The petition states that these workers received twice the wages under Spanish rule than they do now, the daily wage at that time being 50 cents. Prices of the necessaries of life, it is said, have increased three-fold under American rule.

LITTLE THINGS Worth Knowing

The cathedral at Ulm, Wurttemberg, possesses the highest church tower in the world. It is 383 feet high.

In pulling down the old Cathedral at Metz a strong box has been found containing coins and watches valued at $120,000.

The earliest railways were declared to be tollways, on which any man could run his own cars on his own schedule.

A Chinaman is compelled, by the law of his land, to leave his possessions to his male children. He can make no exceptions in favor of any one.

South Dakota claims the largest cave in the world. It is Wind Cave, near Hot Springs, extending ninety miles in different directions and containing 2500 chambers.

In a Berlin insane asylum is a patient, it is said, whose hair changes color with her temperature. When she is cool and quiet her hair is a light yellow, but when she is restless and excited it becomes auburn.

In Taranaki, Australia, is a church labeled in large letters on its outside walls with the names and trades of a grocer, a draper, a painter and a miller. These tradesmen built the church in return for the advertisement they obtain.

Some years ago the sexton of the Catholic Church at Grand Falls, N. B., had a head of pure white hair. It became thinner and thinner, until in 1900 he was perfectly bald. Then a crop of thick black hair began to sprout, intermingled with gray. He died in his eighty-fifth year.

The beggars of China have organized a regular system of blackmail. Every town has a band of them with a "King." The "King" goes among the merchants and others, collecting tribute, in return for which he gives a signed document insuring them against all annoyance for a certain length of time.

Helping Out the Law's Allowance.

They do say that this actually happened in this county not a great while ago.

It was a part of the incidentals at a wedding of some note. The minister had just finished the ceremony when he was accosted by the groom:

"Say, how much do you charge?" asked the new Benedict.

"Oh," said the minister, "I make no specific charges for services of this kind, usually being satisfied with whatever sum the generosity of the happy groom may prompt him to give. The law, however, allows me a fee of $3.50."

"All right," said the groom, handing the minister a piece of silver. "There's another dollar. That makes $3.50. Will that do you?"

And the astonished minister had to say "Yes."—Winchester Sentinel.

Kentucky's Giants.

W. A. Gunn, of Lexington, Ky., has suggested a unique feature for the Kentucky exhibit at the world's fair at St. Louis. There is, according to him, in eastern Kentucky a family of seven sons whose height runs from six and a half to seven feet, and he proposes that the State arrange for them to form the nucleus of a reunion of giants, which would undoubtedly prove a popular attraction at the exposition. There were eight in this family, but one of them died. They are middle-aged men, mainly farmers, finely built, and of good appearance. The committee to whom Mr. Gunn put the suggestion has taken the matter up with the Kentucky Exhibit Association, disclosing the identity of the family, and an effort will be made to induce the men to go to the proposed reunion.

Baked Mud as a Food.

Consumption of earth as food is said to be common not only in China, New Caledonia and New Guinea, but in the Galay Archipelago as well. In Java and Sumatra the clay used undergoes a preliminary preparation for consumption, being mixed with water, reduced to a paste, and the sand and other hard substances removed. The clay is then formed into small cakes or tablets about as thick as a lead pencil and baked in an iron saucepan. The Javanese frequently eat small figures roughly modelled from clay which resemble the animals turned out by our pastry shops.—Chicago Tribune.

Curious Barometer.

A curious barometer is said to be used by the remnant of the Araucanian race, which inhabits the southernmost province of Chile. It consists of the cast-off shell of a crab. The dead shell is white in fair, dry weather, but the approach of a moist atmosphere is indicated by the appearance of small, red spots. As the moisture in the air increases, the shell becomes entirely red, and remains so throughout the rainy season.

English Imports of Iron.

The large imports of iron into England—about one-third of the total amount consumed—is not due to any fear of the exhaustion of the supply in Great Britain, but to a desire to have the non-phosphorus iron used in the acid processes.

AGRICULTURAL.

The Egg Eating Hen.

The egg eating hen is an intolerable nuisance. She is a twin sister to the chicken eating hog. There have been many plans suggested to cure her of this habit, but she is still at it, and perhaps always will be. Her appetite is certainly an abnormal one when it craves the contents of an egg. Sometimes red pepper has been put in the shells of the nest egg, but the experiment has not been a roaring success. One poultryman uses nests that are so small that the hen cannot reach down under her body to peck at the egg after she has laid it and the nest box is so high that she cannot reach the egg when she stands upon the edge of the box. Nests are sometimes provided that allow the egg to roll down into a darkened place where the hen cannot see it and she wonders what she is cackling at. Hens rarely eat porcelain eggs.—Green's Fruit Grower.

Meat and Grain For Food.

Foods containing protein are given cows to increase the milk production, and hens to increase the quantity of eggs and improve their quality. The dairyman understands full well that in feeding grains which furnish protein to cows, a sufficient quantity of succulent food must be given to formulate the proper balance. Yet this same man protests when it is suggested that the same rule should apply to laying hens. The proper feeding of poultry is not so difficult as any one would think, nor is the feeding of any animal, for that matter.

If one possesses a knowledge of the needs of the animal he is feeding, he will readily find out what foods will supply such needs. Feed the variety of grains by all means as well as an occasional supply of animal feed, but do not overlook the need for green food. This same rule works the other way, so do not attempt to obtain results from green food and grain at the expense of the animal food. In some way get at the properly balanced ration and then profitable results will follow.—Indianapolis News.

Farm Gate.

To make a good farm gate make it in two parts as shown in the cut below. Make it four feet four inches high and any length desired, from ten to sixteen feet; twelve feet is preferable. Make it out of good white oak lumber one by four inches. At the ends where you nail use one strip on each side and nail from both sides. In the centre place a post in the ground, leaving it about eight inches high. To this hook one part of the gate. Use a slide latch. If you have hogs use two latches, one at top and one at the bottom. Gate posts should be nine feet long and about sixteen inches in diameter, set four feet in the ground. With good, heavy hinges and proper care this gate should last twenty years.—Norman T. Atkins, in The Epitomist.

To Prevent Soil Washing.

The past two seasons have been unusually favorable to soil washing, and many acres of slope land have been carried to the level bottoms below or borne away by high water. This loss of fertility if followed up year after year would impoverish the hill land to such an extent as to render it entirely worthless for crop raising. As washing occurs mainly where soil is loose and sandy in texture, such ground needs extra protection in the line of drain ditches and cross plowing. Frequently where it is necessary to crop the land situated on hill slopes, the mere opening of a ditch at the upper end of the cultivated portion will prevent serious loss from washing by keeping the water from the land above from coming down in injurious quantities over the field. The use of strips of soil binders through the cultivated field is also to be recommended. These should be sown crosswise of the hill, and any good pasture grass will answer the purpose provided the roots are strong and penetrate the ground to some depth. In plowing a field that washes badly it is well to bear in mind that furrows made lengthwise of the hill are conducive to soil washing; hence it is always a good plan to plow the land crosswise. Organic matter, such as barnyard manure, rubbish, hay or stubble plowed under, will, until entirely decomposed, aid in keeping the soil particles in their places through heavy rainfall. In the same manner badly washed ditches may be effectively closed by the use of hay or straw in sufficient quantities to prevent further carrying away of adjacent soil. Often the rains come so quickly that the water comes almost in a body down the hillsides. In a comparatively dry season this is not desirable, as much of the moisture is conducted from the field before it has an opportunity to percolate through the soil. To prevent this, plow the ditches to run in the direction of the most gentle slope, so that the water may be carried off gradually.—C. B. Barrett, in The Epitomist.

The Codling Moth.

A good knowledge of the life history of the codling moth is the first essential to its control. Every fruit grower should familiarize himself with its different stages by studying the insect in his own orchard.

The codling moth passes the winter in the larval stage. The larvae may be found incased in silken cocoons in cracks and holes in the trees, and in houses where apples have been stored. In the spring these larvae change to pupae, from which the moths emerge about a week after the apple is in blossom.

The adult insect or moth is but little known among fruit growers and other moths are often mistaken for it. It varies somewhat in size, but the maximum spread of its wings is about three-fourths of an inch. The front wings are of a brownish-gray color and are crossed with lines of gray scales, giving them the appearance of watered silk. At the tips of the wings there is a large brown spot, in which are many scales of bronze or gold. The hind wings are grayish brown in color. Taken as a whole, the coloring of the moth is such that when resting on old grayish bark it is so like the bark that it is not easily distinguished.

The moth lays her eggs, a few days after emergence, on the leaves of apple or other food plant, or on the fruit. A majority of the eggs of the first generation are laid on the leaves, while the greater part of those of the second generation are laid upon the fruit.

The eggs of this insect were never noted until within comparatively recent years. They are of a pearly white color and are like thin, convex disks. Around the edge there is a coarse network of ridges, while toward the centre these ridges are finer.

A red ring, which indicates the embryo, appears in the egg a few days after it is laid. In about eleven days (varying somewhat with temperature) the young larva breaks its way out of the shell and seeks to enter the fruit.

Recent work tends to show that a large number of the larvae which hatch from eggs deposited on the leaves eat small portions of the leaves before finding fruit. The larvae a, the moth, or adult insect; b, the egg, greatly enlarged; c, the full grown larva; d, the pupa; e, the pupa in its cocoon on the inner surface of a piece of bark; f, moth on bark and empty pupa skin from which it emerged.

have some difficulty in entering the smooth sides of the fruit; hence they usually enter at the calyx, or take advantage of some irregularity in the surface.

About eighty per cent. of the larvae of the first generation enter the fruit by way of the calyx, while the majority of the second generation enter at the sides, especially where fruits are touching. Upon entering the fruit the larva feeds immediately under the surface for a few days and then commences a tunnel towards the centre of the fruit, where it eats out a large cavity. It lives in the fruit about twenty days and grows pinkish or whitish, until it is about five-eighths of an inch in length, when, being full grown, it makes a tunnel to the outside of the fruit. The larva then crawls out and immediately seeks a place in which to spin its cocoon.

Work should be begun late in the fall or early in the spring, and preventive treatment should be about the same in all cases, except that the Western orchard should be irrigated freely, and every second tree should be cut out. The soil should receive a shallow cultivation for a year and a dressing of manure. The following year cover crops, such as cowpeas or red clover, should be sown and plowed under, and this should be repeated every few years. Branches should be cut out where they are matted together, thus allowing access of sunlight and spraying solution. The dead branches and stubs should be cut away and burned. It is highly important that the cut ends be smooth and dressed with shellac varnish or grafting wax. All of the rough bark should be scraped from the trunks and larger branches. The holes in the trees should be filled with plaster or cement, thus confining all larvae that are in them and preventing others from entering later in the season.

If proper attention is given an orchard when it is young, no such work will ever be necessary.

Poultry Notes.

And the old rooster, even he crows a good deal more than he scratches.

Many believe that eggs absorb odors after being laid, by coming in contact with foreign substances.

Steamed clover hay is a good substitute for grass now that the latter product belongs to the bybones.

A tight roof, a dry floor and walls free from cracks are very essential things in the makeup of a poultry house.

The natural time for a hen to lay is from February to October, but by scientific methods she can be made to lay the whole year round.

Once in a while you will find a hen that does all the cackling and the others all the laying. Every place has one or more of that kind of hens.

If you are wanting to buy some "new blood," go to your nearest poultry show and buy from the fancier of your choice and you will be money in pocket.

A warm mash in the morning is greatly relished by the hens and is a good starter for a long day's work. Follow this meal with some small grain thrown in the litter to keep them exercised.

RAM'S HORN BROWN ON HIS TRACK.

Dear People—I am at the cradle of liberty with my feathers all in a droop. I have seen Plymouth Rock, but I had to squint some to do it. It isn't as big as a load of coal on a cold day, and if the Pilgrims all landed on it they either did it one at a time, like chickens going to roost, or it has shrunk a heap.

I suppose the rolling billows of nearly three centuries have ground it down somewhat, but you wouldn't think they could have worn it down to present insignificant dimensions. With an extra good glass you can see all there is left of Plymouth Rock. It is very strange that somebody hasn't carried it off for a watch charm, for they don't keep it chained down. It just lays there loose, at the mercy of any unscrupulous person who comes along.

I shall be mighty cautious hereafter about reeling out my credulity upward anything that hails from this end of Massachusetts. I am going to stop believing that the Plymouth Rock chickens came over in the Mayflower, and nobody could give me a pair of Plymouth Rock pantaloons for a Christmas present.

I would be afraid they would shrink and would break my legs. If I had a little dog that I wanted to have stay little I would call him Plymouth rock.

I expect they will take Plymouth Rock to St. Louis next summer and show it off with the Liberty bell. It has also been cracked, but somebody has puttied it up, and it is claimed to be as good as ever it was.

I feel as much cut up with disappointment over that rock as I was over Washington's headquarters at Valley Forge, only in the opposite way for George's quarters were too large.

From a schoolboy I had pictured the Father of his country as sitting hunched up on a campstool, in a muslin tent, blowing on his blue fingers and trying to get them limber enough to write General Order No. 12, but the unadorned truth about the matter is that he had a comfortable two-story stone house with a hot fireplace in every room.

If you want to keep on venerating things that you always have venerated, keep away from them. I used to think I would like to go to Vesuvius and Gibraltar, but I see now that it wouldn't be safe.

The only thing that gives me any satisfaction at all in the matter is that one of the Mayflower pilgrims was a Brown; so that hereafter I shall hold up my head without an overcheck, as the son of a pilgrim father should.

I have also seen the first street that was laid out in New England. It has remained laid out ever since, and is still as good as new. What the Puritans did they did well, but, for that matter, nothing ever wears out here. Even the soil is still as good as it ever was, although it has been raising beans for centuries. It never was any account.

There is a city here now of almost 10,000, which strings along the bay for miles, in a way as winding as that of a man going home from a New England dinner and trying to make it in time for breakfast.

Next to St. Augustine, Plymouth is the quaintest place I have ever seen. The old-fashioned gabled houses, with immense chimneys, that might have been built for monuments, look as if they were on their good behavior toward each other.

The streets are narrow and nearly as crooked as "the street called straight" in Damascus. If men are to be judged by what they do, this seems a little rough on the Pilgrims.

From the Main street you get a glimpse of one corner of "ye burying ground on ye hill," where many of the Pilgrims are sleeping. They are dead. They died before the war, but their souls are marching on, keeping step with John Brown.

The graveyard contains many acres, and is crowded full of graves, giving one the impression that being a Pilgrim had its drawbacks. The graves cover the top and sides of a high hill on which the old veterans had a fort, which is not there now. I expect the relic hunters could tell what became of it if they were pushed.

Many of the departed have been buried in that graveyard crosswise, and if that isn't contrariness gone to seed, I don't know what to call it. That shows what Puritan nature was, a little plainer than it has ever been described in any of Horace Porter's New England dinner speeches.

It is now clear to me why Miles Standish and his crowd had to leave England, for such mulishness would have trouble about getting to stay anywhere. What angels of patience the Pilgrim mothers must have been to get along as well as they did with the Pilgrim fathers!

I have seen the real sword of Capt. Miles Standish, and the big pewter dish he ate his dinner from, and now feel satisfied that he was indeed a great man. He couldn't have lifted that pewter bath tub if he hadn't been.

The big Injun Samoset, whose name is a household word, was a chief who called on the Pilgrims soon after they landed and threw open his wigwam, as it were, and told them to make themselves at home. So posterity has kept his memory green by naming football teams, saloons and taverns after him.

Politeness generally pays not less than 4 percent in the long run, if it don't overdone. It seems from this, that in the remote past, there was a time when there was a good Indian with breath in him, but it was before he had much to do with the white man.

Yours, in heaviness of spirit,

RAM'S HORN BROWN.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MARCH 6.

Subject: Jesus Calms the Storm, Mark iv., 35-41—Golden Text, Psalm lxxi, 19—Memory Verses, 37-39—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Crossing Galilee (vv. 35, 36). 35. "The other side." Jesus had probably become very weary through the long day's work and needed retirement. He knew that quiet and rest could be best obtained in the solitude of the eastern shore. Accordingly He proposed to the disciples that they cross over the lake.

36. "Sent away the multitude." The country around Capernaum, and in all Galilee, was densely populated and great crowds of people followed Christ wherever He went. His teaching was original, His personality very striking, and His miracles proved His power and authority. Some wished to hear the truth, others had a curiosity to see the Christ, and many desired to be healed of their diseases. "As He was." Christ had been engaged up to the last moment, and now leaves without making any preparation for the voyage. Just before the boat put off three of the listeners to His words desired to attach themselves to Him as His disciples. 1. A scribe. 2. An already partial disciple. 3. Another who wished to bid farewell to his friends at home. "In the ship." Life has often been appropriately described as a voyage. Christ will come on board the barque in which our destiny is being carried forward, if we want Him to. "Little ships." None of the so-called ships on this lake were of any great size, they were what we would call fishing boats.

II. A great tempest (vv. 37, 38). "A great storm." It was one of those sudden and violent squalls to which the Lake of Gennesaret was notoriously exposed. Being as it does 600 feet lower than the sea and surrounded by mountain gorges, which act like gigantic funnels to draw down the cold winds from the mountains. These winds are not only violent, but they come down suddenly, and often when the sky is perfectly clear. Life's storms come suddenly. Temptations come when we are not looking for them. "It was now full." The boat was now filling. This storm was probably excited by Satan, the prince of the power of the air, who having the Author and all the preachers of the gospel together in a small vessel, thought, by sinking it, to defeat the purposes of God. But the plans of Satan often miscarry. Christ is able to bring good out of the threatened ill, and thus cause even the devil to assist Him in perfecting the courage and faith of His followers.

38. "He was in," etc. Until Christ was in the ship there was no storm. While men are resting quietly in carnal security all is peace, but as soon as Christ rebukes the world of sin the wicked are like the raging sea, that cannot rest, whose waters cast up dirt and mire. "Asleep." Here we see that Christ was a human being—a man like other men. He became very weary, and His nature called for rest and sleep. A moment later when He stilled the raging waves we see just as clearly that He was God. "They awake Him." In the hour of their distress they turned to Christ; so should we. At times He may appear to be unmindful of our need, and it will be necessary for us to "awake Him" by earnest, persevering prayer. "Master." The double "Master, Master," of St. Luke gives vividness to their haste and terror. "We perish." We are in danger of perishing. They did not know that no ship could sink with Christ on board. Those in danger of perishing should always go to Christ for help, for there is none who can save from the storms of divine wrath but the Son of God. This was a model prayer. It was short, appropriate, fervent.

III. The tempest stilled (v. 39). 39. "He arose." Christ is always ready to assist those in trouble. If we can get the sympathies of Christ enlisted in our case all will be well. He (1) arose, (2) rebuked, and (3) there was a great calm. "Rebuked the wind." The wind was the cause of the foaming sea. "Peace, be still." Literally, "be muzzled." The word means (1) to close the mouth with a muzzle; (2) to reduce to silence. He rebuked the winds as a master rebukes a raging animal. Mark alone preserves these words which were doubtless addressed to "the prince of the power of the air," by whose agency the storm had arisen. "A great calm." As a rule, after a storm the waves continue to heave and swell for hours, but here at the word of the Lord of nature there was a great calm. The calm was great from the completeness of the stillness.

IV. A gentle reproof (v. 40). 40. "So fearful." You should have remembered that the Son of God was on board. There is no cause for fear. Note some signs of a weak faith: 1. Fear in danger. 2. Doubt of the Lord's power in danger. 3. Anxious solicitude about earthly things. 4. Impatience under trouble. "No faith." Matthew records Christ's words as being, "O ye of little faith." 1. They had "no faith" in themselves or their own ability to hush the elements or to quiet their own fears. 2. They had a "little faith" in their divine Master. This is seen from the fact that they (1) came to Christ, (2) awoke Him, and (3) appealed to Him to save them. 3. But their own fearfulness and Christ's reproof shows that they had only a little faith. 4. Christ's questions go to show that they were responsible for the defectiveness of their faith. 5. Christ's love for them did not lead Him to shield His disciples from the reproof they deserved. 6. Christ honored a little faith. He (1) arose, (2) rebuked the wind, and (3) caused a great calm. Is there a tempest in your heart? There is One who is able to drive out all the elements that cause discord and unrest and give you perfect peace. And it is the duty of the tempest-tossed soul to make a personal application to Christ for the peace which He so much desires to give.

V. Great astonishment (v. 41). 41. "Feared exceedingly." Matthew says, "The men marvelled." They were greatly astonished; filled with amazement. They were overwhelmed with the majesty and ease with which He issued His orders to the elements, and at the submission with which they, like living intelligences, are hushed by His word. "What manner of man." What a vast display of power; how far exalted above mortals must He be! Christ is the great problem of history, of theology of life. What is He? He is "man," but what "manner" of man? He is the God-man, who stands equal with God on the high level of Deity, and equal with man on the low level of humanity. "Obey Him." The One who created wind and sea could control them.

Professor Shaler will not retire from teaching on account of disturbances in a course in elementary geology; but there is said to be a possibility that the course will be given up. One can hardly blame the professor, though it would seem that to abolish the course altogether would put a great strain upon the already overcrowded courses in fine arts and Semitics.

There is nothing to indicate that the old bachelors are taking to the woods. It may be so long since the last leap year that they have forgotten the danger.

THANK heaven! Another week has passed by without the killing or maiming of some one at the Clanton crossing.

GOVERNOR JELKS has shown excellent statesmanship in many instances, and in none more perhaps than his appointment of suitable men to office. He has again demonstrated his ability in this direction by appointing Hon. Terry Richardson of Montgomery as Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit until May 1, 1904. This appointment is made to fill the vacancy caused by the sudden death of Judge Winter. The rest is left in the hands of the people. The governor has announced that for the unexpired term of Judge Winter (Nov. 1904) he will appoint the nominee of the people at the primary of April 11, which practically means that the primary elects our Judge for the ensuing term. Judge Richardson states that he will not be a candidate for re-election.

R. F. SIMS.

A candidate for the suffrages of the people is Mr. R. F. Sims, of Maplesville, who would like to serve as Tax Collector of Chilton county. He is almost a native of the county, having been raised partly within our borders, and he has been a resident of the county since 1874. He is a gentleman who has never asked for office before, although he has served the people as County Surveyor for the last three years, giving general satisfaction in that capacity. Mr. Sims is well qualified to fill the office of Tax Collector, and if nominated and elected will doubtless prove a valuable official.

J. W. E. GULLEDGE

This gentleman offers his services to the people as Clerk of the Circuit Court, feeling assured that his record as a consistent Democrat and as a Confederate soldier, entitles him to the consideration of the voters. As a Confederate soldier he lost a leg, fighting the battles of his country, and the loss of this limb of course precludes him from many persuits whereby he could make a living. His educational qualifications are fully equal to the task of ably filling the office o Circuit Clerk, and he promises the people to devote his entire attention to their interests if they nominate and elect him to that office.

W. H. FOSHEE

Everyone in Chilton county except possibly a few newcomers, knows Hugh Foshee, as he is familiarly called. It is a long way back since Mr. Foshee was first appointed Circuit Clerk of Chilton county, and afterwards was elected and ably served two terms in that responsible position. After a long rest he feels he could make the people once again a thoroughly efficient official, well acquainted with the duties of the office, and anxious to give the people the benefit of his experience. It is superfluous to say that, if nominated and elected, Mr. Foshee, with his ripe experience, would make an excellent Clerk of the Circuit Court.

J. C. VEAZEY

For many years Mr. J. C. Veazey has been a resident of the western part of Chilton county, and among his neighbors at Macedonia he is well thought of as an energetic young man, and a leader in all church movements, especially singing. He wishes to make the acquaintance of everyone in the county, and for that purpose makes the announcement that he is a candidate for Tax Collector. A consistent democrat, in the prime of manhood, well educated and energetic, he will doubtless make a thoroughly capable official if nominated and elected.

T SCOTT SAYRE

No more important duty devolves upon the people than the selection of a Judge of the Circuit Court, who possibly may have to decide a case involving their lives or property. A judge should be a man of irreproachable character, one whose antecedents will bear the closest investigation, one who, like Cæsar's wife, should be above suspicion. We have not the honor of knowing personally Mr. T. Scott Sayre of Montgomery, whose announcement as a candidate for Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit appears in this issue, but from diligent enquiry we learn that he admirably answers all the above requirements—a learned lawyer, a man of broad mind and humane instincts, a gentleman—than which no higher tribute can be paid. By his nomination and election the Circuit would acquire a worthy successor to the lamented Judge Winter and popular Judge Denson.

Wm. A. COLLIER

The announcement of a local man that he is a candidate for an important judicial position is generally accepted by the people among whom he is best known with considerable satisfaction. Local pride comes to his aid and his friends rally around to his support. For many years Col. Collier has been a prominent lawyer in Chilton county, and the State, and he now asks the voters to support him in the race for the Judgeship of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit. His knowledge of the law is thorough. He has had long experience at the bar and is eminently fit to successfully fill the judicial office, if the people will nominate and elect him to that position.

NO STOCK LAW FOR BEATS 5 & 10

The election last Monday in Beats 5 and 10 resulted in the overwhelming defeat of the stock law which has, in a very indifferent manner, been in operation there for the last two or three years. It was generally expected that a vote of the people would be against stock law, but it came as somewhat of a surprise that the vote should have been so much against.

In accordance with the law the County Commissioners met in special session on Wednesday and announced the result as follows:

For Stock Law—No 225
For Stock Law—Yes 31

Majority against 194

and consequently the stock law is repealed.

Beat 5 voted 18 for and 52 against; Beat 10 voted 13 for and 173 against.

We cannot refrain from pointing out that this is one of the many benefits granted by the new Constitution to the people. It is democracy pure and simple. The people rule. The majority says "No stock law," and stock law disappears. This is government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

SPEAKING AT COOPERS

CAPT. REUBEN F. KOLB.

It seemed quite like old times of ten or twelve years ago last Monday at Cooper, when the "Genial Reuben" spoke to a crowd of farmers, most of whom were old Populists, who had unhesitatingly then supported him in his fight on behalf of the people. He was the same old "Rube," and spoke to them in the same old strain. He knew then what they wanted to better their condition, and he knows it now. He fought their political battles then and lost the fight at a great sacrifice of this world's goods, and he made them understand he was fighting their battles now, not with sword and gun, not with the odds against him, but all in his favor, and with zeal and ability to give to them all the advantages to which they are entitled.

Capt. Kolb is a candidate for the Presidency of the Railroad Commission, and in his homely way, which goes straight home to the hearts of his audience, he told them what he could do, what he would try to do, and what he thought he could do, if they elected him to the office. He believes that the people of Alabama are entitled to an equitable adjustment of rates for railroad transportation, and if elected he purposes to see that they get all they are entitled to, not at the expense of the railroads or at the expense of anyone, but on a fair and legitimate basis to all.

To reach this, or any other desired end, it is essential that the people should get together. There must be unity of action. A people divided against themselves can accomplish nothing, but must of necessity take what comes to them. The Democratic party of Alabama today is the one and only way through which reforms can be accomplished, and men are only standing in their own light, and retarding the advance of the State, by standing aloof and vainly striving to stem the current of popular sympathy with the Democratic party. He urged them to come, one and all, and vote in the primary of April 11.

The speech of Capt. Kolb was well received, and more than one man was heard to say: "I've voted for Kolb twice, and I'll vote for him again."

JUDGE ADAMS.

Following Capt. Kolb, Judge Adams made an eloquent address to the audience, confining his remarks mostly to the advantages to the people of concerted action. He said that he had always been a democrat; he had made no change; he had fought the methods that were employed to accomplish certain ends, but that issue is settled and therefore nothing worthy of contest remains, and it is a useless disturbance among the people of Chilton county to try and keep alive a dead issue. The people deprive themselves of their right to select State officers by remaining outside of the Democratic party, whereas, on the other hand, by their votes in the primary they could make their influence felt and respected.

Several of the audience congratulated Judge Adams upon his speech and some remarked they had never regretted voting for him, and intended to vote for him again.

A. C. SMITH.

Mr. Smith next addressed the audience, stating he was a candidate for Judge of Probate and would be proud of their votes. He promised that if elected he would do his best to serve them all, and use his utmost ability for the good of the people of the county.

Mr. Smith expressed himself as well pleased at the reception he met with.

Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Scott's Emulsion is simply a milk of pure cod liver oil with some hypophosphites especially prepared for delicate stomachs.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, Feb. 29, 1904

It is, perhaps, proper for the congress to aid the sufferers from the Baltimore fire by putting building materials to be used in the burned district, on the free list. Similar legislation was passed to aid the sufferers from the Chicago fire in 1871. Two or three inquiries, however, are suggested by this legislation:

1. If the tariff does not increase the cost of building materials, or, in other words, "if the foreigner pays the tariff tax," as the Republicans declare why remove these duties now?

2. If the removal of the tariff duties on building materials will greatly relieve the Baltimore fire sufferers who, for the most part are wealthy men, why not take off these duties on all building materials and thus greatly relieve the rest of the people of the country, who, for the most part are poor and are trying to build for themselves as good homes as their meagre incomes will permit?

3. Is this a government of, by and for the rich and at the expense of the poor?

The Hon. John Sharp Williams, the Democratic leader of the House of Representatives, is about to execute a flank movement on the Republicans which is likely to cause them to squirm like a cut worm. He will soon introduce several reciprocity bills which will practically be a duplication of the Kasson treaties, negotiated in 1896 to 1900 with foreign countries, but which never were ratified by the Senate. The sad fate of those treaties, which were smothered to death in the Senate pigeonholes, forms an interesting story.

When the Dingley bill was put through in the spring of 1897, many duties were intentionally left considerably higher than was thought necessary, even by the leading protectionists. It was expected by Dingley and other Republicans that reciprocity treaties would soon be made with foreign countries and duties were left very high so that we would have a large margin on bargaining power. Then, after swapping tariffs with those countries, we would have ample protection left. The Hon. John A. Kasson, of Iowa, was made a special commissioner plenipontentiary and negotiated treaties with France, Argentina, Ecuador, and, through Denmark and the United Kingdon, with several East Indian Islands and with British Guinea.

These treaties meant much for both the shippers and the consumers of this country. The fact that a Republican Senate would not allow them to pass means that our consumers are now paying duties higher than were planned, even by the protectionists.

It means that the trusts are receiving more protection than many protectionists would have conceded had not reciprocity treaties been contemplated.

It means that our goods—wheat, corn, beef, pork, canned goods, etc.—are being kept out of France and other countries by duties ten or twenty per cent. higher than would have been the case had the reciprocity clause been omitted from the Dingley law. Thus, it is for the purpose of correcting this anomaly that Mr. Williams has introduced these bills, and we now will see whether the Republicans were sincere in their reciprocity game. We will put them on record. If they are in earnest then they will support the Williams' bills, and if they are only bluffing, as we suspect them to be doing, the people of the country will have a chance before this campaign is over to ascertain the fact. John Sharp Williams is placing them in the position of having to fish, cut bait or get out of the boat. My judgment anent the leadership of Mr. Williams, published in this correspondence months ago, is being vindicated every day by his work on the floor of the House.

The presidential candidate situation is again agitating the solons here at the national capital. The death of Senator Hanna has clarified the atmosphere so far as the Republican situation is concerned, and there is no longer any doubt that President Roosevelt will be the nominee of the Republican convention. That is conceded on all sides and by all Republicans.

BIG BOND ISSUE

Sought for Improvements in the Philippines

Representative Cooper, of Wisconsin, introduced a bill amending in several important ways the act providing a civil form of government for the Philippines. The bill was prepared by Secretary Taft. Its first provision is that all bonds issued by the government of the Philippines shall be exempt from taxation, either by the government of the United States or the government of the Philippines. Five per cent bonds to the amount of $10,000,000 are authorized for public improvements in the Philippines. These bonds are to be approved by the president and secretary of war, and are to be used to provide for port and harbor works, roads, bridges, provincial and municipal schools, court houses and penal institutions.

Five per cent municipal bonds also are authorized to carry on municipal improvements.

Extensive work of internal improvement has been going on in the islands for the past four years. All of these works, building the breakwaters and docks, the construction of roads, the erection of school houses and bridges, in fact all sorts of necessary work to develop the islands permanently, have been paid for by the Philippine government out of the cash receipts; not one cent of indebtedness has been incurred.

In fact, the islands have no bonded debt in the actual sense of debt, for the certificates that have been sold in reality were to create reserve funds in the case of the currency, and where issued to pay for the friar lands, they are based on the value of the lands themselves, which are held as security for their redemption.

Cornwell is Home.

Captain Cornwell arrived in New Orleans Sunday morning from Honduras. Captain Cornwell is under surveillance but not under arrest. When he landed in New Orleans he was met at the wharf by a special deputy sheriff sworn in for this purpose, and this deputy, who is a friend of Captain Cornwell, will escort him to Birmingham. The bonds are already signed and only await his signature to make them effective.

Captain Cornwell comes back to settle up the trouble and face a trial, if there is one. It is very doubtful if a case will be prosecuted, as it is thought he will be able to settle, and that the depositors of the bank will receive back every cent they thought they had lost when the bank was wrecked.

In the United States court of claims the chief justice announced the case of the state of South Carolina versus the United States to recover various sums paid by the state of South Carolina as special taxes for the sale of liquors in the state at the various dispensaries by the officials in charge of these dispensaries, that the petition of the state of South Carolina was dismissed. South Carolina made claim for the refund of these taxes on the ground that the state dispensary law was constitutional, as decided by the supreme court of the United States, and that the collection of these taxes was in reality a tax levied upon the exercise of a governmental function and power. The commissioner rejected the claims and suit was then brought in the court of claims.

The president sent the following nominations to the senate: Chairman of the isthmian canal commission, Rear Admiral John G. Walker, United States navy, retired, District of Columbia; members of the isthmian canal commission, Major General Geo. W. Davis, United States army, retired, District of Columbia; William Barr, New York; Benjamin M. Harrod, of Louisiana; Carl Ewald, Grunsky, Cal.; Frank J. Becker, of Michigan.

The senate committee on pensions authorized a favorable report on the pension appropriation bill with an amendment increasing to $100 a month the pensions of veterans who are totally blind as a result of service in the civil war. This amendment will increase the total appropriation under the bill by $201,600.

The brain of George Francis Train weighed 53.8 ounces, exceeding that of Daniel Webster by three-fourths of an ounce. The heaviest brain of any human being was that of Tureneff, seventy-one ounces. That of Benjamin F. Butler weighed sixty-two ounces, while Webster's came next with fifty-three and a half ounces. Heavy brains are not the only sure indication of a great man.

POSTAL TRIAL ENDED

With Verdict Against All Four Defendants.

"Guilty as indicted," was the verdict announced by the foreman of the jury in the famous postoffice conspiracy trial Friday night, stating at the same time that this was the verdict as to all four defendants, August W. Machen, late general superintendent of the rural free delivery division; George E. Lorens, of Toledo, O., and Samuel A. and Diller B. Groff.

The trial lasted two days short of seven weeks. The jury was out nine hours and took five ballots.

Immediately after the verdict was rendered Charles A. Douglass, on behalf of all four defendants, filed motions for a new trial, for an arrest of judgment and also for an appeal for the purpose of having the defendants admitted to bail. Bail was fixed at $20,000 each, which was arranged at once. He said

"We will make a motion in arrest of judgment and a motion for a new trial involving the misleading question of law. It goes to the very root of this case and these matters will be heard on their merits before Judge Pritchard, and if not successful will be carried on appeal to the court of appeals and from there, if necessary, by certiorari to the supreme court of the United States."

Machen, after the verdict, had nothing to say and seemed utterly crushed.

On Saturday the quartet was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the Moundsville, W. Va., penitentiary, and a fine of $10,000 each. The sentence imposed is the maximum allowed by the law, although the court, contrary to the contentions of the prosecution, decided that the several counts in the indictment constituted but the one offense. The prosecution asked the imposition of the full penalty on each count, the adoption of which, it is pointed out, would involve a total of twenty-four years' imprisonment and a fine of $120,000.

GUN HUNG FIRE AND THE FISHERMAN IS DEAD.

Captain of Schooner Accidentally Kills a Member of His Crew.

The fishing schooner Favorite, of Pensacola, Fla., arrived in port bringing the body of Nels Johnson, one of the members of the crew who had been accidentally shot and killed by Captain Jack Marrenger, master of the vessel. The death of Johnson occurred five days previously.

The Favorite was at the fishing banks when the accident occurred. All of the men, including the captain, had their lines out fishing, when the captain saw a big shark near the boat. The captain procured the gun, cocked both hammers and fired at the shark. Thinking that both charges of the gun had been fired he was in the act of placing the gun on deck when one of the charges which hung fire exploded, taking effect in Johnson's side.

The men did everything possible to relieve the suffering of Johnson, but they had no means at hand to stop the flow of blood or dress the wound, and he died four hours afterwards. The wound would have proved fatal even had the fisherman had the best of surgical attention. The body of the dead man was wrapped in sails and placed in one of the ice boxes.

Japan Asks Cable Rights.

An application has been made to this government by the Commercial Cable Company on behalf of Japan to land a cable on the island of Guam. At present Japan has two cable lines connecting it with the outside world. Both of them run from Nagasaki across the Yellow sea to Shanghai. If these cables should be cut by the Russians a contingency not unlikely, Japan would be cut off from communication with cable from other countries. The question of granting permission to the cable company to land its cable at Guam involves to some extent, in the circumstances, the neutrality of the United States in the pending far eastern conflict.

Four Drowned.

Opening of the river season at Knoxville, Tenn., was signalized by the drowning of four men and the narrow escape of two others. A large raft of lumber struck a dam at Campbell's Shoals, and as a result James and Win Wood, Frank Evans and Joe Cline were drowned where it broke up.

There are not going to be any female attorneys at law in the state of Mississippi just yet, the bill providing that they be permitted to practice before the courts of Mississippi having been indefinitely postponed after quite a lengthy discussion.

A woman died in Tennessee last week who had in all her 95 years of life never been further than three miles from her birthplace.

Men Fight; Woman Will Die.

Albert Sims and Charles Stewart, of Webster county, Mississippi, became involved in a personal difficulty at the home of the former. Stewart attempted to wrest a gun from Sims and in the scuffle the weapon was discharged, the contents entering the breast of Mrs. Stewart. Sims surrendered. It is believed the woman will die.

PANAMA TREATY RATIFIED

United States Senate Passes Measure by a Vote of 68 to 14.

Senator Bacon's Amendment Providing For Arrangement of Compensation to Colombia Rejected.

Washington, D. C.—By a vote of 66 to 14 the Senate ratified the Panama Treaty without amendment. This was an unusually large vote, only nine members being absent and not voting. Of these nine six were paired in the affirmative with three in the negative. Had every Senator voted the result would have been yeas, 72, nays, 17. The negative was made up entirely of Democrats, but the vote on ratification cannot be said to have been partisan, as fourteen Democrats voted in the affirmative and two were paired on that side. This made 16 Democratic Senators for and 17 against ratification.

The only other vote was on the amendment offered by Senator Bacon providing for an arrangement for compensating Colombia for loss of the territory of Panama. This was rejected by a vote of 49 to 24.

The debate in executive session was generally on the merits of the treaty, with reference to the secret papers, which were sent to the Senate by the President. Senator Morgan made a set speech which occupied the greater part of the time. Senator Culberson made comments on the secret correspondence and asserted that it showed that the "reasonable time" referred to in the Spooner act was known to have expired, both for negotiating the Hay-Herran treaty and its ratification.

REBELS FIRE ON GERMAN SHIP.

Dominican Gunboat Attempts to Hold Up Steamer in Vain.

Kingston, Jamaica.—The German steamer Altenburg, Captain Kuhls, from Hamburg and West Indian points, arrived here and reported that between San Domingo and Sanchez, Santo Domingo, the Dominican gunboat Presidente hove in sight and fired a blank shot across her bows.

Captain Kuhls, however, refused to stop, and no further interfence with the Altenburg was attempted.

At Puerto Platta, Santo Domingo, President Morales warned Captain Kuhls against proceeding to Monte Cristi; but the Altenburg went there and landed cargo. Because of the revolution the steamer did not land anything at San Domingo City.

DODGE IS FREED.

Out on $10,000 Bail, as Appeal is Granted.

Houston, Texas.—The culmination of the Charles F. Dodge controversy apparently was reached, so far as all Texas tribunals are concerned, in a victory for Dodge and those interested in keeping him away from New York.

Judge Burns, in the Federal Court, granted an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States on the constitutional points involved. He also ordered that Dodge be released under the $10,000 cash bond he previously had given for an appeal. The freedom of Dodge is limited, however, to territory in the jurisdiction of the Federal Court for the Southern District of Texas. This will permit Dodge to go as far south as the Rio Grande.

BARON AND BEAR DIE.

Body of Wealthy Von Schlosser Found on Pacific Coast.

Port Angeles, Wash.—The body of Baron Martin von Schlosser, formerly an officer in the German Army, and for many years a resident of this city, has been found on the range south of the Hot Springs, near the body of a dead bear. The Baron undoubtedly had been killed by the bear while hunting.

On his body were receipts from banks in Portland, Ore.; Chicago and New York for more than $100,000.

A letter found on the body directed that Judge Hatch should administer his affairs. Baron von Schlosser had been a resident of Port Angeles for several years, and only recently had taken out naturalization papers.

Berlin, Germany.—Colonel Leutwein, Governor of German Southwest Africa, cables that Ovambos, under Captain Nechale, attacked the police post at Amatoni and were repulsed with a loss of sixty men killed. The Germans sustained no casualties and Lieutenant Schultze captured large herds of cattle.

EXPLOSION KILLS FOUR.

Powdered Starch Becomes Ignited—Damage to Factory About $200,000.

Waukegan, Ill.—The starch plant of the Warner Sugar Refining Company was destroyed by fire following an explosion. Four men were killed and several others injured.

The property loss is estimated at about $200,000. The explosion was caused by the igniting of a fine dust or powder that arises from the ground starch. The force of the explosion was felt five miles away.

Facts About Russia and Japan.

In time of peace the Japanese Army, consisting of 421,000 men, costs but $18,500,000 a year.

Russia's soldiers have penetrated Korea as far as Ping Yang, sixty miles below the Yalu and 100 miles from Seoul.

The Russians are rushing troops and supplies to Harbin, which is to be their base of operations instead of Port Arthur.

This is the fourth time Japan has made war on a foreign nation, except for early barbaric expeditions against the Koreans.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN INTERESTING DISCOURSE BY THE REV. DR. H. C. SWENTZEL.

Subject: The Divine Carpenter—Christ Belonged to the Grand Army of Self-Respecting Workingmen—His Life Condemns the Sinfulness of Idleness.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—An interesting and forceful sermon was preached Sunday morning by Rev. Dr. Henry C. Swentzel, rector of St. Luke's Church, Clinton avenue, near Fulton street. The subject was "The Divine Carpenter," and the text St. Mark vi:3: "Is not this the carpenter?" Dr. Swentzel said:

The glorious Son of Man was a mechanic. It is well worth while to consider those eighteen years which He spent at Nazareth, concerning which we would dearly love to know so much, but of which it is possible to learn so little. Whether He were rich or poor, whether He devoted Himself exclusively to the exercises of religion or was occupied with other concerns as well; whether He were, so to say, a man among men, or lived a strange weird life as a recluse in the wilderness—these are queries upon which we may reflect with profit.

During the period which began when the Christ Child went down from among the doctors in the temple to the Galilean home to prepare for His public life there is only one bit of definite information concerning Him, and that is furnished almost accidentally in the text.

The people who had known Him all along were astonished when they heard His sayings and saw His mighty works. The record which He made among them in bygone years was worthy of Him and ought to have prepared them to expect large things of Him sooner or later, but they could not forget that He had lived among them as a common artisan. When He returns to them with all the fame He had won and was about to spend a brief season with them in order that His former friends and neighbors might not be neglected in His ministry, they recall His antecedents, and they ask with mingled wonder and scorn, "Is not this the carpenter?"

The question establishes the fact that Jesus had been known as a village carpenter. From the days of youth until He set out to do the stupendous work for which He was sent, He accepted the trade of His reputed father and was occupied largely with its ordinary employment. He belonged to the "working classes." A descendant of the royal David He most surely was, and yet He thought not of the throne of His renowned ancestor. He was indeed a king, but not after the world's fashion, for He came to be King of men, to rule the heart and conscience of mankind. He seems to have had no ambition to attain unto a lofty station, and the paraphernalia of earthly greatness had no charms for Him. His masterful purpose was to save the world, both the classes and the masses, and He would, therefore, identify Himself personally and actively with the multitudes and not only with a privileged few. He could teach princely virtues without being a prince, and He would benefit the hosts of mankind by allying Himself with the conditions and experiences of the many. He understood full well that no political contrivances could bring the kingdom of God to this earth, and He considered that the needs of the millions could be served in no other way than by the moral and spiritual democracy which it was His mission to establish.

Our Lord was a workingman. It must not, therefore, be supposed that He held a brief or thundered a bull of excommunication against riches. He had something to say against mammon worship, and He warned against the temptations of opulence, but He never branded wealth as essentially evil. He taught emphatically that the responsibility of people is in exact proportion to what they have, and that, inasmuch as money entails numerous obligations, they who have it can be saved only through the most devoted regard for their duties. Some of His disciples were well-to-do, and both the midnight inquirer and the good man of Arimathea were dear to Him. The common people heard Him gladly, but others were not excluded from His blessing simply because they had possessions. The gifts of the Magi at the beginning of His career and the rich man's tomb wherein His mangled corpse reposed at the last, indicate that His mission included both the many and the few. He advocated none of the insane social or political heresies which some believe in now, but, taking full account of human inequalities, He taught the world to do its best, to live manfully amid the strains and stress of life, to use the present situation with all its ills for the glory of God and the well-being of the human family. No Croesus could have been the Son of Man. The real Son of Man must be typical and representative in every noble way. He must be the brother of the toiling millions who earn their bread in the sweat of their face, and who deal every day with the urgent problem of livelihood.

And yet Jesus did not accept the state of squalid poverty. He was no pauper. The purpose of infinite love which brought Him hither could not prompt Him to accept the state of such a forlorn character. It would be impossible for any individual who was poor through his own guilt to be other than an incongruous and repulsive figure, or to stand as the model of perfect manhood. Pauperism is an evil in every sense; and while society is bound to help it, it is too degrading and polluting to merit encouragement, and an enlightened state will wisely make laws by which, if possible, to crush it. Guilty poverty should be rebuked and shamed. The Son of Man could choose it not, for then He would have disgraced Himself and presented an inferior ideal for His followers. Never by allowing Himself to be a burden to others or by becoming an object of public charity, could He have spoken to men and elevated their standards and raised the tone of their thought. Neither a high social degree nor a discreditable beggary would have been in harmony with Himself or the interests which He had in view; for in either case He would not have been in a position from which He could touch the minds and hearts and lives of the nations. The Son of Man must be where He can speak to all with equal advantage, where He can reach their affections and wield His blessed power over the sphere of their practical questions and activities. He could not have been one who was arrayed in purple and fine linen and fared sumptuously every day, neither could He have adopted the portion of a squalid and self-inflicted poverty. He would not be either rich or sinfully poor, but an honest, industrious, royal workingman.

"Is not this the carpenter?" In this envious and half reproachful question of His acquaintances is a happy revelation of the ideal of the Son of Man for all the world. It was in Joseph's shop that He spent all save three years of His manhood. It was at the bench and with the tools of a mechanic that He chose to live in order that His example might speak lessons of truth and inspiration to all human souls. The Scriptures lay stress upon His humble circumstances, but they do not place Him on a par with the thriftless sluggard who deserves to feel the pinch of want. No effort of ours can fathom the depths of His humiliation who, being the Son of God, became the Son of Mary and a carpenter; who, though He was rich yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through His poverty might be rich, but He knew no indigence. We see this divine Being in Nazareth on a self-supporting basis, making a living by mending plows and yokes, repairing houses and doing all the jobs which fall to a village carpenter; we see Him working with His hands for bread and learning by day that way of labor which must be trodden by all bread-winners. He belonged to the grand army of self-respecting workingmen. Not from a palace nor yet from a hovel, but from the workshop of an artisan does Jesus of Nazareth make common cause with all the people of the passing generations.

How surely our Lord condemns the sinfulness of indolence, and how sublimely does His example urge the employment of our energies. He might have maintained Himself without work, but to have done so would have been to set the seal of His sanction upon the very spirit that prompts the average individual to get through this world with as little effort as possible—the spirit that is plainly the spirit of the devil, and that is the prolific cause of crime and woe. He who fed the crowds from a few loaves and fishes might have wrought a daily miracle for Himself, but never once was His omnipotence exerted in His own behalf. He accepted the very situation which confronts us. Engaged with the occupations of His trade during so many years, He exalts industry into a divine virtue and brands sloth as a deadly sin. He has no favor for an ambition that longs for absolute ease. It may not be necessary for any one to be occupied with the burdens of business, but we are all bound to keep in personal touch with the life of humanity. There are other spheres of usefulness than the field and the shop, the office or the counting room. The church asks for thousands who are willing to follow the example of splendid heroes who have withdrawn from the haunts of trade and from the hope of gain in order to devote themselves exclusively to the ministry of Christian laymen. Everywhere are charities calling loudly for encouragement and service. Politics presents a wide range for the activities of patriotism and of the very highest religion. There is something for everybody to do, and no one is justified in living for himself in a secularized and attractive nook away from the demands that sound from every quarter. Each individual should have some occupation, a place in the world's vast factories, a work of some sort which shall tell for the happiness of others.

The Lord has a strong word for labor. He is the fellow and the champion of all toilers. He has a meaning for all those who work with their brain or with their hands, for all such are workingmen. He has forever consecrated the everydayness of life. He adopts the workaday world. "The Light of Asia," which states beautifully certain features of the Buddhist religion, represents the incarnate Buddha as a wandering beggar, asking food. Jesus Christ was no beggar. The mendicant, any more than the pauper, receives not the approval of His own practice; by which He sanctified labor until the end of the world. The Galilean Carpenter was no less the incarnate Son of God during the years which He spent at Nazareth than He was on the mountain of the transfiguration or on the first Easter Day. There are many reasons why work is honorable, but it receives its crowning glory from the experience of the divine Christ during the long period of which we know nothing save that He was a mechanic. He has endured all occupations with dignity that nothing short of our own disloyalty can possibly take away. It matters not what one's daily toils are, they are worthy of fidelity and energy, and they are as much a part of God's service as the saying of prayers and the receiving of religious rites. The emperor and his humblest subject, the prime minister and the street sweeper, the millionaire and his valet, all are included in the spirit of industry and devotion which Jesus manifested at the bench which stood in a shop or, perhaps, at times under a huge tree at Nazareth. He has hallowed all vocations by the consecration of His personal industry, and they should be interpreted and accepted as a sacred part of the life which now is.

The Nazareth Carpenter teaches that worldly place of itself is nothing worth. A man may be a man wherever he is, and labor is honorable whatever it may be. Station or the lack of it does not make the man or his life. The people of lowly degree may likewise learn precious lessons of the Galilean artisan. They become discouraged because they fancy themselves to be of no account, and they too often cherish an unhappy contempt for their daily toils. They despise the factory or the office as necessary evils. Jesus has a lesson for them which He pronounces from the Nazareth shop. Long years He spent in obscurity. No murmurs escape Him, no signs of impatience, no evidences of a restless longing to be otherwise, no vulgar and godless disposition to try to improve upon the plans of divine providence. Quietly day after day He was concerned with the unimpressive and uninteresting matters of His business, and His only aim was to be true to the state where He was destined to live until the time came for beginning the public ministry. Wherever the Heavenly Father has placed us we, the sons of men, can be the sons of God. The real things of life are not earthly and temporal, and the true estimate of ourselves is not the place—be it lofty or lowly—which we hold among men. The divine Carpenter is a comfort and an inspiration to all.

Amid the employment of His trade did Jesus prepare Himself for His public life. There He was made ready, at least in part, to exercise all those transcendently great qualities of mind and heart which marked His ministry. For three years He gave Himself up to His work as the world's Redeemer, but for fifteen years and more, as was probably the case, He was only a carpenter. Surely He did not spend all His time and energy upon His daily toils. Often did He devote Himself to godly exercises of prayer and contemplation, without which no one can develop the traits of highest character. But He was no recluse. He settled the truth once for all that the place for strong-minded, stout-hearted folk to serve God is in the world; the arena for doing the Father's will is right here, where we have abundant opportunities for the culture of holy graces and the practice of holy living. We need the benefits of occasional solitude, but we are bound to think so seriously of life and of God's cause as to give no place to the mawkish sentimentalism which adores perpetual seclusion and calls it the noblest type of religion. The divine Carpenter hesitated not to spend the years upon which His future work was founded amid the activities incident to the daily interests of mankind. He was a bread-winner, a wage-earner.

Work is God's ordinance. If it was a curse in the beginning, it is a blessing now. It is one of the best tonics. It is scarcely less than a sacrament. It may be debased, even as may the sacrament of the altar in which one may eat and drink damnation to his soul, but it is something of a sacrament which is intended, if used aright, to strengthen and uplift, and to further the divine plans. It is a sacred duty. It is the privilege and the prerogative of taking part in the vast activities of humanity. It is an invitation to the market place to dispense comforts, to have a share in the world's progress and the making of history. It proclaims independence, it disciplines character, it schools the affections. We are only holy ground and are doing holy things when we go with Christ's spirit to the daily round and the common task. The founder of Christianity, the incarnate Son of God, the universal Man, was a village carpenter.

Holiness and Humility.

The highest lesson a believer has to learn is humility. O, that every Christian who seeks to advance in holiness may remember this well! There may be intense consecration, and fervent zeal, and heavenly experience, and yet, if it is not prevented by dealings of the Lord, there may be an unconscious self-exaltation with it all.

Let us learn the lesson—the highest holiness is the deepest humility, and let us remember that it comes not of itself, but only as it is made a matter of special dealing on the part of our faithful Lord and His faithful servant.—Andrew Murray.

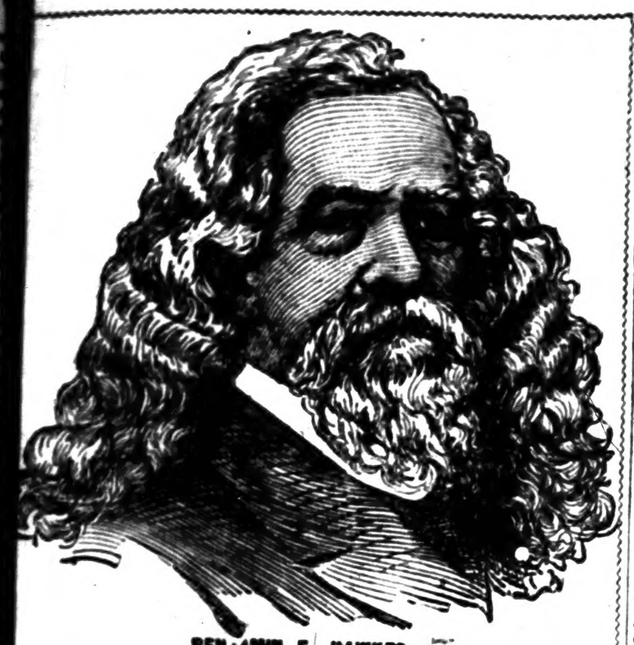
COMRADE OF GENERAL GRANT

ays: "I Do Not Believe Pe-ru-na Has a Superior for Catarrh."



BENJAMIN F. HAWKES.

Benjamin F. Hawkes, of Washington, D. C., is One of the Three Living Comrades of General Grant in His Cadet Days at West Point.

In a recent letter from 611 G street, ... W., Washington, D. C., this venerable gentleman says of Peruna:

"I have tried Peruna after having tried in vain other remedies for catarrh, and I can say without reservation that I never felt a symptom of relief until I had given Peruna the simple trial that its advocates advise. I do not believe it has a superior, either as a remedy for catarrh or as a tonic for the depressed and exhausted condition which is one of the effects of the disease."—Benjamin F. Hawkes.

ISAAC BROCK, a citizen of McLennan County, Texas, has lived for 114 ... In speaking of his good health and ... ome old age, Mr. Brock says:

"Peruna exactly meets all my requirements. It protects me from the evil effects of sudden changes; it keeps me in good appetite; it gives me strength; it keeps my blood in good circulation. I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine.

"When epidemics of la grippe first began to make their appearance in this country I was a sufferer from this disease.

"I had several long sieges with the grip. At first I did not know that Peruna was a remedy for this disease. When I heard that la grippe was epidemic catarrh, I tried Peruna for la grippe, and found it to be just the thing."—Isaac Brock.

Pe-ru-na Used in the Family for Years.

Mrs. E. West, 137 Main street, Menasha, Wis., writes: "We have used Peruna in our family for a number of years and when I say that it is a fine medicine for catarrh and colds, I know what I am talking about. I have taken it every spring and fall for four years and I find that it keeps me robust, strong, with splendid appetite, and free from any illness. A few years ago it cured me of catarrh of the stomach, which the doctors had pronounced incurable. I am very much pleased with Peruna. I am 87 years old."—Mrs. E. West.

Pe-ru-na Is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age.

In old age the mucous membranes become thickened and partly lose their function.

This leads to partial loss of hearing, smell and taste, as well as digestive disturbances.

Peruna corrects all this by its specific operation on all the mucous membranes of the body.

One bottle will convince anyone. Once used and Peruna becomes a life-long stand-by with old and young.

Mrs. F. E. Little, Toluca, Ill., writes: "I can recommend Peruna as a good medicine for chronic catarrh of the stomach and bowels. I have been troubled severely with it for over a year, and also a cough. Now my cough is all gone, and all the distressing symptoms of catarrh of the stomach and bowels have disappeared. I will recommend it to all as a rare remedy. I am so well I am contemplating a trip to Yellowstone Park this coming season. How is that for one 71 years old?"

A TRAVELER AT SEVENTY-ONE YEARS OF AGE.

In a later letter she says: "I am only too thankful to you for your kind advice and for the good health that I am enjoying wholly from the use of your Peruna. Have been out to the Yellowstone National Park and many other places of the West, and shall always thank you for your generosity."—Mrs. F. E. Little.

Strong and Vigorous at the Age of Eighty-eight.

Rev. J. N. Parker, Utica, N. Y., writes: "In June, 1901, I lost my sense of hearing entirely. My hearing had been somewhat impaired for several years, but not so much affected but that I could hold converse with my friends; but in June, 1901, my sense of hearing left me so that I could hear no sound whatever. I was also troubled with severe rheumatic pains in my limbs. I commenced taking Peruna and now my hearing is restored as good as it was prior to June, 1901. My rheumatic pains are all gone. I cannot speak too highly of Peruna, and now when eighty-eight years old can say it has invigorated my whole system."—Rev. J. N. Parker.

Mr. W. B. Schnader, of Terre Hill, Pa., writes:

"I got sick every winter and had a spell of cold in February, 1899; I could not do anything for almost two months. In December, 1899, I saw one of your books about your remedies. Then I wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice, and he wrote that I should commence the use of Peruna, and how to take care of myself.

"I did not lose one day last winter that I could not tend to my stock. I am sixty-three years old, and I cannot thank you too much for what you have done for me."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

WILD ANIMALS FAR-SIGHTED.

Defect of Near-Sightedness Appears to Be Product of Civilization.

"The effect of near-sightedness appears to be altogether a product of civilization, of our method of living," says Dr. Grier. "The natural condition of the eyesight for all kinds of animals is what is commonly termed far-sighted. Wild animals are invariably far-sighted, and remain that way even after capture by man and confinement in menageries or zoological gardens. Animals, even as young as four and five months old, when captured continue far-sighted in the zoos until their death, but the animals born in captivity are always (there may be some exceptions, though I have never heard of any) near-sighted. This is probably due to the constricted range of their vision, for which nature endeavors to adapt their eyesight to the best advantage.

"Among human beings it is very nearly the same. A hunter, trapper or sailor, a man who spends most of his life in the open and has an unlimited range for his vision, has the natural eyesight, and can discern objects a great distance beyond that possible to the eyes of the dwellers in cities. We have little need to see far away in a city, and the telescopic power of our eyes, therefore, diminishes perceptibly from generation to generation, until in the course of time it is probable we may all be near-sighted, without the power to see distinctly over 100 yards.

"The many hours each day a child spends in the schoolroom with its restricted area helps spread the near-sightedness a great deal. The little one before it enters school can see much farther than it can a few years after having begun its scholastic career. Then for a half dozen hours daily it is called upon to look no greater distance than to the teacher's desk, less than thirty feet away, so its eyesight becomes adapted to seeing clearly at thirty feet, but not so well at 100 feet, a decided contrast to the quality of the primitive eyesight."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

An Unsolved Mystery.

It is a most unpleasant truth that during the last thirty years the death rate from cancer has nearly doubled, and that as yet there has been no effective treatment found for it.

In England and Wales in the year 1876 out of every 1000 deaths twenty-three were from cancer, while in 1899 this had increased to forty-six per 1000, and the proportion is still increasing with greater rapidity. The foregoing considers the sexes together, but when we separate the statistics we find that women are much more subject than men. In 1899 thirty-four deaths out of every 1000 for men, and fifty-six out of every 1000 for women, was cancer's record. Cancer is at present perhaps the worst disease that attacks adults of mature years, those under twenty-five years being practically free from it, and as yet no cause can be definitely assigned.

During a good many years the opinion has been stated by physicians that cancer can be caused by too much meat eating, or by an overfed condition, accompanied by indolence, and statistics seem to bear out this conclusion.

A Remedy For the Consumptive.

The electrical current offers a remedy for the consumptive, according to the Lancet, London. Experiments have been conducted to this end by Dr. J. Cunningham Bowie with a high degree of success, the doctor securing the best results with an alternating current of high frequency and low potential. A special apparatus was made for the work, one permitting of a great range of adjustment. In practice the current density ranged from 300 to 800 milliamperes and from fifty to seventy volts, and the application from ten to twenty minutes. Almond oil containing iodine, thymol and other antiseptics was used for intralaryngeal injections. The arrest of the lesion was brought about much more quickly than by the simple use of antiseptic oils alone, and the doctor says he is entirely satisfied that the use of the alternating current promotes healing.

More Than One House.

Mr. Newrich, the contractor, having made a fortune—part of which he had invested in house property in the east of London—wished to rise into "smart" society. He soon found an impecunious aristocrat who, says Tit Bits, was willing to show him the way for a consideration.

The new friend advised Mr. Newrich that visiting cards were one of the necessities. As a model to be used in preparing copy for the engraver, the aristocrat offered one of his own cards, which read:

"Harold De Vere,
"Iona House, Portsmouth Square, W."

Two days later, as De Vere was sitting in his dressing gown at breakfast, a servant brought in on a salver a visiting card bearing the following:

"Ephraim Newrich,
"I own twenty-three houses, London, E."

The Discovery of Radium.

It was at the close of the year 1897 that I began to study the compounds of uranium, the properties of which had greatly attracted my interest. Here was a substance emitting spontaneously and continuously radiations similar to Roentgen rays, whereas ordinarily Roentgen rays can be produced only in a vacuum-tube with the expenditure of electrical energy. By what process can uranium furnish the same rays without expenditure of energy and without undergoing apparent modification? Is uranium the only body whose compounds emit similar rays? Such were the questions I asked myself, and it was while seeking to answer them that I entered into the researches which have led to the discovery of radium. Mme. Curie, in the Century Magazine.

DOCTORS FALL IN LINE.

Practicing Physicians recognize the unfailing reliability of Doan's Kidney Pills by prescribing them for Backache, Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Disorders—a tribute won by no other Proprietary Medicine. Four cases cited from "Notes of His Practice," by Dr. Leland Williamson, of Yorktown, Ark.

YORKTOWN, ARK., Mar. 1, 1904.

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—I have been engaged in the practice of medicine in this section for ten years. This is a very sickly climate, on the Bayou Bartholomew, near the Arkansas River. It is particularly malarious and miasmatic; we meet with many and various abnormal conditions of the human family; prominent among the cases in which I have been called upon to prescribe is kidney disease. Many of these disorders manifest themselves by pains in the back, often extending to other parts of the body; sometimes headache is present, caused by uraemic or chronic uric acid poisoning, soreness in region of kidneys, cloudy, thickened and foul-smelling urine, discharges of pus or corruption; inflammation of the kidneys, extending to the bladder, is caused by excess of uric acid and decomposition of the urine. Hemorrhage is sometimes met with, caused by high state of inflammation or congestion.

There is no class of diseases a doctor is called oftener to treat than the variety of kidney diseases, in many of which the patient will have chills or rigors, followed by fever, a result of the kidneys failing to eliminate the uric acid poison from the system. Such cases require the kidneys restored to their natural functions, then the poison and foreign substances are removed—shock to the nervous system averted and natural health restored.

I have, for some time, been using Doan's Kidney Pills in these many manifestations and with uniform success, curing most cases. I can further say that even in hopeless cases where they have waited too long Doan's Kidney Pills afford much relief and prolong life. I can recommend the pills in conditions of excessive or deficient secretion of urine, as also in convalescence from swamp-fever and malarial attacks, as verified by the following cases in my practice.

CASE 1.

THOS. ORELL, Bear, Ark., age 60. Pain in back for several weeks, then chills, irregular sometimes, severe rigors followed by fever. Gave good purgative of calomel and podoph, and Doan's Kidney Pills. After taking four boxes of the pills, patient up and enjoying good health for one of his age.

CASE 2.

MRS. SMITH, Tarry, Ark., age 29, mother of four children. Had female complaint and kidney trouble, manifest by pain in back and urine irregular; sometimes very clear, changing to cloudy, and with much sediment on standing in chamber. Gave local treatment for female complaint and prescribed Doan's Pills; after using six boxes she regards herself as cured.

CASE 3.

BROWN FAKE WINNE, Ark., age 21. Had severe case of malarial haematuria of swamp fever. Gave necessary liver medicine, calomel and podoph, and morph sulph to relieve pain, and ordered Doan's Pills for the high state of congestion and inflammation of the kidneys. Recovery resulted in two weeks. Prescribed Doan's Kidney Pills to be continued until the kidneys were thoroughly strengthened and all pain in back subsided.

CASE 4.

LILLIAN FITTOTT, Tarry, Ark., age 11. Pain in back and legs and headache. Urine full of poisoning. Prescribed Doan's Kidney Pills. After taking several boxes pain subsided, urine became normal, or natural, and patient able to resume his work.

These are a few of the typical cases in which I have used Doan's Kidney Pills. In a great many instances I use them alone with curative results, while with some others indicated remedies are associated.

I believe that by the judicious use of Doan's Pills many serious complications are arrested and many hopeless and incurable cases of Bright's disease prevented.

I have often found that one box of the pills is all that is required to effect a cure, but in some cases I continue their use until all symptoms are entirely absent and the cure effectual and permanent. Yours truly,

Dr. Leland Williamson.

YORKTOWN, ARK.

A free trial of this great Kidney and Bladder Specific can be obtained by addressing Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. The regular size is 50 cents per box. If not for sale by your druggist or dealer, will be sent by mail, charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

A Shocking Crime.

The daughter of a widow living at Potsdam has just been tried for inciting soldiers against an officer in the following circumstances: One Sunday last year she was walking with her sweetheart, a soldier, when she met a young cadet. He stopped the soldier on the ground that he had not saluted him. The soldier and the girl maintained that the salute had been given, whereupon the cadet ordered the man to follow him to the barracks. The girl upon this called to a number of artillerymen, bidding them not to allow such a young officer to arrest an honest man. The soldier who followed the cadet as ordered, was sentenced to five months' imprisonment in a fortress. The charge against the girl was dismissed, but she was fined 30 marks for insulting the cadet.

Miss M. Cartledge gives some helpful advice to young girls. Her letter is but one of thousands which prove that nothing is so helpful to young girls who are just arriving at the period of womanhood as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly, for it is the only medicine I ever tried which cured me. I suffered much from my first menstrual period, I felt so weak and dizzy at times I could not pursue my studies with the usual interest. My thoughts became sluggish, I had headaches, backaches and sinking spells, also pains in the back and lower limbs. In fact, I was sick all over.

"Finally, after many other remedies had been tried, we were advised to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am pleased to say that after taking it only two weeks, a wonderful change for the better took place, and in a short time I was in perfect health. I felt buoyant, full of life, and found all work a pastime. I am indeed glad to tell my experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it made a different girl of me. Yours very truly, Miss M. CARTLEDGE, 533 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga." — $5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

ALABASTINE
the Durable Wall Coating. Won't Rub Off.

WHY?

Because it cements to, and is not stuck on the wall with decaying, animal glue, as are the various so-called "wall finishes," which are kalsomines sold under fanciful names.

You can apply Alabastine.

ALABASTINE

The Only Sanitary and Permanent Wall Coating

ALABASTINE is not a disease-breeding, hot water glue wall finish, furnishing a lodgment and harbor-ground for disease germs; it is a natural, rock-base composition, in white and many exquisitely beautiful tints; in powder form, ready for use by simply mixing with cold water. Anyone can brush it on.

ALABASTINE cements to walls, distroys disease germs and vermin, and never rubs off or scales. Other wall coatings, under fanciful names, and usually mixed with hot water, are unhealthful kalsomines, stuck on the wall with glue, which soon rots, nourishes germs of deadly disease, rubs and scales, spoiling walls, clothing and furniture. When it is necessary to refinish, the old coats must be washed off—an expensive, nasty, disagreeable job, making the rooms damp and unfit to live in.

When walls are once coated with Alabastine, succeeding coats may be applied, year after year, without washing the walls, thus saving great expense and annoyance.

Hot and Cold Water Kalsomines Have No Merit

Some dealers try to sell them, buying them cheap, and trying to sell on Alabastine's demand until such time as their customers learn of the imposition.

THEY ARE WORTHLESS PREPARATIONS

If you cannot buy Alabastine of your hardware, paint or drug dealer, refuse all imitations, and write us. We will tell you where you can get Alabastine without delay, or sell it to you direct. $500.00 GIVEN AWAY. Write for particulars.

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia

Pneumonia is too dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt to doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand. A physician should always be called. It should be borne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of the grip, and that by giving Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the threatened attack of pneumonia may be warded off. This remedy is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. Dr. W. J. Smith, of Sanders, Ala., who is also a druggist, says of it: "I have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribed it in my practice for the past six years. I use it in cases of pneumonia and have always gotten the best results. Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

LET THE PEOPLE RULE.

VOL. XII | CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, MARCH 10, 1904 | NO. 21

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Four weeks from next Monday is the primary, and it is worth while right now to review the situation in general. The people are busy, and so are the candidates, and while they are engaged we will take a look around. It is pleasing to note that the campaign has been carried on in a very friendly manner, and the natural rivalry of candidates for the same office has led to no friction whatever. All is harmonious and lovely.

The three candidates for Judge of Probate are each working in their several ways to induce their friends to turn out in force and strengthen their majority at the primary, for of course, each one expects and hopes to get a majority. A. C. Smith is tackling all he meets, and makes occasional trips to interview others. E. B. Deason has not been at all well lately, but is better now and greets with pleasure all good voters. Judge Adams is an untiring worker and never misses an opportunity to add another vote to his list. Among the three is the nominee.

Don't hear a great deal from Prof. R. A. Rasco, these days, but he has the field all to himself, and no opposition to his candidacy for Superintendent of Education, he can afford to lay low and say nothing, but all the same he is working quietly.

The two candidates for Solicitor of the 15th Judicial Circuit are earnestly at work, but as they have to cover the three counties, Elmore, Autauga and Chilton, we cannot see quite as much of them as we would like to. F. Loyd Tate is bustling around, first one place and then another, and J. M. Holley keeps steadily at it in his quiet way.

Of the four candidates for Tax Collector none appear to be exerting themselves very much, seemingly content to lay their claims before the people and let the voters decide. J. R. Johnson was in Clanton Tuesday, looking after things. L. O. Dyer is sometimes heard from as stirring the voters up around his home at Stanton. R. F. Sims gets in some good licks among his neighbors in Beat 8 and elsewhere, and if J. C. Veazey is not talking much for himself, he has a number of good friends talking for him.

Out at his home on Mulberry, B. W., or as he is more familiary known, "Dick" Garner, serenely awaits the result of the primary, telling his friends he hopes they will vote for him for Tax Assessor, and over at Stanton William O. Perry attends to business and pushes his candidacy at the same time.

Here in Clanton the solitary candidate for County Treasurer, W. T. Callen, calmly goes on with his work, well knowing that as he has no opposition he is already assured of the nomination.

For Clerk of the Circuit Court the two candidates are quietly working. J. W. E. Gulledge is "stumping" around wherever he thinks he can do the most good, and Hugh Foshee smilingly goes on in his own way, greets one and all with a cheery word, and hopes for the best.

Capt. Reuben F. Kolb is gaining friends rapidly so I hear, but as my space is filled up, I will leave him and the candidates for Judge and the County Commissioners until next week.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Lily, March 5, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to Judge Adams. I have known him since 1870—thirty three years, and I know him to be an honorable Christian gentleman, and if elected at the primary in April will stump the county and use all honorable means to be elected. Brother Adams is a strong man politically, a good speaker and an orator, and will handle the contending party without gloves.

Now, I want to say a few words in regard to myself. I am an old Confederate soldier, gave four years of the best of my life to the lost cause; I am sixty years old. Since my hearing has got dull I read a great deal, a close calculator and thinker, I don't see how any man born and raised in Alabama can be a Republican, he simply don't know what Republicanism means. Go with me if you please across the Mason and Dixon line and I will show you what it means in those Republican States, it means mixed schools, eating with the negro at the hotel, sitting beside him in the passenger coach and beside the negro at the theatre.

God forbid that this glorious old Alabama should ever come to that. Now, brethren, I will leave you to think of what I have said in regard to Brother Adams. What I have said are facts, let us rally to him and let the Democrats be victorious in November. I notice in the last Banner Mr. Killgore said the Republicans would be there in November, he will find the Democrats there also. Now, Mr. Editor, please pardon my long letter, I haven't said all I wanted to, but I will hush.

OLD CONFEDERATE SOLDIER.

Billingsley, Ala., March 5, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me to endorse what Mr. Huckabee said in regard to the Hon. F. Loyd Tate. I have not the honor of personally knowing Mr. Tate, but as a juror at Prattville last fall, I was favorably impressed with him, both as a lawyer and as a man. While I do not know Mr. Holley, the opposing candidate, so I could not judge between them, yet it seems to me that according to the established precedent, and the endorsement of the lawyers and county officers of Autauga and Chilton and also the leading citizens of Elmore that the (Tate) should be entitled to the nomination.

Very respectfully,
W. E. PRICE.

Lily, March 7, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words. I see the names of A. C. Smith, S. M. Adams and E. B. Deason as candidates for Judge of Probate, and while I have nothing to say against either of the others, having known E. B. from childhood I feel disposed to say a few things for him. He is a son of B. F. Deason, who was well known by the older citizens of Chilton county. B. F. died when E. B. was about four or five years old. His older brothers soon left home and left him and his little brother, sisters and mother to fight the battle of life for themselves and to their credit I say they fought it well, and by that devoted mother's hard earnings and sacrifices she managed to send 'Lige to school a little, and by his motherwit, grit and gumption he has gotten a pretty fair primary education. I have heard his teachers say he was the quickest boy to learn they ever taught. 'Lige now has his mother and one sister to care for, he has deprived himself of the pleasures of life for their sake, he is caring for them and trying to build himself up too, and he will be to Chilton county what the people make him. There never was a man got very high at no time or place without the help of the people. 'Lige is trying to climb up and he has asked the people to help him. Now, is he worthy of our help? Certainly he is. He is right where he was born and raised and is as well known and has got as clean a record as any boy in the county. He has been in business for the county six years and has given perfect satisfaction so far as I know.

Now, shall we help our boys that are trying to help themselves, or shall we say to them stand back and let the fellow from the other county eat the cream of Chilton? I believe that on the 11th day of April the good people of Chilton will come to the polls and say to 'Lige with their votes we are going to help you up, not because Adams and Smith are not good men, but because right principle and justice demands it, the thing they both claim to advoc te.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space to say a word from Beat 10. Farmers are wanting to begin planting this warm weather. The stock law was knocked out last week. Politics are warming up. It seems that only three gentlemen want the Probate office so far. A. C. Smith will win in the April primary, Judge Adams will make a good run, though I don't think he will receive a large number of votes at any place, but I think he will receive a powerful scattering vote.

VOTER.

Cedar Springs.

The farmers of this section are preparing their land for a big crop of cotton, corn, cabbage, collards, cucumbers and peaches, plums, pears, pickles, potatoes, peanuts, peas and pumpkins.

The school at this place taught by Prof. J. T. Williams bids fair to be a success; it is small but interesting.

Mr. Arledge planted some corn last week, but we think it would be better in the crib.

It seems that we will have a good crop of politics this year.

Measles and whooping cough are still going on with great vigor in this country.

Log rolling, you never heard of anything like it before. Some days you could go to one every day in the country here. People are clearing lots of land and everybody will plant an abundance of cotton.

Notwithstanding so many great disadvantages, our school still has a large number every morning at roll call. The honor roll for Friday is as follows: Fay Hicks 99; A. C. Maness 99; Bonnie Roberts 98½; Fanny Hicks 98½; Fanny Johnson, I. M. Hicks, Bud Clenner, Grover Merchant, Armour Woolley, Gertrude Woolley, Wilder Shoults, Kate Latham, Eddy Ellis, Willie Walker, Nora Wallace, John Hicks, George Woolley and Rosa Ellis. The following passed the examination in history: Fay Hicks 99, Grover Merchant, Eddy Ellis and Fanny Johnson. Three in advanced class made 100 each in review examination in advanced grammar—John Hicks, George Woolley and Fanny Hicks. Miss Fanny Hicks won the prize on the neatest and most accurate copy book handed in. Her work was graded 100. It was a most beautiful piece of work. John Hicks was marked second with a grade of 99. The 21 copy books handed in to the teacher were all written with pen and ink and were remarkably well done. Each one received a present from the teacher. Next examination is in agriculture. School closes April 8th.

Wadsworth.

We can't get to work much more than one half of the time, for the candidates are so thick we can't plow but a round or two till another comes driving up. I heard a lady say, the other day, she was afraid to throw her dish water out for fear she might scald one. The farmers are going ahead with their work intent on a big cotton crop; but I say brother farmer, plant more corn, peas, goobers; raise more hogs and stop so much meat buying.

We have several cases of measles in this community.

We are glad to hear of Mrs. Wadsworth improving so nicely after a long twelve month's spell.

We are glad to see Mrs. Milam with such a smile after her husband's return from a trip to Columbus, Ga.

Good luck to the Banner and its readers.

GRAND LAMA DIES YOUNG.

The Mysterious Wretch Who Nominally Governs Tibet.

There is not one person in a hundred in this country who knows who or what the Grand Lama is, although everybody has been talking in very guarded phrases about him since all the hubbub was caused a few days ago respecting the approaching British advance on Tibet, where this personage has his headquarters. The Grand Lama—or Grand Dalai Lama, to give him his full title—is a man, or rather a boy, living in the sacred city of Lhasa, who is generally regarded as an incarnation of Buddha, and inasmuch as the government of Tibet is purely religious, the Grand Lama is the head of it, and nominally the equivalent to the monarch.

The latter reservation has to be made because the real administrator is a person bearing the title of the Gyalpo, in whose hands the Grand Lama appears to be little more than a useful tool. The Grand Lama always dies young, and nobody knows exactly how except this Gyalpo, who could probably write a few very good chapters of Tibetian history concerning the coming and going of the successive Grand Lamas, who rarely have a reign of more than 12 years. It is the Buddhist tradition that they die of a mysterious disease, and in due course the Gyalpo says they have died. But there is always a Grand Lama and so at the same time he announces that the spirit has descended upon a little child, who will be found in a certain family in a certain house, and whose appearance he describes. The people hurry there, and sure enough there is that same little child, who is carried off to the palace and becomes the new Grand Lama.

The present unfortunate young creature who sits in Buddhist authority over the people of Lhasa has never been seen by any Europeans, least of all by any Englishman, although leading articles are being written about him every day saying what he will do and what he will not, as if he were a grown-up and authoritative monarch. When the Grand Lama was last seen by any foreigner, and that is some years ago, he was described as a child of about eight years of age, of bright and fair complexion, rosy cheeks, and large and lustrous eyes. But, though so very juvenile, he was emaciated, and looked already to be quite tired of life. He was sitting upon a peat altar, which was something like an Oriental throne in appearance, and was borne by lions carved in wood. He was a study in yellow. A yellow cloak enveloped his body, and a yellow hat of mitre shape was upon his head. He sat cross legged, and when any visitors approached he put his palms together as a sign of blessing. Surely this is the strangest enemy—if enemy we must regard him—that the British nation ever had.—Men and Women.

He Learned Something.

General Manager Hays of the Grand Trunk is of the opinion that something may be learned from every person one meets. In support of this he relates an adventure which recently occurred to him. He was traveling alone between two small Canadian towns on a local where there were no Pullmans, and happened to get into a seat, the other half of which was occupied by an old farmer. The verdant one made several overtures at conversation, to which Mr. Hays failed to respond readily.

"Be you goin' fur?" questioned the of the whiskers.

"Not very," was the curt response.

"Where be you going'?" persisted his interlocutor.

Mr. Hays enlightened him, and the other remained silent until the conductor had passed through the car and collected fares. The general manager, deep in thought, abstractedly shoved up his pass, and the conductor, after glancing at the other occupant of the seat, went on down the aisle.

Suddenly, without any preliminary the old farmer turned to Mr. Hays.

"See here," he said, "I want to put you on to something. If you had just taken off your hat and coat as I did and looked kind of far away when the feller came through, he wouldn't have asked you for no ticket. That's right," he added, noting a look of incredulity on Mr. Hays's face; "that's right. I've been traveling up and down on this here road for goin' on 10 years now, and I've never been asked for a cent yet!"—Canadian Magazine.

Not Exclusive.

The reporter was indignant at having been kept waiting.

"You tell me Mr. Bigsome isn't in?" he said. "You're a liar!"

"Am I?" said the dignified and imperturbable butler. "Well, young man, you haven't any scoop on that."—Washington Star.

It is stated in La Nature that the body of a Tyrolese guide who fell into a crevasse on the glacier of Grossvenediger, in the Austrian Alps, thirty years ago, has been found in a remarketable state of preservation at the foot of the glacier.

ALDERMAN KILLED

By Former Officer on the City's Force

At Ensley, Alderman D. H. White was shot and fatally wounded by ex-Police Officer Glenn Tetherow. A bullet from a 45-caliber revolver pierced his right lung.

The assailant, Glenn Tetherow, one of the best known citizens of Ensley, was arrested as soon as the shooting was over.

While it is not positively known it is believed that the shooting grew out of the reduction of the police force that the city council is advocating. Tetherow is himself an ex-policeman, and until recently had two brothers on the force, one of whom arrested him in this instance. The city council recently made certain reductions in the force, and J. R. Tetherow was not re-elected, and W. B. Tetherow, formerly night captain, was reduced to a patrolman when his office was abolished. Alderman White, it is thought, was considered by Tetherow as being instrumental in the reduction, which turned one of his brothers adrift and reduced the rank of the other, and on this account, it is charged, he made the attack.

KILLED BY FALLING SLATE.

John T. Brady, a miner of Blossburg, and an ex-alderman of Pinckney City, was the victim of an accident of which he died in agony. His head was crushed by falling slate in a room in the Blossburg coal mine. Mr. Brady was in the room cleaning it out at the time the accident occurred. Companions in adjoining rooms heard a loud noise and rushed into his room in time to see him lying on the floor buried in slate from the roof.

The following Alabamians will sail on the Grosse Kurfurst from New York March 8th to attend the world's Sunday school convention to be held in the city of Jerusalem April 18th to 20th: Judge Joseph Carthel, of Montgomery; A. C. Harte, of Mobile; the Rev. E. L. Hill, of Eufaula; W. E. Pettus, of Huntsville; J. D. Pittman, of Evergreen; Miss Stewart, of Mobile; and the Rev. J. L. Thompson, of Bessemer.

IT RESULTED FATALLY.

Little Boy Died From Little Girl's Shooting.

Charles D. Kopman, the little boy who was shot some weeks ago by his little girl playmate, died Friday night.

He was playing in the yard of his parents' residence in North Birmingham, with the daughter of a neighbor. The children had a rifle, which was thought to be empty. The little girl poked it through the fence and playfully pulled the trigger. A shot followed and young Kopman fell with a bullet in the abdomen. It was not thought at the time that he was fatally injured and physicians had hope for his life. Attending physicians said that death was the result of exhaustion more than a direct consequence of the wound.

ANOTHER MURDER IN ENSLEY

Brought About by Dispute as to Who Should Pay for the Drinks.

Dave Laws shot and fatally wounded Neil Mullin Saturday night in a row. The difficulty, it is stated, was about the payment for beer purchased by Mullin.

According to witnesses, Mullin, Laws and others were drinking together. Mullin started out without offering to pay the bartender. He was called back. Laws is alleged to have passed behind the counter and procured a revolver. He pointed the weapon point blank at Mullin and fired twice. One of the bullets took effect in Mullin's arm and the other in the back, piercing the kidneys.

Birmingham's council adopted an ordinance authorizing an election to be held on April 11th for the qualified voters of the city to decide whether or not bonds to the amount of $200,000 shall be issued for the purpose of "constructing public school houses and buildings."

Bibb county's grand jury returned 63 indictments.

Mystery surrounds the robbery Tuesday night of James M. Crooke, a Montgomery photographer, who was relieved, he says, of $2,060 by six men who drugged him, bound and gagged him in order to carry out their plans. Crooke was found insensible and helpless on the floor of his office, lying on his back, his hands tied behind him and a note on his breast which is supposed to have been written by one of the robbers.

It is reported that A. J. Dine, a painter of Montgomery, called on God to strike him speechless if he ever used a certain drug again, and on yielding to the temptation his tongue was paralyzed.

Roland T. Shugart, the young attorney who is charged with killing Andrew Banholzer, late foreman of the Birmingham Machine and Foundry company, in the Metropolitan bar on the night of January 20th, was released on bond in the sum of $10,000.

Governor Jelks has appointed Hon. Samuel D. Weakly, of Birmingham, as special associate justice of the supreme court to hear and determine the constitutionality of the oil tag tax law.

A Lively Suitor.

Charley Reed, foreman for Brewer & Jones, contractors for Seaboard Air Line work between Birmingham and Atlanta, accidentally shot himself in the leg Sunday night. The bullet struck the thigh bone, coming out between the knee and the thigh. After coming out it struck the floor, bounced upward and struck another man in the abdomen. The ball did not penetrate the skin, but the man thought he was shot.

Bobby Walthour, the champion bicycle rider of the world, has sailed for Europe, where he will meet all comers at middle distances. Walthour holds the world's record for a mile, 1:06.

Detected in Time.

Albert Driscoll and J. E. Russell are confined in the Montgomery jail awaiting trial on a charge of safe blowing. While in jail the two have been permitted to take exercise in the corridors during the day, being confined in their cells at night. Suspicious actions of the men caused the jailer to make investigation of the windows along the corridor Sunday and he found that they had already sawed the bars so nearly through that it would have required but a few moments more for them to work their way to freedom. How the men secured the saws is a mystery to the authorities.

County Officers Indicted.

The circuit court grand jury of Clay county returned bills of indictment against Sheriff W. D. Mayo and the board of county commissioners. The sheriff was indicted for the condition of his books, and the commissioners for the condition of the county jail and the county poor house. The removal of the county poor house keeper was also recommended. It is alleged that upon examining the books of Sheriff Mayo the examiner of public accounts found that he was due the state and county a small amount, and that he has not made the proper settlement of the claim.

Army Inspection.

The adjutant general's office has been notified that Captain A. S. Morgan, of the artillery corps of the United States, would inspect the companies of the Alabama national guard under the terms of the Dick bill for the war department. The inspection begins March 21st at Phenix City.

This inspection is separate and distinct from the one ordered by Governor Jelks for the third infantry.

ANTHRACITE

May Have Been Discovered Near Fort Payne.

Prospectors have been examining the coal vein which has been discovered about four miles west of Fort Payne. It is thought to be anthracite or cannel coal. This coal was discovered while mining a very fine bed of fire clay. It is thought to be a very valuable find.

ENGINEER CRUSHED UNDER HIS MACHINE.

Fred Carlise, an engineer for the Sloss-Sheffield company, was crushed to death under his engine at Russellville. It seems that the engine turned over and that Mr. Carlisle was caught under it. His head was crushed and he was badly scalded by the hot water and steam. Death was almost instantaneous.

A Birmingham judge, to punish boys for snowballing during the recent heavy fall of the beautiful, had them learn the Ten Commandments and repeat them in court.

The Supreme Court of Alabama

(By PERCY CLARK.)

The last legislature increased the number of associate justices from four to six. The supreme court of Alabama has always taken high rank, much above the average. Its opinions have been accepted as able expressions of many intricate questions of law. Always the bench has been occupied by able, pure men, above any taint of partisanship. It is well; for the supreme bench is in many respects the conservator of the rights and liberties of the people. While it cannot make laws, it can nullify laws that are unconstitutional and which infringe on the reserved rights of the people.

The present court is composed of Chief Justice McClellan, Justices Haralson, Tyson, Dowdell and Sharpe.

Mr. Justice Haralson, Mr. Justice Tyson and Mr. Justice Dowdell are candidates for their present positions. They are entitled to an endorsement at the polls in April by the people. Their records have been of the highest; their characters are unimpeachable; their ability and fitness is unquestioned.

Mr. Justice Sharpe declines to be a candidate, much to the regret of the legal profession.

Thomas Nicholas McClellan.

Mr. Chief Justice McClellan is a native of Limestone county, Ala. He served as justice of the supreme court from 1889 to 1898 when he was elected chief justice. He is justly regarded by the profession as one of the ablest jurists that ever sat on the supreme bench of Alabama. He is a candidate for his present position and is without opposition.

Jonathan Haralson.

Mr. Justice Haralson was born in Lowndes county, Alabama. He is an alumnus of the University of Alabama and received his legal training in part at the University of Louisiana, taking the degree of L. B. in that institution. For many years he practiced law in Selma, being associated with the late Wm. M. Brooks.

On the recommendation of the bar of Selma he was appointed by Governor Geo. S. Houston, Judge of the City Court of Selma, a court of law and equity, which place he filled for fifteen years; from this bench he was elected in 1892 to the supreme court as associate justice and was re-elected in 1898.

Judge Haralson has occupied the most distinguished of positions in the Baptist church. He was president of the Alabama Baptist State convention for eighteen years, and was for ten consecutive years thereafter, president of the Southern Baptist convention.

He is a Mason and an Odd Fellow.

Judge Haralson has never ceased to love the farm, where he began his career; all the years of his life he has been identified therewith. He now has farming interests in the Black belt.

John Russell Tyson.

Mr. Justice Tyson was born in Lowndes county, Alabama, November 28, 1856. He attended the common schools, and afterwards Howard college, where, in 1877, he graduated with honors taking with him the degree of A. B. He then studied law at Washington and Lee University, of Virginia, and there took the degree of L. B. Immediately thereafter he began the practice of law at Hayneville, Lowndes county.

Judge Tyson was elected to the legislature from Lowndes county in 1880 and at once came to the front as a man of strong characteristics, with the force of a logical mind, and strong reasoning powers. He moved to Montgomery and as a member of the firm of Lomax & Tyson added to his well deserved reputation of a lawyer of ability and great popularity, and was elected president of the city council. It was as judge of the Second judicial circuit that Judge Tyson won high encomiums for his fairness in his rulings, and his elevation to the supreme bench in 1898 was a natural sequence. He is noted for his learning and industry, and has proven himself a valuable member of the highest court in Alabama. He has farming interests in Lowndes. He is a member of the Baptist church, and a Knight of Pythias.

James Render Dowdell.

Mr. Justice Dowdell was born in Chambers county, April 2, 1847, in which county he now resides. He was educated at the University of Alabama and at Auburn; he graduated from the latter school in 1867, after which he taught school, studying law during the time, until 1870 when he was admitted to the bar. He began his public career as circuit solicitor in 1876, serving four years; and was thereafter appointed judge of the Fifth judicial circuit, in which position he achieved distinction, so that he was readily chosen chancellor of the Northeastern chancery division.

Judge Dowdell became associate judge of the supreme court in 1898 and is therefore serving his first term. When he offered for the position, he had the solid support of every county he had served as solicitor, circuit judge and chancellor; he had never sought a second term for either of these offices, although urged to do so.

He has served as a trustee of Auburn, and was offered the position of dean of the law school of the University of Alabama.

He is a member of the Methodist church, a Mason and a Knight of Pythias.

Judge Dowdell has been engaged in farming continuously from his youth up, and is now interested in farming.

Over half a million tons of Alabama coal found a market in New Orleans, La., during the past winter because of the famine in Pittsburg coal. At one time a big Alabama concern had 831 cars of coal in transit between Birmingham and New Orleans. The movement got so heavy that it was impossible to send the supply around by Greenville and the river barges. During the month of December one local concern received 32,000 tons of Alabama coal by rail and 36,000 tons by river.

The town of Skaguay, Alaska, is in peculiar municipal straits, as all the early town records have disappeared along with the files of the newspapers. This is a particularly perplexing situation since it is impossible to tell what franchises have been granted or what privileges the franchises contained. The disappearance of these records is mysterious. It is generally recognized, however that it might be to the advantage of certain utility companies operating in Skaguay if the recorded past were blotted out.

LATEST WAR NEWS

Diplomatic circles are discussing a nice question of neutrality which will arise when the Russian Baltic fleet starts for the far east, which is expected to occur early in the summer. The fleet will be accompanied by colliers, and it is understood that the French government will raise no objection to the fleet coaling in French ports from its own ships. After the fleet passes Jibutil (French Somaliland) there are no ports until the fleet reaches Saigon, French Indo-China, and it undoubtedly will put in at an Indian or Ceylon port for more coal.

A diplomat who expressed an opinion on the question pointed out that belligerent ships could properly demand at a neutral port enough coal to enable them to reach the nearest home port, and that in this case the nearest home port was Port Arthur.

It is said that during the past few years all the available guns and war material which it was possible to send over the single line of the Trans-Siberian railroad, have been used for the strengthening of Port Arthur, and points in Manchuria, leaving Vladivostock with the old type guns of short range. It is reported that Vladivostock is illy supplied with provisions.

It is believed that the Japanese are now between the Russian cruiser squadron and Vladivostock.

It is pointed out that if this is true the Russian vessels are in a critical position, since they must run the gantlet of the Japanese squadron off Vladivostock, or the Japanese squadron off Port Arthur, before reaching a Russian port.

Dispatches from Tokio speak of the sacrifices being made by the Japanese nation. It is said that the mikado is abandoning all luxuries, the court is following his example and all are going to live abstemiously until the war is ended.

At a general meeting of the Red Cross it was reported that 30,000 cots, $700,000 worth of bread and $20,000 worth of meat have been prepared for shipment. The funds available for Red Cross work amounted to $3,000,000.

It is reported that the Russian authorities have been approached indirectly by American shipping firms desiring to fit out privateers to prey on Japanese commerce, but that they met with no encouragement.

It takes the wages of 15,000,000 men to pay the daily cost of the war between Japan and Russia—a war confined within a radius of 1,000 miles.

Fatal Family Row.

From Valden, Miss., comes the information that in a fight between Aaron Stewart and son on one side, and W. W. Hill and two sons on the other, the Stewarts shot and killed W. W. Hill and his son, John Hill, and seriously wounded Hunter Hill. The weapons used were 38-caliber pistols. The difficulty arose in a dispute over a boundary line. The parties were neighbors.

A Jewish Colony.

A Jewish colony is being established at Creola, on the line of the Southern railway, near Mobile, and it is thought that at least three hundred will be located there and engage in farming. For the most part the settlers are coming from the large cities. The agent of the colony says a large number of Russian Jews will be brought to the colony soon.

An experimental farm will be established on the property recently purchased by the Presbyterian Orphans' home at Talladega. Money has been appropriated for this purpose by the United States government.

Land and Industrial Agent W. L. Henderson, of the Southern railway, is now engaged in conducting through the state Charles F. Smith and J. B. Finster, well known promoters of New York. These gentlemen contemplate securing about 150,000 acres of land in Alabama for colonization purposes.

Hares have no eyelids.

Little Girl Burned to Death.

Little eight-year-old Elberta Terry, daughter of a section foreman for the Southern railway, was burned to death while trying to resuscitate a fire with kerosene at Anniston. The can exploded, setting her clothing on fire, and before the flames could be subdued burns were sustained that ended the little girl's life in a short time.

It is reported the Baxter company will soon resume business. It is expected that they will pay 100 cents on the dollar.

There seems to be a popular misapprehension regarding the sales of popular novels. It is stated on good authority that "David Harum" still leads the list with 727,000 copies sold. Five books are credited with sales of 400,000 copies, six with 200,000, and thirteen others with more than 100,000. Within the past five years it is estimated that 7,500 novels have been issued in the United States and yet the percentage of books which command a sale of more than 10,000 copies is painfully small.

The Railroads Won.

Mississippi's revenue agent, Adams, received a repulse in the supreme court in the suits brought by him against the Gulf and Ship Island and Yazoo Valley roads to collect a privilege tax of $10 per mile authorized by the legislative act of 1898, chapter 66, on railroads claiming exemption from supervision by the railroad commission on maximum and minimum freight rates.

The agent's declaration failed to aver that the railroad commission had classified these roads into first, second, third and narrow gauge classes as required by the legislative act, and in the agreed state of facts submitted to the supreme court it was admitted that this omission had been made. Chief Justice Whitfield held that this was fatal error, reversed the case, and sustained the demurrer, and dismissed the suit. The agent must now have the roads classified before new suits can be entered. About $25,000 in taxes is involved.

The Bessemer, Ala., soil pipe works, which manufactures sanitary pipe, castings and fittings, has just received from Milwaukee, Wis., an order for eight car loads of its product, and as the plant has a larger part of the order in stock, shipment will be made at once. This is an order amounting to over three hundred tons of pipe, or about the work of three days to manufacture.

There is some prospect of the Gurley and Paint Rock Valley railroad being built. As projected it runs from Gurley, on the Southern railroad, to Winchester, Tenn., on the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, traversing one of the richest mineral and timber sections of the south.

It is announced that furnace No. 1, at Thomas, will be ready for the torch in about two weeks or a little later. It is intended to start this furnace immediately after it has been dried out.

At Indianapolis the joint conference between the coal miners and operators adjourned Saturday without reaching an agreement as to the scale of wages for the year commencing April 1st.

An addition built to the plant of the Standard Stove works at Fort Payne is about complete. This will enable them to put on about fifteen new molders and other men in proportion.

In a decision rendered in the state supreme court at Jefferson City, Mo., Judge Fox declared the eight-hour law for miners working underground, passed in 1901, constitutional and valid.

It is announced that H. C. Frick, the Pittsburg steel magnate, will soon erect an enormous hotel in that city.

Many coal mines in Indian Territory have shut down, owing to lack of demand for coal.

Furnace No. 1 at Thomas will soon be started.

GROFF MOTION OVERRULED.

Convicted Postal Grafter Must Serve Two Years and Pay Heavy Fine.

At Washington, Saturday, Justice Pritchard overruled the motion of Samuel A. Groff, one of the recently convicted men of the postal trial, and sentenced him to two years in the Moundville penitentiary and to pay a fine of $10,000, the sentence to begin on arrival at the penitentiary. Groff immediately furnished bond for $20,000 pending an appeal.

REPORT ON CLERKS

Submitted by Assistant Postmaster General Bristow

The long expected report of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow on the relations of members of congress with the postoffice department in connection with the leasing of premises to the department and the procurement of additional clerks in the various postoffices throughout the country and of the increased rentals was made public Monday.

The names of more than a hundred and fifty members of congress whose requests for additional clerk hire in various postoffices were granted by George W. Beavers, late superintendent of salaries and allowances, although in excess of the amounts to which the offices were entitled under the rules of the department and mentioned in the exhibits.

The fault is almost entirely with the postoffice department, which is shown to have allowed clerk hire wherever enough influence was brought to bear. In not a few instances the report shows that members have been refused the clerk hire by the department once, twice and often three times. These members would try again and the department would then reverse itself and finally accede to the member's demands.

No reference is made to any of the members of the Alabama delegation in requests and importunities for clerk hire. With regard to leases and rent for buildings several of them made requests.

A 30-Day February.

During February voyagers upon the Pacific were treated to a calendrical monstrosity without parallel in the century. While to some the month contained but 28 days it exceeded all previous efforts and recorded thirty complete days.

To the former the interval between Februaries of twenty-nine days has been twelve years. To the last 1904 will go down in history with the record of 367 days.
